Mellon and Coolidge Back Andrews Against Foes

TREASURY LEADER WILL NOT HEED ATTACKS OF DRY

Mellon Decides To Defend Prohi Director Regardless of Criticisms Over Beer Testimony.

M'KELLAR CALLS FOR HIS REMOVAL

Anti-Saloon League Officials Hold Conference Over Situation But Fail to Reach Decision.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, April 17.—In the face of renewed demands for removal of General Lincoln C. Andrews, dry enforcement chief, because of his testimony before the senate subcommittee, the treasury made it known tonight that the general will not lose his "job."

While no statement was issued it was learned that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is determined to back his enforcement chief to the limit and has no intention of firing him simply because of demands on the part of dry congressmen and members of reform organizations.

Immediately before Assistant Secretary Andrews' departure for New York where he went yesterday he held a short conference with Secretary Mellon. Previous to that, Mr. Mellon had conferred with the president. Later officials of the white house were authority for the statement that the president did not think it necessary to discipline General Andrews.

Free Hand for Andrews.

Both the president and Secretary Mellon, who is ultimately responsible for enforcement, have given General Andrews a free hand in his endeavors to make the nation dry.

At both the white house and the treasury department it was said today that there is no evidence to prove that the enforcement chief has failed to do his best to enforce the law.

In spite of the attitude of the administration, Washington drys are still hotly debating the question of whether to demand bringing pressure on the white house to remove the general. The Anti-Saloon league committee, composed of F. Scott McBride, national superintendent of the league; Bishop James Cannon, Jr., chairman of the legislative committee, and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel and spokesman for the drys, is still undecided as to what action to take.

McKellar Demands Removal.

The latest demand for the removal of General Andrews came today from Capitol Hill. Senator McKellar, democrat, of Tennessee, in a signed statement criticizing the administration of the prohibition laws by the treasury department, asserted that Mr. Andrews should be fired and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon relieved of the duty of enforcing the Volstead act.

"The testimony given by Mr. Andrews before the senate committee proves," Mr. McKellar said, "that the present enforcement authorities are not in sympathy with the law and are not trying to enforce it.

"The administration of the liquor laws should be taken out of the hands of Secretary Mellon but we can't possibly expect that to be done unless we have a democratic congress."

Prohibition Law Warmly Defended By Veteran Coach

GOVERNOR WALKER SAYS BOND CAUSE SHALL CARRY ON

Upon Signing Last Bills Passed by Legislature Executive Issues Statement.

Despite failures of the extra session of the late Georgia general assembly "to permit the people to vote upon issuance of bonds in order that the state might build a system of highways and also bring state educational conditions up to the standard it should attain," measures were passed which "will prove historic in general benefit to the state," according to a statement given out by Governor Clifford Walker Saturday, after he had concluded signing the last bills passed.

After expressin disappointment at the failure of the legislature "to take advantage of its opportunity magnificently to enhance the progress of the state," the governor pointed out enactment of the school equalization act and to the act to allow popular vote on the constitutional amendment that would give the state the right to construct and maintain a state system of highways as two outstanding enactments to the credit of the session. This amendment, if ratified by the people, the govern declared Saturday, would "give the state the right to create a real state highway system and make it possible for the next legislature to enact adequate legislation for provisions to construct the system, with the state as the unit."

Patchwork Laws Now.

"Our present laws," the governor pointed out, "permit only a patchwork system, which could not legally be changed now, because our constitution gives only the counties the right to lay out and construct public roads."

In his statement the governor declares that he will not take part in any political race this summer, but, beginning with the bridge opening at Lumber City next Thursday, he expects to continue the campaign for better roads and better schools until his term of office expires, "with the confident belief that the next legislature will complete the program."

The governor lists as the third achievement of importance at the session the act providing for compilation of vital statistics in Georgia. Two corporation bills, the crop loan bill, the amendment to increase the governor's borrowing power to provide prompt payment of school teachers, and minor educational bills are also listed as important matters settled.

Passage of the Confederate pension bill, which "saved the financial honor of the state from issuance of paper scrip of doubtful value" met the immediate object of the session, the governor points out, adding that the amended inheritance tax laws and

Alonzo Stagg Declares There Is Less Drinking Among Students Than Before Dry Statute.

LAW SAFEGUARDS YOUTH, HE CLAIMS

Former Attorney General of Ontario Asserts Legalization of Beer Has Been Failure.

Washington, April 17.—A veteran football coach, who has put many young men through the rigorous drill of the gridiron, closed the second week of the prohibition investigation at the capitol with a straightforward appeal for retention of the law as a safeguard for the youth of the country.

A. Alonzo Stagg, athletic director at the University of Chicago, followed two other college officials who urged that prohibition be continued.

The college leaders who appeared in defense of prohibition presented a picture slightly different from the jazz-mad, flask-toting, flaming youth which has been drawn by other witnesses before the special senate committee, though admitting very frankly that there is drinking and excessive drinking by some.

Less Student Drinking.

The younger generation is not being demoralized by prohibition, there is less drinking among college students now than before the Volstead law became effective. Change of the law, in the face of the enlarged freedom of boys and girls, would be almost disastrous. This was the burden of the testimony.

Observers at the hearing were most impressed, perhaps, by the testimony of the football coach, whose name is known to nearly every college man in America. He spoke in plain language, resorting frequently to the forceful speech of the sport world in an appeal for "fair play."

He was preceded by Prof. Irving Fisher, economist of Yale university, and by Walter F. Willcox, professor of economics at Cornell university, representing the universities. Before they appeared, the committee heard from W. E. Raney, former attorney general of Ontario province in Canada, who declared that legalization of 4.4

AGED MAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY TRAIN

A. B. McCorkle Mangled Under Wheels of Fast L. & N. Passenger; Four Hurt by Autos.

Struck by an outbound L & N. passenger train at Tenth street and Bradley avenue, A. B. McCorkle, age 72, of 807 Marietta street, was fatally injured late Saturday afternoon. Death resulted five hours later at Grady hospital.

McCorkle's right l : was cut off and he suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. Nothing was found in his clothing that furnished a clew as to his identity and for several hours police were unable to locate relatives.

Alarmed by the absence of his father, A. F. McCorkle, a son, started a search and arrived at the hospital a few minutes before the victim died.

After the accident the train was brought to a stop and the crew telephoned for the ambulance of Harry G. Poole. A record run was made to Grady, where McCorkle was placed on the operating table. He is survived by his wife, a son and five grandchildren. Funeral arrangements had not been completed Saturday night by Harry G. Poole in charge.

Eugene Hendrix, nine-year-old newsboy, of 42 Doane street, was cut about the head Saturday afternoon when

ATLANTA IS SEEN AS KEY TO SKIES BY AIR PIONEERS

Leader in Commercial Aviation Joins City Officials in Air Field Plans.

LEADERS SURVEY LOCAL CONDITIONS

Air Mail Route to Miami Seen as Beginning of System of Which Atlanta Will Be Hub.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Visualizing Atlanta as a future hub of air lines and promising additions to be made to the air mail service to be inaugurated from Atlanta to Miami on June 1 as rapidly as conditions will permit, Major Reed M. Chambers, president and chief of the Florida Airways corporation, Saturday arrived in Atlanta from Tampa, temporary headquarters of the concern.

Major Chambers is here to survey Candler field, Atlanta's present air port. He is en route to Detroit and other cities to hold conferences on the new southern venture, which, it is said, is destined to make Atlanta a key air city of the south and to inaugurate a new system of commercial transportation.

Major Chambers is conferring with V. E. Chenea here, special representative of his company, who has been in Atlanta for the past several days arranging details of the new air line from Atlanta southward. He was honor guest Saturday afternoon of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon meeting and met civic leaders, members of city council, Mayor Walter A. Sims and members of the Fulton county commission.

"Five years ago, when the present transcontinental air route was mapped out, I stated that Atlanta, the logical converging point of all logical air traffic east of the Mississippi, was destined to be the southern air port city of the United States," Major Chambers said. "I still believe that this place is the logical center of air transportation operations of the entire country. The south is ideally situated on account of her terrain, weather conditions and altitude for this place as the concentration point, and Atlanta on account of her railway facilities is the foremost bidder of the south for leadership in this field.

"If the cross-country route which now extends from New York to San Francisco were rerouted through Atlanta, New Orleans, Houston and then westward to San Francisco, it would mean only a loss of about two hours' flying time, and would eliminate the 14,000 foot climb now required to scale the Rockies. This is the logi-

Peggy Intends To Wed Stan Despite Wife

Does Not Believe Report Comstock's Divorce Was Illegal.

New York, April 17.—(AP)—Peggy Hopkins Joyce, whose latest marriage was forecast recently in the announcement of her engagement to Stanford E. Comstock, real estate operator arrived today from Florida and expressed her determination to wed Comstock despite reports from his former wife that he is not legally divorced.

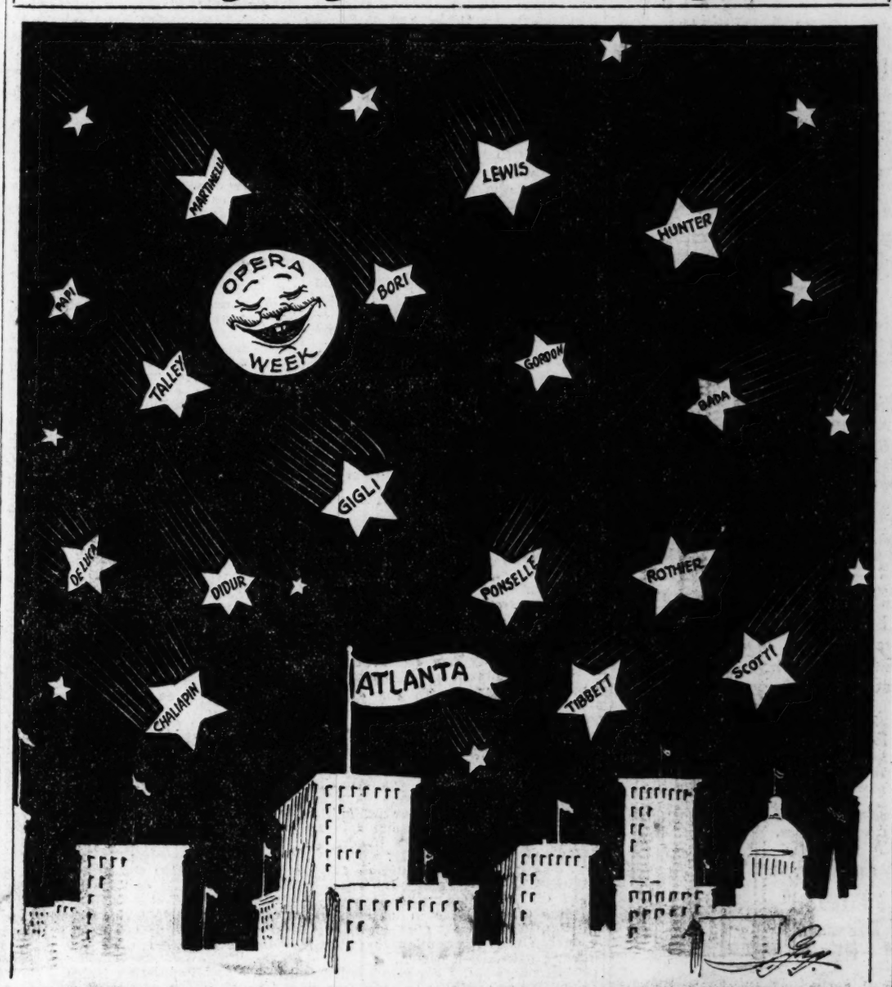

"It's just sour grapes. Ex-wives always act that way," Miss Joyce told reporters. Adding that she spoke from experience. When asked if Comstock would be her fifth or sixth husband, Miss Joyce said that she really did not know.

"I honestly don't remember how many times I've been married. He will be either the fourth, fifth or sixth," she said.

Miss Joyce announced that she would probably be married immediately upon her return from Europe, where she is going to complete a motion picture contract, two months hence.

Comstock, who made the trip from Florida on the same ship, said that he would continue to care for his nine-year-old adopted son. Miss Joyce added that she would mother the youth.

TILSON PREDICTS PASSAGE OF RIVER AND HARBORS BILL

House Leaders To Make Effort To Harmonize Lehlbach Bill With Administration Program.

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—Passage of a general rivers and harbors bill at the present session was predicted today by Representative Tilson, the republican house leader, after a visit to the white house.

He also indicated an effort would be made by house leaders to revise the Lehlbach bill to increase the annuities of retired government employes so it would harmonize with the administration's financial program, and to taper down other proposed increases in pensions.

The republican leader made it clear that President Coolidge had not specifically endorsed the $36,000,000 rivers and harbors bill pending in the house but did favor continuation of the inland waterways development program.

One of the stumbling blocks to early house action on the rivers and harbors measure is a dispute over some of its important provisions Mr. Tilson said there was a prospect of a compromise on the All-American Canal project and he believed difficulties over the Illinois river development might be adjusted if it was made clear that water diversion from Lake Michigan would not be increased.

Opponents of these two projects have been holding up the bill, contending they were of such magnitude as to warrant their consideration in separate measures rather than in a general bill.

JONES BROTHERS ARE DENIED BAIL IN LIQUOR CASE

Baltimore, Md., April 17.—(AP)—Neufield and Winfield Jones, formerly of Georgia, convicted of conspiracy to illegally divert government alcohol in connection with the Maryland Drug and Chemical company here, have been denied bail pending supreme court review of their case. They are in Baltimore city jail with two-year sentences in Atlanta penitentiary awaiting them.

Fair Weather During Opera Week Forecast

Balmy, Sunny Southland Will Be Enjoyed by Visitors to City.

April showers will not interfere with milady's plans for display of finery during grand opera week and opera stars who make their first trip to Atlanta will find a real balmy, sunny south.

Fair weather is predicted for today by C. F. Von Herrmann, official in charge of the Atlanta weather bureau. No rain is in sight and balmy weather is predicted for the southeast during the entire week.

Those who desire to come to Atlanta from distant points will not encounter muddy highways. Roads generally are good, according to reports, and this, too, is expected to boost opera crowds and stars of the music world can enjoy outings in the "great open spaces" between performances.

Monday will be somewhat warmer than today, according to the prediction, and temperatures for the week will range from 55 to 75 degrees daily. Saturday's maximum was 72 degrees and lowest 52.

Previous weather records prove that clear days generally have been experienced on opera weeks.

Washington predictions late Saturday however were that light showers may fall this afternoon, but Monday will dawn fair.

Temperatures Saturday reached 78 degrees for the maximum, and dropped to 50 late in the day for the minimum.

FLORIDA MAN BIDS WIFE FAREWELL, THEN KILLS SELF

Jacksonville, Fla., April 17.—(AP)—Charles Church, 28, bid his wife goodbye here this morning, declaring he "was going to end it all," and then shot himself fatally. Mrs. Church, thinking her husband was joking, stepped out of the room, heard the shot, and returned to find him lying across the bed with a bullet wound in his head, she reported to police. Church died an hour and a half later at the county hospital.

Three policemen, speeding to the scene of the shooting, were injured when the car in which they were riding collided with another machine. Two occupants of the other car were slightly injured.

Church had been in ill health for several years, friends said.

ATLANTA MAY GET WOODMEN ORDER'S NATIONAL OFFICES

$125,000,000 Reserve Assets, 500 Employees and Auxiliary Orders May Come to City.

Omaha, Neb., April 17.—(Special.) Atlanta may become the headquarters of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance company, the largest fraternal insurance company of the country, whose headquarters have been in Omaha since the company was organized. With the headquarters will go the $125,000,000 reserve assets of the company and 500 employees. Also the headquarters of the Woodman Circle and Woodman Accident association, auxiliary organizations, will follow the parent concern, but Atlanta will have to fight if it gets the plum. A number of other cities are after it and Omaha will not give up the big organization without a fight.

W. A. Fraser, sovereign commander of the Woodmen, today announced the creation of a special committee on new location and said this committee will visit a number of cities which are making efforts to get the headquarters. One city, Mr. Fraser said, has offered the use of a headquarters building.

Several months ago the Woodmen sold its 18-story office building in Omaha and is now in rented quarters.

Officials of the local council of Woodmen of the World said Saturday night that the Atlanta office had written to Omaha, Neb., seeking information concerning the rumors of removal of headquarters, but no word had been received in reply.

The Empire State Council, No. 7, of this city has more than 1,500 members, M. U. Smith, clerk stated. Herbert B. Kennedy is commander, and T. L. Bennett is state manager.

It is rumored here that Chicago also is making a strong bid for headquarters, but it is said W. A. Fraser, sovereign commander, favors some city in the southern states.

POLISH OFFICIAL AWAITING TRIAL KILLED IN WARSAW

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Warsaw, April 17.—Hubert Lind, former minister of finance who was out on bail and standing trial for the embezzlement of government funds, today was shot and killed as he was leaving the court house. His assailant was Sergeant Omielowski, of the army.

ARRAY OF STARS ALREADY IN CITY WARMLY GREETED

Within Twenty-Four Hours, Vast Organization of Metropolitan Will Begin To Function.

SEASON'S FINEST STARS ON PROGRAM

Youthful Aspirants for Highest Honors and Older Favorites Will Bow To Diamond Horseshoe.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Awnings are up over sidewalks at the auditorium. Seats are in lace, floors and walls dusted, and the old red carpet is down. The mighty crimson curtains are ready to swing back from across the proscenium opening.

Everything is ready for this week, when Atlanta is to be feasted once again with the annual week of Metropolitan grand opera. The season which begins Monday is the sixteenth annual week of grand opera for Atlanta—a record of which no other city in the United States, outside of New York and Chicago, can boast.

Within twenty-four hours the great Metropolitan organization will be here. Singers of greater and lesser note, musicians, internationally famous conductors, dancers and chorus people, electricians, stage hands, wardrobe mistresses and all the other technicians necessary to the perfection of the performances, are scheduled to arrive on two special trains due here by 7 o'clock Monday morning.

Some of the greatest of the stars will arrive earlier. Rosa Ponselle, favorite among sopranos, has been here for several days, meeting old Atlanta friends and preparing her glorious voice for one of the greatest performances of which it is capable when she sings "Aida" on Monday night. Martinelli, the ever-popular tenor, reached the city Sunday night. He is Rhadames to Ponselle's Aida. Julia Claussen, the Amneris, is also safely arrived.

All Seven Good.

With the exception of one or two of the singers who do not appear in the cast until later in the week, the whole group is here, exactly as promised by the Music Festival association. There shouldn't be man or woman in Atlanta or Georgia who does not know, by now, all about the program for the week—that is, not a man or woman who has the slightest interest in opera or any of those who expect to attend, one or more performances. Incidentally, it appears that there will not be many of those "one performance" patrons this year. The seven programs offered are all so alluring that, according to box office reports, patrons who intended to go only once or twice have found it so difficult to select the operas they wish to most to hear that, in a large majority of cases, they have compromised by sim-

WILKINS SILENT ON THIRD FLIGHT

BY FREDERICK LEWIS EARP.
(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Aliance.)

Fairbanks, Alaska, April 17.—Nearly 52 hours have passed since the Detroit Arctic expedition base here has had word of Captain George H. Wilkins and Pilot Ben Eielson who set out on their third freighting trip to Point Barrow in the expedition's single-motored monoplane Thursday morning at 8:04 a. m. (1:04 p. m. eastern time). They were sighted slightly more than two hours later over Wiseman, indicating that their flight had gone normally up to that time. Captain Wilkins' present silence is the longest that has followed any of his hop-offs.

The three-motored monoplane Detroiter was given its first test today since its landing gear was damaged in a crash following its first trial flight March 19.

Major Thomas G. Lanphier, second in command of the expedition, piloted the plane with Charles M. Wisely, chief mechanic of the party, as his mechanic, the plane made an excellent start, leaving the ground before it had taxied a quarter of the distance down the 900-foot field.

After remaining in the air 40 minutes the Detroiter landed and without stopping the motors, took off again for a final five-minute trial, after returning to the airdrome.

Several more flights are contemplated to make adjustments and correct the compasses, Major Lanphier said before the plane will be taken to Barrow for her actual thrust at the unpenetrated Polar Sea.

"I was at the controls when she cracked last month," said the veteran army pilot and "any fault in handling was mine. I have had the damaged parts reconstructed and after flying her again I find the plane satisfactory."

REALTY ACTIVITIES STIR LOCAL INTEREST

One realty transaction of considerable magnitude was reported in Atlanta Saturday.

The United States Realty company has purchcased from G. F. Willis a site on Peachtree street, between Forrest and North avenues, and is planning to construct a building to cost $1,000,000.

W. F. Winecoff, who is constructing the Erlanger theater on a lot on Peachtree near North avenue, is considering increasing the building on the front of the property from two to nine stores. This would involve an expenditure of about $500,000. The addition would be for offices, and definite arrangement is expected within a few days.

Richland Couple Lose Two Children By Death in Month

Richland, Ga., April 17.—(Special)—Margaret Snelling, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver Snelling of Richland and Jacksonville, Fla., was interred here Friday morning, having died after a severe spell of flu and pneumonia. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. O. Hughes.

MRS. HAMMOND TO BE LAID TO REST

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Denman Hammond, widely-known and beloved young Atlanta woman who died early Saturday morning at a local hospital following an operation, will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from North Avenue Presbyterian church, of which she was a devoted member and official. Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the church, will officiate, and interment will follow in West View cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Harry Hallman, Joseph Ragan, L. T. Rosser, Jr., S. L. Carson, Jesse Whitner and H. W. Redding.

Although Mrs. Hammond, wife of P. W. Hammond, assistant managing editor of The Constitution, had been ill since last August, news of her death came as a distinct shock to a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Hammond was reared in Atlanta and was for many years active in both social and religious affairs. As a girl she attended Girls' High school and after her graduation at that institution attended Agnes Scott college, Decatur, being an honor graduate from Agnes Scott in 1918.

She was a member of the Gamma Tau Alpha Honorary society, the Blackfriars, B. O. Z. and Bulldogs, and was popular and active in student body affairs.

Because of her sweet and gentle character and for her ardent enthusiasm in religious and social work, Mrs. Hammond was a favorite in a large group of friends, particularly among neighbors in Ansley Park and in the North Avenue Presbyterian church, where she served as superintendent of the beginners' department and was in charge of the cradle roll of the Sunday school.

Mrs. Hammond was a daughter of the late George B. Denman and Mrs. Denman, of Nicholasville, Ky. She spent nearly all her girlhood in Atlanta, growing up in this city and attending its leading educational institutions and participating in numerous social activities.

The day after her graduation in 1918 from Agnes Scott college, she married Mr. Hammond and their home life in Ansley Park was ideal. Mrs. Hammond being a devoted wife and mother.

Mrs. Hammond is survived by her husband, her mother and three children, Elizabeth, Thomas Taylor and George Denman Hammond.

PROHIBITION LAW DEFENDED BY STAGG

per cent beer in Ontario had been a failure, disagreeing with witnesses presented several days ago by the wets.

Urges Dry Law Retention.

"God only knows what conditions would be, along with the enlarged freedom to growing boys and girls, if the prohibition law were not in effect," Stagg said.

"In the 34 years I have been at the University of Chicago, I can say with absolute honesty that conditions at the University of Chicago have improved a good deal since prohibition and that there is not much drinking and very little to excess among the students of the university.

"The university has always fought against drinking among the students and we have fought with an unusual degree of success, even before prohibition, but it is not anything like the problem since prohibition that it was before prohibition came.

"Furthermore, I am convinced that there is not anything like the amount of drinking among the younger generation that there was before prohibition.

Changes Since War.

"We all know that there have been tremendous changes since the war in the younger generation but these changes have not come about as a result of prohibition. They have come about as a result of the breaking down of the home and the general freedom which young people have had since the war.

"It is my opinion that with the enlarged freedom which young people now have, if prohibition were not in existence that there would be an immeasurably greater amount of drunkenness and debauchery than there is now. In fact, it is my conviction that it is the greatest sort of blessing that prohibition has been a law during this unstable period when the youth of the day have such vast freedom.

"It is this breaking down of the home and this irresponsibility on the part of the parents toward their children which creates the problem of today, and not the Volstead act.

"The statement that prohibition has produced these conditions is an absurdity and pure bunk. The trouble with prohibition is not prohibition itself, but that it has not been given a fair chance.

"It is a time for people and the newspapers to play the game according to the rules of the game and not to play it crookedly.

"It is a time for people to cut out their selfishness and to cooperate in upholding the prohibition law which even in its half hearted enforcement has done so much for the improvement o fthe social and economic and educational conditions of millions of people."

Fisher admitted that prohibition has created a defiant attitude among students, but he said there is less drinking, and denied that the younger generation is demoralized. From the effect on students, he turned to the general economic effect of prohibition, stating that it had saved the nation six billion dollars merely through increased industrial energy, and therefore should be retained.

The number of discipline cases at Yale in which drinking is a factor is much smaller than before prohibition, Fisher said.

"Improvement has been especially noticeable in the last few years.

"Such drinking as still remains is often more concentrated and uproarious than before prohibition. When liquor that was largely beer was easily obtainable, many got it, got it often, and got it in small quantities. Now that it is harder to get, fewer get it, get it more seldom, but when they get it, make up for lost time.

"Prohibition created a defiant attitude in many students. It is unpopular even among many who do not try to circumvent the law."

Could Support Wine Cellars

He said that recent statistics showed that 80 per cent of the senior class is opposed to the law, pointing out that a large portion of the class is from "well-to-do classes that can support wine cellars at home."

Fisher quoted authorities at Yale as follows:

Former Dean Frederick S. Jones—"On the whole, there is decidedly less drinking, and conditions are improving with time."

Dean C. W. Mendell—"There is more drinking of hard liquor now. The present drinking almost always results in trouble of some sort, so that scenes of public disgrace are rather worse than they used to be."

Fay Campbell, Secretary of the Christian Association—"There was not nearly as much drinking as in 1915, but more men carried flasks and many men were noticeably drunk."

Professor Charles C. Clarke, Romance Languages—"The effect of prohibition at the university has been good."

President James R. Angell, President—"Despite the all too frequent violations of the law, the amount of drinking at present, and particularly excessive drinking, is very much less than it was in earlier years."

Present Statistics.

The national income, the Yale economist said, was sixty-six billion in 1919, of which thirty-three billion came from wet territory. Allowing 10 per cent for released energy and skill in accumulating that wealth after prohibition, he said that three and a half billion should have been added in other productions enterprises. Further than this, he estimated that more than two billion was saved "by transferring our energies from alcohol production to something possessing true value."

"This double gain," he said, "that through the transfer of energy and that through the increase of energy, are together, therefore, about six billion without counting any saving in cost of jails, almshouses or any economic saving from reducing the death rate."

Canada's Experiment.

Wilcox submitted charts showing that deaths from cirrohosis had dropped from 6,500 in 1910 to 4,841 in 1924. Alcoholic deaths, he said, were about the same scale in the same period.

Testifying as to Ontario's experiment with 4.4 per cent beer, Raney said the wets are dissatisfied with the system because it is insufficient, while drys oppose it as weakening enforcement.

"Hotel men spent thousands of dollars in fitting up premises to make them comply with the law. And then the whole thing fell flat—the beer drinkers said there wasn't enough kick in the government's healthful, invigorating, non-intoxicating beer. The permits were in fact useful to the holders chiefly as disguises for the sale of something stronger."

Raney said that the dope traffic in British Columbia and Quebec, where government control is in force, is much greater than in Ontario, which is under prohibition, 581 and 225 violations as compared with 100 in Ontario.

Jail Population Gains.

The Canadian presented figures to show that the jail population had increased in Manitoba province under government control.

"The first complete year of government control showed 793 convictions for violations of the temperance act," he said. "Last year the number grew to 855, a figure larger than that for all but one year under prohibition."

There are large exportations of liquor from Canada into the United States, he said, but he did not have exact figures.

"Was your dry party defeated when you went out of office in 1923?" Senator Reed, Missouri, democrat and wet, asked.

"Well, yes, the present government of Ontario was elected with support of the liquor vote," Raney answered.

"So the majority of the people of your province supported a wet administration?"

"Well they supported a liberal administration. I don't think you could call the present government wet."

Reed asked Raney if he were a prohibitionist.

"I believe that it is the best solution of the liquor problem," Raney replied.

Letter From Premier.

Reed read a letter from Premier Taschereau of Quebec stating that the government regulation system there had proven "an unqualified success, both from a moral and financial point of view."

"Drunkenness has decreased," the premier wrote, "the population of the city of Quebec is 115,000 and arrests average only one and one-half a day. I think that compares favorably with any of your cities in the United States under the Volstead act."

When Reed read further statistics showing encouragement of temperance in Quebec, Raney said he had heard those statistics before.

"They are compiled in a booklet put out by the Quebec liquor commission," he said.

"What do you say," Reed asked, "about the fact that in dry Boston with a population of 770,000 there were 38,000 arrests in a certain period, while in wet Montreal with a population of 618,506 there were only 3,761 during the same period?"

"Well, they don't arrest many people for drunkenness in Montreal under their police system," Raney answered.

STAYTON SAYS PROHIS ADMIT LAW IMPERFECT

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—W. H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in a statement issued today, said the drys were demanding more money for prohibition enforcement and thereby were admitting "that the law which they have so many times declared perfect is not perfect."

Referring to testimony before the senate prohibition committee as to the cost of full enforcement of the law, Mr. Stayton said that "if the Anti-Saloon league does not lay the lash upon congress and bring about the immediate appropriation of the hundreds of millions of dollars which its own friends admit are necessary to make the Volstead law effective, this association will be forced to conclude that the league is satisfied with the present condition of chaos so far as enforcement is concerned.

"Enforce or modify," the statement said, "should be the demand of every citizen, and we want the proponents of the Volstead law to have every opportunity to satisfy themselves that it is completely impractical in its present form."

Speaking of the cost of enforcement, Mr. Stayton said testimony of District Attorney Buckner, of New York, and Assistant Secretary Andrews, of the treasury, had indicated $750,000,000 a year would be necessary.

ATLANTA IS SEEN AS BIG AIR PORT

cal, economical and practical air line route to the west, while feeder lines could bring commodities to Atlanta from the middle west and the north and east.

"From here, too, the lines can be extended to South America and the West Indies. Therefore, it behooves Atlanta to furnish the best and most modern air field in the entire south in order that this new and great development program, which is sure to be carried out as soon as the feasibility of the proposal is generally seen, can be executed here without delay."

Mayor Sims declared that the air port will be a great factor in building the Atlanta of the future and this vicinity of the state.

Planes Every Hour.

"Planes will be swooping down upon us every hour in the near future, each bearing its own portion of increased prosperity and progress," he declared. "Ground facilities at Candler field have just begun, for Atlanta plans the most modern port in the south. The present development is due to efforts of the air field committee of the chamber of commerce and the committee from the city at large coupled with a fine spirit of cooperation of city and county officials. This new transportation system means more to Atlanta than the most optimistic at this time can even dream of and we must place adequate facilities at the disposal of these pioneers of the air."

Paul S. Etheridge, chairman of Fulton county commissioners, praised Alderman William B. Hartsfield, chairman of the chamber aviation committee and of the special committee appointed by Mayor Sims to direct work on Candler field. He declared that the measure of success attained thus far is due largely to Mr. Hartsfield, and the persistence of members of his committees.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, declared that the Woman's club fostered the air field movement in its infancy and that it is proud of the progress made on the field.

Postmaster Edwin K. Large expressed the readiness of his department to cooperate to the fullest measure in making the new air venture a success in Atlanta. He said the advertising value, if nothing else, of the undertaking will be of inestimable value to Atlanta and the entire south.

James A. Hollomon, of The Constitution, speaking for the newspaper fraternity of the city, pledged the efforts of the press in making successful the courage, vision and "financial nerve" of the pioneers in the air route.

Chamber to Help.

B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, pledged all "facilities" of the local organization to the infant transportation industry, and declared that he believed Atlanta will be the hub of a great network of air lines extending to every section of the union.

Mr. Hartsfield presided at the dinner. Others present included Mr. Chenea, B. S. Barker, Jr., George M. Hope and Virlyn Moore.

Plans for the new air line call for operation of single engine-drive Ford all-metal monoplanes for mail use June 1, and by November, if possible, the substitution of triple-engine drive and 14 passenger machines carrying mail and passengers by November 1 from Atlanta to Miami. This line will be extended to Havana, Cuba, by December 1, if plans of the concern mature. First of the big planes will be shipped to the Atlanta field and christened "Miss Atlanta" by Mayor Sims, according to the program mapped out Saturday.

The Florida Airways is one of five large air fleet concerns operating at the present time, and these will be linked eventually until every section of the country, the West Indies and South America will be closely interwoven with the new transportation scheme.

Major Chambers was rated as the second American world war ace, second only to Eddie Rickenbacker. He was decorated with the distinguished service cross four times; four times the croix de guerre was pinned on him by the French government for bravery; he was awarded the French legion of honor decoration and was designated as a military aviator by an act of congress in which only five others were named. He has seven official victories recorded to his credit.

Major Chambers will remain in Atlanta for the next few days completing details for the beginning of the air service June 1.

AGED MAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

knocked down by an automobile in front of the Kimball house on South Pryor street, according to police. Patrolman Isaac E. Johnson stated that the auto which struck the youth was driven by Mrs. G. C. Lynch, of 103 Linwood avenue, and that the accident could not be avoided. No case was made against Mrs. Lynch. Young Hendrix was treated at Grady hospital and allowed to go home.

Louis Nolan, age 6, of 7 Rhinehart street, was treated at Grady hospital for injuries received Saturday afternoon. He did not tell doctors where the accident happened and no report had been filed at police station late Saturday night.

T. G. Chappell, 52, of 125 Belmont avenue, was treated at Grady hospital for minor cuts and bruises, according to hospital records. He did not tell doctors how he was injured.

C. E. Hadaway, of 39 Alta avenue, was treated at Grady hospital Saturday night for painful injuries about the body said to have been received in an auto accident. After treatment he was permitted to leave and gave no details of the crash.

Under Cover Man Threatens Family Lands in Jail

G. E. Jonas, 27, of 190 Grant street, one of the "under cover" members of the police department, was fined $51 on a charge of drunkenness and bound over to the state court Saturday under $1,000 bond on a charge of pointing a pistol at another, violating the prohibition law and wife beating, by Recorder A. W. Callaway. Charges were made by his wife and her mother and both appeared in court to testify against him.

The charges, according to Mrs. Jonas, was the outgrowth of a "rough-house" staged at the home early Saturday morning by Jonas, when he is alleged to have gone to her home drunk. Mrs. Jonas testified that her husband threatened her life with a pistol, pointing the weapon at her.

Jonas was arrested at his home by Lieutenant T. D. Shaw and Call Officers T. J. Smith and H. A. Hardy. They were met at the door by Mrs. Jonas, who asked them not to go into the room as her husband had threatened to kill the first man that entered. Disregarding the threat, Lieutenant Shaw led the officers to the room and made the arrest. Jonas was found with his revolver strapped around him and a pint bottle almost filled with whisky nearby, arresting officers said.

Mrs. Jonas said that she had been mistreated for some time but that she had not reported him before for fear her husband would lose his job.

SHETTLESWORTH OPPOSES BROWN

J. S. Shettlesworth, of Lilburn, announced Saturday his candidacy for commissioner of agriculture to succeed Commissioner J. J. Brown. Mr. Shettlesworth has been prominent in civic and political circles of Gwinnett county for many years.

He served in the general assembly as representative from Gwinnett county from 1921 through 1924. Mr. Shettlesworth is a dirt farmer and is conversant with agricultural conditions throughout the state. He was born and reared in Henry county, later moving to Fayette county. He served with distinction at one time on the board of commissioners on roads and revenues of Fayette county.

Franco-American Debt Agreement Parley Delayed

Paris, April 17.—It has been announced semi-officially that any possible preliminary agreement between the United States and France as to the settlement of the Franco-American debt question has been delayed until action is taken by the United States senate on the American settlement of the Italian debt.

This is in accordance with the original prediction of Raoul Peret, minister of finance department in the Briand cabinet.

MISSING WEALTHY OIL MAN BELIEVED TO HAVE DROWNED

Norfolk, Va., April 17.—While not overlooking the possibility that he may have fallen overboard, the Norfolk police, after an investigation, are of the belief that Alfred H. Ramage, wealthy oil man, of Joplin, Mo., leaped to his death in the waters of the Chesapeake early this morning, while en route from Washington to Old Point on the steamer Northland. He was last seen about 5 a. m., walking toward the stern of the steamer and clad in his bath robe and shoes.

His valuables, including a sum of money, watch and $3,000 worth of liberty bonds, were found in the state room with a note addressed to John H. Copelli, 608 Frisco building, Joplin. The note written on a telegraph blank and tied in a bundle with the bonds, read: "For you Cappy. My blessing with you—Alf."

Ramage was en route to Pinehurst, N. C., to visit his parents, his father, S. Y. Ramage, a retired oil man, having established a winter home there. Young Ramage, who was about 35 years of age, was declared to have been in bad health recently as the result of overwork, which resulted in a nervous breakdown. Although he boarded the steamer in Washington yesterday afternoon he did not obtain a stateroom until shortly before midnight. He appeared preoccupied and several times indicated lapses of memory.

Coast guard authorities have been requested to keep a lookout for the body.

FIVE AMERICANS IN METROPOLITAN

New York, April 17.—(AP)—An opera season marked by the introduction of five new American principals and the best financial year of the Metropolitan Opera company's 43 years of production closed tonight with "La Gioconda."

The Metropolitan would make no statement concerning the possible financial value of the debut of American singers, but it was conceded that this possibly had a bearing on the box office statement.

Two special trains were employed to carry the majority of the company after the performance to Atlanta, Ga., where a program of seven operas opens Monday night.

Foremost in the interest for the season was the introduction of new American voices. Marion Talley, Kansas City girl, whose debut was heralded by a special delegation from her home town, created a furore in Rigoletto.

Another debutante was Mary Lewis, whose progress to stardom in opera lay through the path of musical comedy; Carmela Ponselle, whose sister, Rosa, already had gained fame on the operatic stage, won plaudits at her debut, and Nannette Guilford, who had previously sung small parts in opera, became a full-fledged star. Dorothea Flexer completed the list of aspirants, all of whom were pronounced artists of promise by the New York critics.

Verdi's "Aida" and Puccini's "Tosca," led the list as favorites, each having eight presentations.

Beniamino Gigli, ranking tenor of the Metropolitan, was not among those leaving for Atlanta, he having preceded the company there, as did Feodor Chaliapin, basso, whose "Don Quixote" will be presented there on Tuesday.

Some 35 principals, besides the chorus, ballet and others, made up the party tonight.

COOKE EXCHANGES JOBS WITH PERKINS ON DAWES BODY

Paris, April 17.—Thomas H. Perkins, of Boston, and Walter P. Cooke, of Buffalo, today resigned their respective positions with the Dawes plan organization in order to exchange jobs.

Cooke resigned as chairman of the arbitral tribunal created to consider disputes arising from the operation of the plan and Perkins resigned as the American member of the commission which operates the plan.

WALKER CONTINUES BATTLE FOR BONDS

other corrections in present tax laws paid the cost of the session many times over.

"It will be clear to any fair-minded observer," the statement concludes, "that the extra session has actually laid the foundation for a great constructive forward movement. This is the issue now before the people and, in my judgment, Georgia will take full advantage of the unparalleled opportunities that now present themselves. The next legislature will complete the work."

The governor's statement in full is as follows:

The Governor's Statement.

"I would be less than frank if I did not express disappointment that the legislature failed to take advantage of the opportunity to place Georgia in the front rank of the progressive states by adopting the great constructive educational and highway program submitted to its consideration. However, this session will prove historic in the measures which were enacted into law. First, the state was committed to the policy of equalization of educational opportunities for the children in the country in the passage of the equalization act. This act will provide a fund to supplement school funds in those sections of the country where the taxable values would not permit a full school term. Second, in importance only to the equalization bill is the constitutional amendment giving the state the right to construct and maintain a state system of highways. Our present laws permit only a patchwork system, which could not legally be changed because our constitution gives only the counties the right to lay out and construct public roads. This amendment will give the state, as such, the right and make it possible for the next legislature to enact adequate legislation to make provision for the construction of a system as a state unit.

"So it will be seen that while the legislature failed to make provision for the immediate development of the educational and highway program suggested, the general assembly did recognize the principles and commit the state to the policies involved in the program. An educational campaign of the most vital importance has been maintained and the people are informed as never before. While I will not take part in any political talk. Beginning at the bridge opening at Lumber City on Thursday, I expect to continue this campaign until my term of office expires, with the confident belief that the next legislature will complete the program.

"The third item of vast importance to the state is the legislation providing for vital statistics.

Health Records Needed.

"With every other state in the union providing health records, it would be a calamity for Georgia to maintain the one exception. This would be interpreted as implying a record of which Georgia felt ashamed, whereas, the facts are that our health records are highly creditable. Fourth, of great importance to the business world was the passage of two acts involving corporations. One of these provides for the complete domestication of corporations and the protection of the stockholders thereof and the other corrected the non-par tax bill. Several very important corporations are already preparing to enter Georgia under the terms of these two acts. Fifth, of great importance to the farmers of the state and particularly that class which is forced to borrow money is the crop loan bill perfecting the system under which loans can be secured on growing crops.

"In my judgment the constitutional amendment increasing the borrowing power of the governor for the purpose of paying the public school teachers will prove more effective and more popular than the bond bill for the same purpose. Many thousands of dollars annually in interest will be saved and the friends of education can now bend their energies toward a bond issue for the building of consolidated schools in sections of the country which are not able to build them for themselves and for the completion of a well-rounded higher educational system. Other measures of vital importance were passed, though of less general interest, including several bills on the state school program; one authorizing the establishment of the Woodrow Wilson university at Valdosta; another authorizing the levying of taxes for the maintenance of school systems in the counties and a number of local measures of vital importance to the counties involved.

Veterans Paid.

"The immediate object of the extra session was fully met in saving the financial honor of the state from the issuance of thousands of paper scrip of doubtful value in an attempt to pay the balance due the Confederate veterans. This money will actually be in the hands of the veterans themselves 100 per cent in the next few days and the state will be relieved of the odium of neglect of these old heroes as well as of the cloud upon its business integrity.

"Fully one-half a million dollars of new money will be placed in the treasury of the state through the extra session in the passage of the amended inheritance tax laws and the correction of certain errors in other taxation measures.

"It will be clear to any fair-minded observer that the extra session has actually laid the foundation for a great constructive forward movement. This is the issue now before the people, and, in my judgment, Georgia will take full advantage of the unparalleled opportunities that now present themselves. The next legislature will complete the work."

KINGS AND QUEENS OF SONG IN CITY

ply leaving off those they care least about. And, with a program such as is prepared for us next week, that means leaving off practically none of the seven.

Candid expectations are that the attendance this year will break all records. While there are a few choice seats left for all performances the customary last-minute sales, if they merely approximate those of other years, will clean out the racks in short order.

Promptness Required.

Don't forget that the curtain rises at 2 for matinees and 8 for night performances. This does not mean 2:01 or 8:01, either. Promptness is carried out to a precise science by the Metropolitan. And, any patrons who are not inside the auditorium, through the last entrance barrier, at the exact hour, will not be allowed to enter until the end of the first act. When the lights dim, the doors close. If you are on the wrong side, it won't matter what excuses you may bring or how hard you plead—you'll stay on the wrong side throughout the opening act and miss just that much enjoyment.

On this, the final day before the great week dawns, let's finally look over the program, analyze it and see how many points of enthusiasm we have overlooked. Monday night, which promises to be the most brilliant opening night in Atlanta's operatic history, both artistically and socially, brings the ever popular and thrilling "Aida." The cast is headed by Ponselle, Martinelli and Claussen. Julia Claussen, it will be remembered, made local operatic history by her singing of the role of Amneris three years ago. She is apt to repeat that triumph on Monday. And Ponselle and Martinelli do not need assurances of great performance, when they sing for an Atlanta audience.

Note, however, another member of the cast: Bohnen, the basso, who scored so heavily in "Lohengrin" last year, sings the role of Amonasro on Monday night. Then there is Mardones, one of Atlanta's favorites as Ramfis, and D'Angelo as the king, Bada and Robertson in lesser roles.

Ballet Will Star.

The Metropolitan ballet is always one of the greatest features of an "Aida" performance. Florence Rudolph will be the featured danseuse on Monday. The orchestra will follow the baton of Conductor Tullio Serafin.

Tuesday night brings a performance which has aroused more curiosity than any opera presented in Atlanta in several years. Chaliapin, Russian basso, will sing the title role in "Don Quixote," a novelty which had its American premiere in New York about three weeks ago. It was so successful that it has been necessary to repeat it two or three times.

The opera, taken from Cervantes' classic story, was written especially for Chaliapin and the role of the pathetic knight is said to fit his tremendous powers of acting perfectly, as well as giving ample opportunity for his mighty bass tones. De Luca, baritone, and, also one of the most gifted natural comedians in opera, the role of Sanche Panza. Marion Talva, contralto, sings the leading feminine role of Dulcinea, the fair and false, while Grace Anthony and Dorothy Flexer take minor roles. Others in the cast are Ralph Errolle, Angelo Bada, Paolo Ananian, Vincenzo Reschiglian and Arnold Gaber. The conductor is Louise Hasselmans and the ballet again appears in incidental dances.

Scenes Are Unique.

Several unique scenes are in this opera which you should surely not miss. The score where Don Quixote is impaled on the revolving sails of the windmill—and the death scene. Chaliapin makes the unlucky Don die standing up against a tree. Also, at least two members of the cast will be Atlantans, for the Don, you know, rides a bony old horse named Rosinante, while Sancho rides a donkey named Dapple. All Atlanta has been searched for steeds that are the types to use stage language, and it is understood that the seekers have succeeded admirably.

On Wednesday evening there is a double bill, "La Boheme" and "Pagliacci."

"La Boheme" brings back to us Lucrezia Bori, one of the greatest Mimi's opera has ever produced, and Gigli, tenor par excellence. It also brings back grand old Scotti and that special pet of Atlanta, Louise Hunter. Gennaro Papi is the conductor for both Wednesday night operas.

Mary Lewis, the young American star who has recently risen to operatic glory after approaching the heights via the stage of the Follies and a church choir, will make her Atlanta debut as "Nedda" in the famous Lancecavallo opera. Lawrence Tibbett, young American baritone, who delighted us last year in "Falstaff," sings Tonio, while Armand Tokatyan, Giordano Paltrinieria and Mille Picco complete the cast.

The first matinee of the week brings one of the real thrills—"Jewels of the Madonna." Thursday afternoon. The roster of the cast for this opera includes names of performers who have long ago shown Atlanta that they can safely be dependend upon for perfect singing and playing of roles. Several newcomers this year will be seen with them. Heading the cast are Martinellia, Telva, Easton, Basiola (the new baritone). Others are Bada, Paltrinieri, Ananian, Guildford, Wakefield, Robertson, Altglass, Anthony, Flexer and Bonetti. The conductor is Gennaro Papi, and the ballet will appear.

In Den of Thieves.

There is at least one scene in this opera that should prove magnificently thrilling. It is the den of the Camorrists, in Naples, just as day is breaking. These Italian thieves and killers are awakening, with their sweethearts among them, from drunken sleep. Half way through the scene they sing a drunken chorus and then dance the wildest of tarantelles, with Basiola, as Rafaelle, keeping time with a great black snake whip, which he cracks over their heads. It ought to be a remarkably effective scene.

Dear old "Lucia" is the bill for Friday night, made notable by the Atlanta debut of Marion Talley, the most famous product of Kansas City. Miss Talley will sing the title role and she is expected to repeat here the astounding success which greeted her debut a few weeks ago in New York. You remember? The papers of the nation were full of the story of this 19-year-old American girl and her scaling of operatic heights.

Gigli is the Edgardo to sing opposite Miss Talley, and the famous sextette will be sung by Miss Talley, Laura Robertson, Gigli, De Luca, Rothier and Bada. Tullio Serafin is the conductor.

The two performances for Saturday to wind up the great week bring in the afternoon the only Wagnerian opera on the program, "Tannhauser," and at night the perennial favorite, Verdi's "Trovatore." It is doubtful if there are two operas in the entire library which contain more tuneful and classically popular music than these. Think of "Pilgrim's Chours," "Evening Star," Tannhauser Overture" and "Miserere" all in one day!

The new German tenor, Rudolf Laubenthal, appears here for the first time in the title role of Tannhauser. Florence Easton is to be the Elizabeth while Frances Peralta will sing the Venus role. Others in the cast include Boheme, Tibbett, Meador, Gaber, Bloch, Gustafsen and Florence Dalossy. The conductor is Giuseppe Bamboschek. The ballet has some of its greatest opportunities for beautiful effects in this opera.

Trovatore the Last.

Both Ponselle and Martinelli will sing again in Trovatore on Saturday night, assuring a glorious finish to the week. Others in the great cast are Telva, Rothier, Robertson, Basiola Paltrinieri and Reschiglian. Tullio Serafin is the conductor and, of course, there is again the ballet.

The man who can stay away from any one of these seven wonderful performances is a better man than I am, Gatti-Casazza!

Now, all that remain until 8 o'clock Monday night comes round is the exercise of patience. For that, in all reverence, we raise our humble supplication.

Lukeman's Master Model Arrives To Guide Work on Big Memorial

Augustus Lukeman's master model for the central group of the Stone Mountain memorial is shown here upon its arrival Saturday, being transported to the studio at the base of the mountain. It will be presented Tuesday to officials of the association, it is learned.

Lukeman's master model for the central group of the Stone Mountain memorial will be presented to the board of directors of the Memorial association at a special meeting to be held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in the studio at Stone Mountain.

Following acceptance of the model directors expect to take steps to let a contract for the carving of the group on the mountain under Mr. Lukeman's supervision, the same as an architect's design and plan for a hotel or office building or church is built by contract under his supervision, it was explained.

Mr. Lukeman made the model in his studio in New York and in a general way it is an enlargement of his sketch model presented to the board and accepted by it last August.

The scale is very large, one and one-quarter times life size, which makes horses and riders 11 feet high. The scale on the mountain will be nearly 14 times larger than the size of the master model, so that the horses and riders on the mountain will be 150 feet high.

On account of the size of the master model, it was necessary to make the plaster cast in three sections. In doing this Mr. Lukeman called to his assistance a famous expert in this line, Herman Walthausen, who has done the moulding and casting work for many noted sculptors, including Daniel Chester French, Augustus Saint Gaudens, J. Q. A. Ward and others.

Mr. Lukeman will arrive Monday to uncrate the model, put together the three sections, set it up in the studio and present it to the Memorial association Tuesday.

EXPECT DECISION ON ZONING LAW

Washington, April 17.—(Special)—Whether the United States supreme court will review the case involving constitutionality of the Atlanta zoning law is expected to be decided Monday.

The Georgia supreme court, in the case brought by Mrs. Corrine S. Smith of Atlanta, held that both the Atlanta zoning act and the enabling act passed by the state legislature are unconstitutional and granted Mrs. Smith an injunction restraining enforcement of the ordinance after the superior court of Fulton county had refused her an injunction.

The case was brought to the supreme court by the city of Atlanta, which asked a review by the highest court of the state supreme court's decision.

Mrs. Smith owned a tract of land on Piedmont avenue, lying south of the Southern railway, and wanted to erect store buildings on it. She says in her brief that the property was vacant when she bought it except for a store building.

Her permit was refused because of the zoning law of Atlanta. Her brief held that the zoning ordinance was illegal. She said she paid large sums to the city in taxes and that it was unjust to deny her permit as the proposed buildings could be rented for $2,000 a year, and that she had been damaged already in the sum of $4,000.

The city holds in its brief that the city of Atlanta was constitutionally empowered to pass the zoning ordinance, that it is legal in every way and that the private interest of Mrs. Smith must yield to the good of the community.

COLONEL PAXON LEAVES HOSPITAL AFTER OPERATION

Colonel Frederic J. Paxon, who underwent a major operation at Saint Joseph's hospital some two weeks ago, returned to his apartments in the Biltmore Sunday. Colonel and Mrs. Paxon will leave at once for New Orleans and sail Wednesday on the steamer Abangarez for Panama, to be gone for a month.

Beautiful Garden Hills

IN THE HEART OF ATLANTA'S FINEST RESIDENTIAL SECTION

.....because Garden Hills is located in the very center of Atlanta's finest residential section—

.....because on all sides of it lie some of the finest estates and homes in America—

.....because it sweeps across from Peachtree Road to Piedmont Road (just north of fashionable Andrews Drive), in the direct line of Atlanta's northward growth—

.....because every modern improvement and beautification scheme is guaranteed—

—thousands of Atlanta people have (and quite naturally) the idea that Garden Hills' property is high priced. That it is only possible for very wealthy persons to own homes and estates in this wonderful residential development.

Many of the folk who have formed that opinion have done so because they have, in the past, tried to buy Northside property near Garden Hills, before Garden Hills was available to the public.

To these thousands of folks who have always wanted to live on the Northside, and to thousands of investors who know that Atlanta's surest real estate profits are to be found on the Northside, Garden Hills' prices will come as a distinct and pleasant surprise.

Here are the facts:

(1) Today—right now—you can buy lots in Garden Hills at prices that are less than those asked for nearby unrestricted and undeveloped property.

For instance, in the exclusive Country Club section of Garden Hills where no lot is less than 100 feet front—each one on a wide paved boulevard—and where all lots have unusual depths—running as high as 400 feet deep—you can buy an estate from $60.00 to $70.00 a front foot. Less than two blocks from Garden Hills, these same size lots are selling from $100.00 to $150.00 a front foot. These estates in the Country Club section are heavily wooded, and all of them are so plotted as to give each one the most beautiful building site imaginable. They are all just a step from the Club House, Swimming Pool and Playground—which are soon to be built.

(2) You can buy Garden Hills lots at prices that are no greater than those asked for lots of similar width and depth in less desirable sections of Atlanta.

The Directorate of the Garden Hills Corporation is formed of executives of proved competence and responsibility, who are permanently identified with its development.

Their faith in the present and future of Garden Hills is based upon their knowledge of values and their understanding of conditions that make these values sound, enduring and increasing.

DIRECTORS

EUGENE R. BLACK, President of the Atlanta Trust Company
FREDERIC J. PAXON, of Davison-Paxon-Stokes Company
A. J. ORME, Vice-President of the Atlanta Trust Company
J. W. GOLDSMITH, President of the Goldsmith-Becker Company
T. R. BENNETT, State Superintendent of Banks
P. C. McDUFFIE, President of the Garden Hills Corporation

No lot in Garden Hills is less than 60 feet in width; all of them have ample depth. You can buy a Garden Hills lot for as little as $1500.

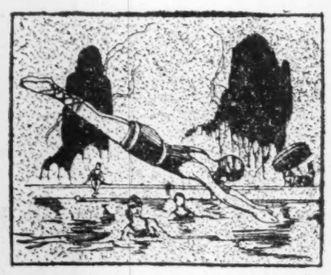

And that is not simply an advertising price on one lot. There are scores of them at $1500 to $2500. With every improvement—paving, lights, sewer, water, guaranteed. High, wooded lots that are ideal home sites. Not on a side street, but on wide, paved boulevards.

And remember this: The purchaser of a $1500 lot in Garden Hills has every privilege, in the use of Garden Hills' recreational facilities, that the purchaser who pays $7500, $10,000, or even $20,000, in the Country Club section, has. The Garden Hills pool, the recreation center, the riding tracks, the tennis courts, Garden Hills parks and lakes, are a part of your purchase in Garden Hills, no matter what price you pay. Why are these prices possible? Simply this: Garden Hills is offered to Atlantans by its developers. It has not been sold and resold, each time with a profit. When you buy a Garden Hills lot you buy both land and profit too.

It is true that present prices of Garden Hills' lots are tentative. We have been told they are 50% under the market. Certainly they will advance in price—not once but many times As improvements go down, prices will go up. It doesn't take a shrewd investor to see that the time to buy Garden Hills lots is now.

Those folks who remember Ansley Park and Peachtree Hills, who remember their development, and thousands of others who know the profit that every Peachtree Road development has made for investors, are going to want to investigate Garden Hills.

To make your inspection easier and more pleasant, we have established a down-town office at 197 Peachtree Street. The telephone number is WAlnut 5701. Any one of a corps of courteous representatives is at your disposal. It will be a pleasure to have you verify this startling announcement.

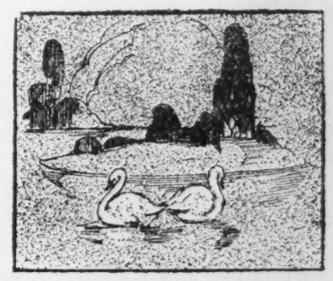

SWIMMING POOL

The Garden Hills swimming pool is to be built right in the center of the development. Just a few minutes' walk from any section of the property. It will be modern in every particular and in a setting of natural beauty and charm. Nearby will be Crystal Lake, the Country Club, the tennis courts, the Riding tracks—all of them built and maintained by the Garden Hills Corporation. Privileges of the swimming pool will be restricted to Garden Hills residents.

COUNTRY CLUB

Garden Hills will have a charming Normandy design Country Club house, around which will center the social life of this compact community. There will be Tennis Courts, a riding track, the swimming pool, and a score of other delightful diversions. The Garden Hills Country Club is near the center of the property. Its privileges will, of course, be limited to property owners in Garden Hills.

LAKES AND PARKS

The Garden Hills plans of beautification, which are the work of one of America's most famous landscape architects, include the immediate building of Crystal Lake. Crystal Lake, with its wooded island, is near the Country Club and the entrance to the Country Club section. It is to be filled by the waters of a skyblue stream that flows into it. Following the course of this stream to the lake is Sunny Brook Park, one of the many exquisite parks that are planned.

Two completely furnished Model Homes are open for your inspection every day in Garden Hills, from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to 9 o'clock in the evening. Piedmont Bank Will Open in Fall

Interior of Piedmont Bank and Trust company, Norris building, on Peachtree street, which will open September 1. The chairman of the board is Mayor Walter A. Sims.

Piedmont Bank and Trust company will open for business about September 1 in spacious quarters on the ground floor of the Norris building, being erected at 223 Peachtree street, it was announced Saturday. Plans were outlined at a dinner Friday night at the Henry Grady hotel by officers and stockholders. It was reported that more than half of the capital stock has been subscribed.

Differing from the practice of other large banks, the Piedmont Bank and Trust company will eliminate the usual service charge of $1 per month on balances of less than $100 on checking deposit, and will not charge its customers exchange for handling checks of other banks, it was stated.

An up-to-date women's department will be a feature of the bank, and this department will have a women's advisory board to act in conjunction with the board of directors, the plans disclosed.

A. H. Fowle, under whose direction the bank was organized, presided. He said contracts have been let for modern fixtures, vault and office equipment, and the bank, when ready to open for business, will be one of the handsomest financial quarters in Atlanta. The interior will be of golden Tennessee marble, and bullet-proof plate-glass will take the place of grill-work on the cages. The woodwork and furnishings will be of American walnut. Offices will be situated adjoining the main lobby and will be conveniently appointed.

Mayor Sims, chairman of the board of directors, was principal speaker, and he predicted a successful future for the institution. "I predict that in a year's time the deposits of this bank will surprise every banker in Atlanta," he said. The mayor asserted that Atlanta needs more banking facilities to keep step with the great business expansion going on and that to come in the near future. It was pointed out by the mayor and other speakers that the location of the new bank places it in the heart of the fastest-developing business center in the city, where more than $15,000,000 worth of building is now in course of construction.

Among others who spoke were C. A. Turner, sales manager, who described plans for the women's department; Thomas H. Scott, of counsel for the bank; J. E. McJenkin and C. W. Freeman.

In addition to the front entrance on Peachtree street, the bank will be accessible by entrance at the rear. Pedestrians may pass from Ivy street through an arcade in the Norris Candy company building to the bank, and a driveway from Ivy street will provide automobile approach to the door which will add safety and convenience in the handling of pay rolls and large sums for deposit.

It was announced at the meeting that contract for the fixtures has been awarded to J. P. Womack & Son, of Atlanta, and contract for the vault to the Mosler Safe company.

Better Homes Show Results Of Careful Planning Work

BY ROY WHITE.

Despite the fact that grand opera week usually absorbs all of the energies and interest of Mr. and Mrs. Atlanta, the exception is proving the rule this year, for the 1926 preparations for Better Homes week in America, starting April 25, are also receiving the needed attention on the part of the huge committee, which is determined that this year this city will continue to hold its lead as the finest home-making community of the United States.

Announcement was made Saturday that work at the two main demonstration projects, Better Homes No. 1, at 49 Brookridge drive Boulevard park, and at Fair and Kelley streets, directly back of the Fair street school. Home No. 2 is showing unusual activity with scores of committee members making all perfect for the opening April 25.

The school practice apartments at Girls' High, Fulton High and Spelman college for negro girls are also scenes of activity, for they too, will be used to demonstrate what better homes may mean in terms of convenience and happiness.

High Schools Interested.

Members of the Junior and Senior high schools home economics departments having charge of furnishing home No. 1 and members of Fulton County High who have home No. 2, have practically completed their study of these projects. They have made a detailed study of the resources of Atlanta's stores, with practically everything having been selected, which will make these homes economically attractive. This has included the selection of lighting fixtures, floor and wall coverings, paint, linens, silver and china. Never before, surely in Atlanta, and perhaps never in the same thorough manner anywhere else have the students had such an opportunity to put their classroom precepts into practice, and they are enjoying it to the utmost, according to the teachers I have talked with.

The large number of visitors to better home No. 1 in Boulevard park shows that the community is interested in the better building of a better home. Members of the committee are usually on hand to give information. The delightful little bungalow which, this year, in contrast to last year's main exhibit, is to house a smaller family of four, is built of Key James' face brick, which assures greater permanency, and is more economical in the end than a frame house, such as the better homes committee has previously demonstrated. Especially is this more desirable until Atlanta conquers her smoke nuisance, is the belief of the committee.

Is Within Limit.

Adhering to the strict rule of the Better Homes in America organization that the better homes demonstrated shall always come within a $10,000 limit for houses and land together, this little home will come well within those limits and yet, with its well-chosen furnishings, will be everything that the heart could wish. Clever built-in contrivances tend to make the work easier and set the standard as usual for other homes to be building in Atlanta. The apportionment of 25 per cent of the total cost of the house and lot, to be used for the furniture and landscaping budget, is most helpful as usual.

Chairmen and committees connected with the No. 1 home are Thornton Marye, representing the Georgia Institute of Architects, who is supervising architect; Mrs. Louis Elsas, president of the Junior Red Cross, and the juniors from the Sam Inman school of Boulevard park, aided by the Atlanta Florists and Horticulturists' club, who are landscaping the grounds; the junior and senior high home economics classes for furnishings, and the members of the Boulevard Park Civic club as "house-mothers" under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. H. Chambers and Mrs. N. A. Hughes.

Follies Curtain Ends Successful Show for 1926

After filling the most successful engagement in its history at the Atlanta theater, the Junior League Follies concluded its last performance of the 1926 season Saturday night with a crowd that packed the theater to capacity. From an artistic, financial and social standpoint the show was by far the most enjoyable, most successful and most pleasing of any show yet presented by the Junior league.

More than 60 Atlanta young people took part in the performances, nearly all of them being young women who are members of the Junior league. In addition the league furnished numerous committees in charge of tickets, business office, advertising, ushering and other activities, and all the auxiliary workers were equally as enthusiastic in their work as were performers.

Ned Wayburn, noted New York producer, was in charge of the production end and, aided by his staff headed by Max Olney, brought to Atlanta an array of costumes, scenic effects, new dances and new skits that provided one of the most enjoyable theatrical performances of any seen here during the year.

After expenses, receipts of the show are used by the Junior league girls in many works of charity in Atlanta.

Attendance this year probably broke all previous records as every performance was a "sell out" in the box office.

Members of Mr. Wayburn's staff will return to New York Monday taking with them the 350 beautiful costumes used in the various numbers on the program.

JUDGE DECLARES VIADUCTS LEGAL

Judge John D. Humphries, in Fulton superior court, Saturday declined to sustain a petition of intervention filed by E. W. Maynard, of Macon, and Louis Frankel, taxpayers, in which the legality of the $1,000,000 issue for viaducts was attacked, following hearing on the validity of Atlanta's $8,000,000 bond issue for municipal improvement. The court signed an order validating the entire issue.

After Judge Humphries rendered his decision, Mr. Maynard announced his intention of appealing to the supreme court.

Steps will be taken immediately to dispose of the bonds, according to City Attorney James L. Mayson, who stated that Judge Humphries' decision was indication enough of the legality of the issue.

Mr. Maynard, in his petition, pointed out that the 19th amendment had wiped out all registration laws in Georgia and that as no new laws ahd been passed since the passage of the amendment, the voters taking part in the bond election were not qualified; that the only registration required for voting on the bonds was held from January 1, 1926, to the date of the election, March 24, his contention being that the election could not legally been held until the close of the registration books in 1925; and that the election was not advertised properly and the managers were not freeholders as required by law. City Attorney Mayson made a blanket denial of these objections.

FORD MAY ENTER RACE FOR MAYOR, FRIENDS DECLARE

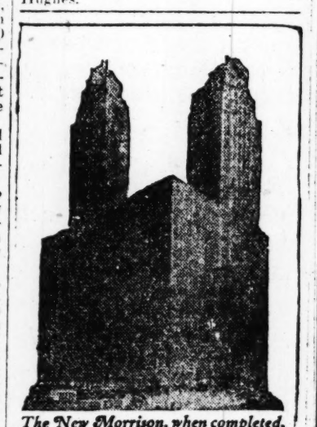

Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth ward, is seen as a possible contender for the nomination for mayor of Atlanta, following a request Saturday by a delegation of friends that he offer. This followed formal withdrawal Thursday of Joe Wood, who announced his candidacy for governor.

While Mr. Ford declined to say whether he would enter the contest or say whether he even was considering such a move, it was said by many of his friends that he had been approached and that he would give a definite answer in a few days.

During his term as alderman he has made a host of friends in council and in political circles, and is regarded as a strong contender if he should offer.

At the present time, I. N. Ragsdale, Fulton county commissioner, and Alderman J. Allen Couch, of the fifth, are the only announced candidates. It was freely predicted Saturday at the city hall that there will be a number of other candidates in the race before the lists close in August. The primary date has been set for September 22.

Probably candidates include Alderman William B. Hartsfield, of the third; Councilman Harry York, of the sixth, and Councilman John White, of the fourth.

Spring Accents the Charm of Avondale Estates

The New Lake Section Has Caught the Public Fancy--

SPRINGTIME paints pictures no mortal hand can copy---and with its deft, colorful touches is emphasizing to thousands the irresistible appeal of Avondale Estates.

For here are the cherished elements of an ideal home---blended to perfection---unsurpassed in all the South.

The new Lake Section, in particular, has caught the public fancy, and with amazingly good reasons!

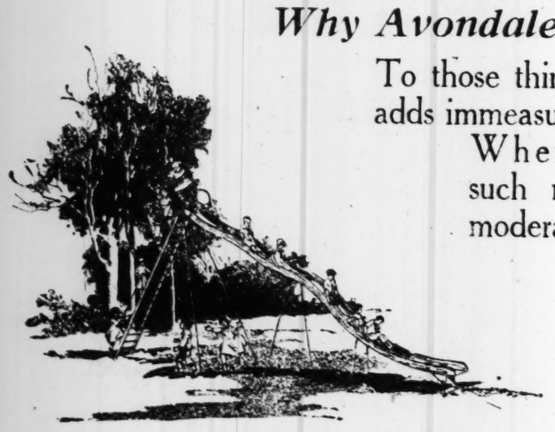

The enthusiasm with which its new opening has been greeted is unshakeable proof that those who plan new homes can not overlook Avondale Estates.

For Avondale Estates is close in, but twenty minutes from Five Points by motor, thirty by express trolley on the main Stone Mountain line. It is supplied with every metropolitan comfort and convenience---a city at the city's gates.

Why Avondale Is Great

To those things Avondale adds immeasurably!

Where else --- at such remarkably moderate prices---

can you own your home in the midst of all the pleasures of out-of-doors? With boating, swimming, fishing, almost in your own front yard; with a splendid golf course almost within a stone's throw; with well-stocked riding stables and miles of winding bridle paths; with a swimming pool, large, picturesque and excellently appointed; with tennis courts and athletic fields of every kind; with acres on acres of parks and with youngsters' playgrounds more completely equipped than any south of Philadelphia.

Avondale's residents can answer the call of Spring or any other season that lures to the great outdoors.

A Reality!

Avondale Estates is not a vision, it is a tangible reality, already acclaimed by all Atlanta, by home seekers and by real estate men who have "grown up" with local realty values and conditions.

Avondale Gardens and Dairy

W. B. Deckner, one of the South's foremost horticulturists, has personal supervision of the Avondale Gardens, where every variety of vegetable is being grown—and supplied to the residents of Avondale at actual cost of production.

J. T. Cain, a dairy expert of years' experience, is in charge of the Avondale Dairies, where thirty blooded Jersey cows supply the citizens of Avondale with freshest milk and cream.

More evidence of Avondale's completeness!

A Future Already Assured

One who observes what is now at Avondale can not fail to visualize its future. Much has already been achieved, but the wonders you now see are but a glimpse of the Avondale-to-be---a model city of 15,000 people.

Values are rising. Prices must inevitably follow. The remarkably low sums for which lots are now obtainable are positively startling, and those who purchase now are bound to profit greatly. Now, while prices are low and Avondale is surging ahead, is the time for the pioneer---always the man to profit most.

If it is a home you seek, where can Avondale be surpassed? If an investment, where is enhancement more certain?

Be one of those to invest while such remarkable prices are in force---Visit Avondale today!

Our downtown offices are now open—at 169-171 Peachtree Street, corner of Ellis.

APPEAL TO YOUTH MADE BY LEADERS

Birmingham, Ala., April 17.—(AP)—Modern youths, with seemingly unconventional mannerisms, and often seeking freedom by daring and adventure, is no worse—possibly not so bad—as young folks of another day, half a score of speakers agreed here today at the International Council of Religious Education. It was youth's day at the convention and the vast audience sat as if spellbound at times under bursts of oratory on the part of widely known youthful religious leaders.

The present generation is striving for truth and is not so "jazz mad" as sometimes pictured, it was pointed out in the general sentiment of those participating in the program.

The girl of today is not always immoral because she is unconventional as older persons understand the term, declared Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of Chicago. She said that "intellectual levels are much more permanent than physical attraction and spiritual life is the greatest of all."

Mrs. Overton urged young men and young women to establish relationship on the intellectual and spiritual levels of life, "and to give to the world a citizenship that will aid in solving its problems."

"The instincts and impulses of the vast majority of the young people of America are wholesome," said Dr. Edmund D. Soper, dean of religion at Duke university, Durham, N. C.

Youth is speaking in no uncertain terms in matters of religion, declared Stanley High, of New York city. In his opinion young people are asking for a demonstrable religion which may be judged less in terms of profession than in terms of action. Whether tides of new thought and new interest may be helpful or destructive to youth, he said, depended largely upon the attitude of the older generation. He foresaw in American youth a great host that may be depended upon to lead the world if the sympathy and understanding of adults are rightly applied.

The sessions of the international council will continue through tomorrow night.

GEORGIA ECLECTIC BODY CONVENES HERE

The sixtieth annual two-day convention of the Georgia Eclectic Medical association is scheduled to get underway in the ballroom of the Kimball house at 10 o'clock Wednesday.

The session will be presided over by Dr. John Q. Brantley, president, who is to deliver an address in response to welcome addresses by Mayor Walter A. Sims and Colonel Robert Lee Avery. Dr. Luther P. Baker, a former member of the Atlanta city council, is the secretary-treasurer.

The association is to be in session Wednesday and Thursday afternoon, with the election of officers featuring the last sessions.

The committee on entertainment has arranged several features for amusement of delegates and there is to be a banquet Wednesday night in the Kimball.

The session is to be featured by addresses and lectures by visiting materia medica, the most important of which is to be one on "Painless Cross-Eye Operation" by Dr. John Powell, Atlanta eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, who has served for five terms as president of the state association.

MAGAZINE TO PRINT BAINBRIDGE SCENES

Bainbridge, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Views of Bainbridge and Decatur county will be featured in a forthcoming issue of the National Geographic Magazine, Clifton Adams, of Washington, D. C., official photographer for the monthly, having visited here recently in the interest of the project.

Pictures were taken of some of the fine live stock farms in the country, while many views were obtained from the beautiful lakes and streams that abound in Decatur county.

Avondale's Business Block Recalls Scenes in Shakespeare's England

Providing room for seventeen business establishments, Avondale's new business block will be completed within ninety days' time. This feature of Atlanta's new $10,000,000 suburban city is considered one of the finest examples of English architecture in the United States. It represents in land and buildings an investment of $250,000. The above photograph is taken from the painting of Neal Robinson, architect. The list of concerns already in operation or soon to be established includes: Rogers, Atlantic & Pacific, and Piggly Wiggly groceries, a 5-10-and-25-cent store, well equipped barber shop, shoe repair shop, automobile agency, feed and grain store, Avondale Tea Room, filling stations, a hardware store, and others. Top floors will be leased as offices to dentists, doctors and other professional men.

EDUCATION LEADERS SPEAK HERE MONDAY

Miss Mary MacSkimmon, president of the National Education association, and Miss Mary Baker, of Atlanta, president of the American Federation of Teachers, will address a gathering of Atlanta and Fulton county teachers at a meeting Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Fulton High school auditorium.

MISS MARY MacSKIMMON.

The speakers will appear under the auspices of the Atlanta-Fulton county unit of the Georgia Educational association, headed by Miss Maude Rhodes, and the Fulton County Teachers' association, of which Boyd Taylor is president.

Miss MacSkimmon arrived Saturday in Atlanta from Macon, where she had delivered one of the principal addresses at the annual meeting of the Georgia Educational association. She will make a tour of educational institutes of the city while here.

Miss Barker is principal of the John B. Gordon school and is a leader in educational circles of the

SHRINERS LAY PLANS FOR GAINESVILLE TRIP

Potentate Thomas C. Law, Past Potentate Charles A. Bowen, Assistant Director Ernest Brown and Oriental Decorator Virgil Shepard visited Gainesville last week and completed arrangements for the pilgrimage of Yaarab temple to that Oasis on Friday, April 30.

Potentate Law reports that the Gainesville Shrine club and citizens have planned to decorate the city and are arranging to make the visit of Yaarab nobility a big event in that section of the Desert of North Georgia.

The Southern railway will run a special train for nobles and their ladies only, leaving Atlanta Terminal station at 9 o'clock, Atlanta time, fare for the round trip being $1.50. Potentate Law will be escorted on the pilgrimage by his divan, and all five of the organizations. On arrival in Gainesville there will be a street parade, followed by a series of concerts by Yaarab's Million-Dollar band, the chanters, and oriental band, and drills by the patrol.

The ceremonial session will be held at Riverside academy at 3:30 o'clock, followed by a barbecue at the Country club at 6 o'clock, and dancing on the public square at 8 p. m. Ample preparation is being made by the Gainesville Shrine club to care for the nobility and ladies, and Potentate Law urges all who can to make the pilgrimage.

Applications for membership at this ceremonial must be in possession of Recorder Argard on April 20, accompanied by a check for $117.

FLORIDA PUSHES DRIVE FOR BUILDING AT EXPO

Enthusiastic over the assured success of the drive of the American Legion of Florida and the Florida State Chamber of Commerce to raise $200,000 for the construction of the "Florida palace building" in which products of that state will be exhibited at the Sesquicentennial International exposition to be held from July 1 to December 1 at Philadelphia, F. K. Ricksecker, of Jacksonville, arrived Wednesday in Atlanta en route to Pennsylvania to confer with fair officials.

Following this conference, he will return to Florida to press the campaign for funds for the Florida building, on which ground was broken April 15. He is in charge of disposition of space in the state's building at the exposition.

Florida exhibits will cost over $1,000,000 and the building itself will be valued at more than $500,000, it is said. Dr. Ricksecker declared that many of the cities of Florida have already over-subscribed their respective quotas, but that some of them apparently are not aware of the tremendous advertising value of the exposition and are lagging.

"John W. Martin, governor of Florida; high state officials, Herman Dann, president of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce; Charles E. Harris, of the Florida Legion, and others have strongly commended the drive and are solidly behind the movement," Mr. Ricksecker stated. "We feel that this is a proposition Florida cannot affford to miss, and we have pledged our best efforts in the campaign to raise the fund.

"Roy A. Benjamin, Jacksonville architect, has been engaged to make drawings of the Florida palace, and the People's Bank of Jacksonville has been appointed escrow agent and trustee for the Florida building fund.

"Exhibits from all over the United States and many foreign countries will be in place when the famous Liberty Bell peals out in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of American independence. The toal cost of the exhibit buildings will aggregate $25,000,000. Brazil, Japan, Austria, Serbia, Egypt, Haiti, France, Belgium, England and other countries have entered exhibits in the exposition.

"A leading Florida nursery has offered flowers and $1,000 to decorate our state's building and other large firms are contributing in order that Florida may be fittingly represented."

WOMAN WHOSE PROFILE USED ON DOLLAR, DEAD

Philadelphia, April 17.—(AP)—Miss Anna W. Williams, retired public school teacher, whose profile as the "Goddess of Liberty" is stamped on the silver dollar, deid at her home today. She was 68.

It was with great difficulty that she was prevailed upon to give sittings to the artist. Only upon condition that her identity should not be revealed would Miss Williams consent to have her likeness stamped upon the new silver dollar the treasury had decided to mint.

For two years the incognito of "Miss Liberty," the woman's face on the dollar, remained a secret in the keeping of the government and the artist.

Then came offers of stage engagements, all of which Miss Williams rejected. She consented, for $60 a month, to teach at the House of Refuge until she accepted in 1891 the position of teacher of kindergarten philosophy in the Girls' Normal school.

Avondale Soon To Complete Business Block Enlargement

With a number of business concerns awaiting completion of the work, eager for a start of their tenancy, enlargement of the business block of Avondale, the new $10,000,000 suburban city, has been undertaken and is being pressed to an early close, according to announcement Saturday by G. F. Willis, owner of the model development.

The enlarged block, land and buildings, representing a $250,000 investment, will maintain in every detail the distinctive Old English type of architecture that has made the original business section of the new suburb the object of widespread admiration. It will provide space for 17 business establishments, supplying every convenience of shopping and service. Leases have been closed for the additional space, in every instance an applicant being chosen with regard to standing for service and quality.

The enlarged block is designed as a classic Old English setting for a modern, thriving business street, an arrangement said to be unique in city planning. It is built according to the idea of Mr. Willis to avoid the drab and conventional appearance of the ordinary business section, an unattractive appearance, usually, whether in large communities or small.

With the thought of making Avondale Estates a city of homes attractive in every detail, the business block was designed to embellish the setting, rather than to be regarded as a necessary but unsightly evil.

The number of establishments operating at Avondale Estates will be doubled by the enlargement of the business block, and their range will be widened to include practically every commodity and service. The list of concerns already in operation or to be established as soon as quarters are provided by the addition, includes the Avondale pharmacy, one of the most handsomely appointed and complete suburban drug stores in the Atlanta region; a department store that has reported uniformly excellent business, three chain grocery stores—Rogers, Atlantic & Pacific, and Piggly Wiggly—by which reports of record business have been made; Robinson Bros. and other grocery stores and markets, the Avondale tea room, operated by Miss Mary Norman and Miss Margaret Burge, which is to move into larger quarters in the new block ,to be succeeded in its present location by the L. S. Livsey electrical shop; and a tiled six-chair barber shop, operated by G. E. Cooper, proprietor of a chain of shops in Atlanta, which is to have an associated beauty parlor.

There is to be also a dry cleaning and pressing establishment of modern equipment, an electrically equipped shoe repair shop, with motor-operated devices; a hardware store, a five-ten-twenty-five cent store, to be operated by L. C. Breland, formerly head of the purchasing department of the F. & W. Grand store; a wholesale and retail feed and grain store, an automobile agency with garage and accessory and repairs departments, and two filling stations. One of these stations—that of the Standard Oil company—has been for some time operating successfully in the classic structure erected for its occupancy.

Second floor offices of the block are leased by professional men, including dentists and doctors. This upstairs space houses also executive and sales offices of Avondale Estates.

The addition to the present business block will extend west in Avondale road. The stores in operation now are in Avondale road and the Stone Mountain highway.

The addition was made necessary by the rapid growth of Avondale Estates. The enlarged business block is part of a great program of expansion that involves expenditure of $1,000,000 and includes erection of 100 new homes, construction of three and a half miles of paving, with sewerage and water mains, and general beautification and development of the second unit. This program is for completion in 1926.

EMORY CARS LEAD NOW TO WEST VIEW

Change in routing Emory university cars to bring them into town over Ponce de Leon avenue will become effective today, according to announcement of the Georgia Railway & Power company Saturday. Inbound cars will turn off Moreland on to Ponce de Leon, proceeding to town via Ponce de Leon, Peachtree and Forsyth streets, thence out to Walker and West View. The new line will be called the Ponce de Leon-Emory line.

The new arrangement, however, will not affect service to the Moreland avenue section between Ponce de Leon avenue and Little Five Points, as a branch of the Inman Park line, to be known as the Inman Park-Moreland avenue line, will provide the same adequate service now in force.

Hays Warns Against Fake Movie Schools

New York, April 17.—(AP)—A warning to youthful dreamers and speculators in easy money schemes against fake moving picture schools, studios and movie stock propositions, was issued through the New York Evening Post today by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, as man for the film industry.

"Trading upon its inherent qualities and wide appeal, impostors are attempting to defraud the public," he said, "through misleading references to the success which has accompanied the growth of the motion picture industry."

Victims of fake schools of acting, said Mr. Mays, include many who innocently give up their earnings such as factory girls, subway guards, storekeepers and widows, for a hopeless dream of fame and fortune through stardom in pictures.

POSTAL INSPECTORS SOLVE INDIANA MAIL ROBBERY

Chicago, April 17.—(AP)—The $37,000 mail truck robbery at Indiana Harbor, Ind., Wednesday, has been solved, Grant B. Miller, postoffice inspector declared today. The loot has not been recovered and the possessor is not known.

The same man who held up the truck and fled with the loot and the truck driver into Illinois, later held up a physician, stole his car, was pursued by Deputy Sheriff Walter Fisher, of Mokena, Ills., shot Fisher fatally and wounded himself, Miller declares. When he stopped at a roadhouse near Maywood others are believed to have learned of his robbery, killed him, took his body to Broadview and fled with the money.

The body, found in a ditch near Broadview, has not been identified.

STATE AND COUNTY REGISTRATION OPEN

State and county registration books for the general election on November 3 are open in the office of W. S. Richardson, Fulton county registrar, and will close on May 3, according to an announcement Saturday.

Under the law registration books shall close six months before the general election. The state primary will be held on September 8 and everyone desiring to vote in this election must register by May 3. After this date those who have not paid their 1925 state and county taxes will be stricken from the registration list, according to Mr. Richardson.

TURNER CLUB GIRLS ATTEND CHAUTAUQUA

Ashburn, Ga., April 17.—(Special.) One hundred canning club girls of Turner county, under the council of Mrs. May Betts, home demonstration agent, were guests of the Kiwanis club, board of trade and Woman's club at the Redpath chatauqua held here this week.

These three civic organizations purchased season tickets for all of the club girls of the county and provided transportation for them to and from the chatauqua.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

The Booker Washington High school will present its second annual fashion revue at the Crystal theater Monday night. More than two hundred students will participate.

Arrangements for the summer session at Atlanta university have been practically completed and circulars have been printed and will be sent to applicants. Professor George Howe will serve as director and the faculty will include two new men who have not previously taught in Atlanta university.

Rev. Henry Allen Boyd, of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the National Baptist publishing board, will speak at Mount Vernon Baptist church, corner West Hunter and Mangum streets this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Robert Bryant, a student of the Booker T. Washington junior-senior high school, of Atlanta, has been for two successive years the winner of the loving cup offered by the Journal Ready Writers' club for the best composition written by high school students. In March, 1926, his composition was pronounced the best among 1,500 compositions, the title being "Why Bonds Should Be Voted for Atlanta."

Field Secretary Jesse O. Thomas left the city Friday night for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. The following cities are included in his itinerary: Memphis, Tenn., Little Rock, and Hot Springs, Ark., Shreveport, La., Marshall, Dallas, Waco, Fort Worth, Austin, Houston, Galveston and San Antonio, Texas; Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Muscogee, Okla.

QUIET CITY COUNCIL SESSION PREDICTED

A quiet session of city council at its regular meeting Monday was seen Saturday when only routine matters were scheduled to come before that body for consideration.

The only measure of especial importance expected to come up is a proposal of Councilman John White, chairman of the parks committee, to ask the city to provide a $25,000 fund for construction of a large greenhouse at Grant park, and to ask county commissioners to post a similar amount to aid in this work.

The resolution, which bore the signatures of a majority of the parks committee, asks that the June finance sheet include the city's part, and that Councilmen C. L. Chosewood and Harry York, and L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks, be appointed a committee to present the matter to the commission meeting the first Wednesday in May.

C. E. Kauffman, chief draftsman in the construction depatment, also will be authorized to begin at once to prepare drawings of the proposed greenhouse if council and the mayor approve the resolution.

Alderman Charles M. Ford, of the tenth, stated he will ask council for an appropriation of $9,000 for construction of a 12-inch water main on Allene avenue. This was passed Friday at a meeting of the waterworks committee of council. The money would be taken from a $200,000 bond fund.

He also will ask that Avon avenue be graded from Sylvan road to Allene avenue in order to connect these thoroughfares and to enable the waterworks department to lay water mains in this street.

WHOLESALE PRICES DECREASED IN MARCH

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—A decline of 2 1-4 per cent in wholesale prices from February to March was reported today by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The weighted index, based on prices of 404 commodities, declined from 155.0 to 151.5 during the period, and the latter figure compared with 161.0 in March, 1925.

Declines in grains, hogs, sheep, lambs, cotton, eggs, tobacco and wool brought the average for farm products down four per cent, while all other groups except house furnishing goods, which showed no change, declined from a fraction of one per cent in the case of metals, building materials, chemicals and drugs, to 2 1-2 per cent for fuels and 3 1-2 for articles classed as miscellaneous. Of the 404 commodities considered, declines were registered for 174 and increases for 52, the remainder being unchanged.

THOMASVILLE PLANS FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Thomasville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—The members of John B. Gordon chapter, U. D. C., have arranged to observe Memorial day, April 26, with the usual dinner given to the Confederate veterans of the city and county.

This dinner was formerly given on January 19, General Lee's birthday, but the uncertainty of the weather at that date and the increasing feebleness of some of the veterans have made it necessary to change the time of the dinner to a date when spring weather can be counted upon.

Short talks by some of the veterans and the decoration of the graves of the soldiers of the civil war who are interred here will probably complete the program for the day.

MOTHER!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother—A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.—(adv.)

G. W. LANKFORD SEEKS COMMISSION POST

George W. Lankford, member of the house of representatives and prominent lawyer of Lyons, Ga., and a noted figure in Georgia's legislative circles for the past four or five years, Saturday night, announced as a candidate for the Georgia public service commission. His statement follows:

"Having given the suggestion made to me mature consideration, I have reached the conclusion that I will offer for election to the Georgia public service commission for the place now held by Orrin Roberts, of Monroe, who I am informed will not offer to succeed himself.

(Signed) "GEORGE W. LANKFORD."

Mr. Lankford has served three terms in the senate from Toombs county and served as a member of the house of representatives during the last special session of the legislature in the place of Representative Ernest Wimberly who resigned some time ago.

He has been connected with state affairs for some time, and is thoroughly familiar with many of its phases. He is a brother of Congressman W. C. Lankford, of the eleventh district of Georgia.

STATE STREET SCHOOL LEADS ATTENDANCE

State Street school with a percentage of 98.5, led attendance of Atlanta public schools for the week ending April 16, according to records compiled Saturday in the office of M. E. Coleman, director of the bureau of statistics.

Four other schools setting high averages are Peeples, 96.7 per cent; Bass, 96.6; Pryor, 96.4, and Haygood, 95.3.

VALDOSTA READY FOR STATE PRESS

Valdosta, Ga., April 17.—(Special) Everything is in readiness for the meeting of members of the Georgia Press association, which will convene here Tuesday, April 20, and remain until Wednesday, April 21, when the body will entrain for St. Petersburg, Tampa and Cuba.

The editors will be welcomed here at a dinner at the Woman's building and the address of welcome will be delivered by Mayor W. D. Peeples of this city, with a response by Mr. John N. Holder, of Jefferson.

The program for the evening will be brilliant as well as artistic, consisting of musical features by the Valdosta double male quartet, the double female quartet and choruses; classic dances and other features by the college girls from the Georgia State Woman's college.

The business session Wednesday morning will be held at the Strand theater and will begin with an invocation and selections by the college glee club entertainers. Next will be a talk, "Protecting the Print Shop," by Editor E. H. Griffin, of Bainbridge, followed by a solo by Miss Marjorie Turner, of Statesboro. The "Southeastern Fair" is the subject of a talk by Stewart Gelders, followed by a selection by the college glee club.

Osborn to Speak.

The big event of the morning session will be an address, "Georgia," by former Governor Chase S. Osborne, of Michigan.

At 1 o'clock Wednesday the editors will be entertained at a fish fry and barbecue at the Twin Lakes pavilion. The welcome address will be delivered by Burton Lee Mank with a response by Editor Charles E. Brown of The Cordele Dispatch. Three-minute speeches will be delivered by Editor William L. Harris, of Marietta; Mrs. Nora Smith, of Ashburn, and former President Charles B. Roundtree, of Wrightsville.

A feature of the meeting at Twin Lakes will be an auto trip over that portion of the county, visiting Lake Alcyon, the famous estate of Dr. L. G. Hardman.

The program for the evening will be held at the Georgia State Woman's college where a dinner will be served by the young women of that institution. The address of welcome will be delivered by one of the members of the college classes and the response will be made by Mrs. Virginia Folhill Price, of Louisville, Ga. Short talks will be made by Editors Lovelace Eve, of Americus; Trox Bankston, of Covington, and other visitors.

Valdosta people are cooperating in an effort to make the occasion as pleasant as it possibly can be for the visiting newspaper men.

APPLING ROAD BOND ISSUE IS VALIDATED

Baxley, Ga., April 17.—(Special.) Appling county's $240,000 bond issue for paving state and federal aid roads was validated today by Judg J. P. Highsmith, of the superior court.

The first road to be paved in this county will be federal highway No. 1, from the Altamaha river to Baxley. Construction was begun this week on the state bridge which will span this river, connecting with a concrete road soon to be built by Toombs county.

Appling county's roads are in better condition than they have ever been, and with paved roads this county will rank with the more progressive counties of the state.

Tourist traffic over the Cotton Belt highway and federal highway No. 1 continues to pass through Baxley daily.

"And we thought a grand too large!"

THE Grand piano was the mark of the fine family in the older homes. But everything in modern life tends toward the miniature, and in the new apartments the Upright piano was substituted for the Grand merely because it fitted into a smaller space.

Now we have the Grandette. Move out your Upright, put in the Grandette, and you will find that you have taken up scarcely an inch more of floor space.

Oldest Proprietary Remedy Celebrates Success Built On Newspaper Advertising

S. S. S. Company Prints Historic Review of Its Progress Up To Hundredth Anniversary.

In observation of the 100th anniversary of the transfer of the formula for making Swift's Specific from the Indians to the white race, the Swift Specific company of Atlanta has prepared an impressive booklet, beautifully printed and bound, with numerous original drawings relating the progress the world has made in various lines of activity during this period.

Copies of this souvenir booklet, observing the centennial of this famous old and established remedy, have been received by The Constitution from J. Clinton Bagwell, advertising manager of the Swift Specific company. On the cover page of the booklet, printed in colors, is the figure of a pioneer scout, of the days of 1826, looking on a scene of modern progress, as exemplified by railroads, gigantic ocean liners, skyscrapers, airplanes and industries and various transportation methods.

The original S. S. S. was a treasured formula of the Cherokee Indians and was bequeathed to the white race in the year 1826, according to the booklet. Pictures are printed in the booklet showing the transportation methods of 1826, which included stage coaches and ox carts for freight. The progress of the country is traced through the years and the progress of the manufacture of this remedy also is traced.

Shows Railroads.

After the stage coach scenes, come scenes on rivers when steamboat travel by rivers was popular. Next come photographs of the early railroad trains, the early steamships and on down the times to the gigantic ocean liners and limited de luxe passenger trains of the present day. The pictures also show air planes and automobile transportation systems.

Photographs are printed showing early drug stores which handled S. S. S. nearly 100 years ago, notably the Scott drug store of Richmond, Va. This is noted as the oldest drug store in the United States selling S. S. S., the oldest proprietary remedy.

Many views are printed showing the interior of the big Atlanta plant of the Swift Specific company in which the remedy is now manufactured on a stupendous scale. Methods are shown whereby roots and herbs used in the remedy are gathered, cleaned and prepared for bottling.

Used by Indians.

For many generations the Cherokee Indians used the formula of S. S. S. before it was turned over to Captain J. L. Dennard, of Perry, Houston county, Georgia, says the booklet. The prescription was delivered to Captain Dennard in writing. Captain Dennard made use of the remedy on his own plantation with much success. After the war between the states, Captain Dennard sold the prescription to Colonel C. T. Swift, a leading Georgian, who in 1870 sold a controlling interest in the enterprise to Hunt, Rankin & Lamar, wholesale druggists of Macon and Atlanta. The Swift Specific company then was incorporated, Colonel H. J. Lamar becoming president; Colonel Swift, treasurer, and J. W. Rankin, secretary and manager. The capital stock of this company is still owned exclusively within the families of the originators.

Success in merchandising the remedy is attributed to the use of newspapers as advertising media by the company. The makers of S. S. S. tried all modes of advertising before they came finally to the newspaper.

The press, they declared, was the one medium which never failed to get results. Today, in 4,430 newspapers of the United States, S. S. S. is a steady advertiser.

The S. S. S. plant here at Hunter and Butler streets is four stories in height. At the rear of the second floor are 60 vats with a capacity of 3,000,000 bottles of S. S. S. The company operates a large business department in this building as well as the regular bottling plant where S. S. S. is made, the entire process being completed in one building.

CONSTANT CURLING AND WAVING RUINS HAIR

Girls just must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the luster, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 35-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless, and fading hair.

"Danderine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Danderine" is pleasant and easy to use.—(adv.)

WILLIAMS MADE MAJOR GENERAL

Colonel Ezekiel J. Williams, of the United States regular army, has been appointed a major general of the national guard under special order of the military department of the state, and by authority of the president of the United States has been assigned by Governor Clifford Walker to command the Thirtieth division, composed of national guard troops of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee. Governors of the other three states comprised in the division joined in requesting that this appointment be made, it is stated.

MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAMS.

The distinguished regular was sworn in as a major general of the national guard on Wednesday.

In seeking the most desirable regular army officer to take command of this national guard area, comprising the national troops of four states, adjutants general and other officials of each of the four states agreed on the selection of General Williams, and it was on their requests that permission for him to take this position in the national guard was granted by the war department. It was felt by the military authorities in all four of the states that, while other desirable officers were available, none was so well qualified by training and experience, to fill the position as Colonel Williams.

Native Georgian.

General Williams is a native Georgian, having been born in Tifton, Ga., and for the past four years has served as executive officer of the militia bureau in Washington, a position which is to the national guard what the chief of staff is to the regular army. He was chief of staff of the Thirty-sixth division, composed of national guard troops from Texas and Oklahoma, during the world war, and during the past 20 years he has been on duty with the national guard in various states.

As a result of his war service he received the distinguished service medal from the United States, the croix de guerre with palm and was made an officer of the Legion of Honor by the French government.

Headquarters of the Thirtieth division, over which General Williams will take command, will be located at 121 Capitol square, Atlanta.

General Williams entered the regular army during the Spanish-American war and also saw active service during the Philippine insurrection, as well as in the world war.

By reason of his close association with the national guard during his career in the army, he has had unusual opportunities to witness its development as a defensive arm of the nation. He stated Friday that he had been deeply impressed with the guard's increased efficiency in organization, training and discipline in recent years and, since passage of the national defense act, he said, it has exceeded even the fondest hopes of its own officers, even, in the manner in which it has taken its place as an important component of the national defense organization.

Will Name Staff.

The staff of the new commanding general of the Thirtieth division, N. G., will be distributed among the four states comprising the corps area and will be appointed as soon as it is practical to call a conference of the adjutants general of these states.

The placing of a regular army officer in command of a national guard division, covering an area including four states, is somewhat of an experiment on the part of the war department, and it is considered a signal honor to General Williams that he has been chosen to be the first regular army officer to receive such an assignment in peace time.

His appointment received the full approval of the adjutants general of the four states concerned, as well as the four governors, and it is believed that he will do much to coordinate national guard units of all states into a cohesive whole, ready for any emergency.

GREENVILLE TOTS SEE CITY SIGHTS IN SCHOOL TRUCK

Atlanta has thousands of visitors every year but few ever came to this city and expressed more wonder than did a truck load of school children from Greenville, who came to Atlanta Saturday. It was their first trip to the city and their first glimpse of paved streets, street cars, high buildings and other everyday sights for city folks.

They were brought to Atlanta in a school truck, driven by Bradley Lancaster, who promised to bring the children to Atlanta last fall when school opened. Although three of the older children had visited Atlanta before, seventeen others from 6 years to 10 years old had to stretch their imagination to believe all they saw.

One of the biggest thrills given the children while in Atlanta was a ride on one of the fast elevators in one of Atlanta's skyscrapers. They were taken through Grant park, the capitol building and to other places of interest.

The children live on farms in Meriwether and attend the Greenville schools. Only a few of those making the trip had been out of the county before this trip. Accompanying the children were Mr. Lancaster, the driver, his wife and Roy Phillips, of Greenville.

Hardware Dealers Come To Atlanta for May Meeting

Between 1,000 and 1,200 visitors, including retail hardware dealers and their families from Alabama, Florida, Tennessee and other parts of Georgia, will attend the annual convention and exhibit of the Southeastern Retail Hardware and Implement association in Atlanta, May 10, 11 and 12, according to announcement Saturday by Walter Harlan, secretary of the organization.

"This year's convention offers visitors and families plenty of amusements; there will be addresses on constructive topics which will be well worth while," said Mr. Harlan.

"Among speakers on the program are R. W. Hatcher, of Milledgeville, Ga., president of the National Retail Hardware association; Hamp Williams, of Hot Springs, Ark., former president of the national association and one of the best known retail dealers in the United States. A number of other noteworthy figures in the trade will talk.

"Atlanta always draws maximum attendance when these meetings are held here. This year we have arranged in advance for a rate of one and a half fares for the round trip, which undoubtedly will result in increasing the crowd greatly."

The entertainment features of the convention will include a theater party, musical program and dance, luncheon for visiting women, automobile tours and other events.

WALTER HARLAN,
Secretary of the Southeastern Retail Hardware and Implement association.

The main exhibit which will be held in the auditorium in conjunction with convention sessions, promise to surpass any previous efforts of the organization, Mr. Harlan said. Scores of boths containing interesting and instructive exhibits already have been listed here.

Perishables Tariff Filed by Railroads Suspended 3 Months

The recent tariff filed by certain railroads for a refrigeration charge on less than car load shipments of fruit and vegetables in the Southeastern territory, to become effective April 15, has been suspended by the interstate commerce commission until August 13, next, the Georgia public service commission announced Saturday.

Meantime an investigation has been ordered on the proposed refrigeration charge, hearing of which, it is announced, will begin next May 17 before Examiner Money of the interstate commerce commission.

The Georgia commission filed a protest against the suspension of the proposed charge for refrigeration service, claiming that it gives a service not now available to the small grower and shipper of fruits and vegetables in the state, and as a consequence forces the small producer either to ship by express, which makes it almost prohibitive, or to sell his yield on the local market at "arbitrary" prices.

MUSIC WEEK EVENTS FOLLOW OPERA HERE

Musical events to fill each day of National Music week, May 2-8, have already been arranged, it was announced Saturday. On several days—morning, afternoon and evening hours all will be devoted to special concerts, contests or recitals. Mrs. Susie C. Wailes, president of the woman's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, has observance of the week in charge.

Special sermons on the place of music in religion by ministers of a score of churches, with choir music arranged especially in observance of the spirit of the week is to launch the program Sunday morning, May 2. A concert by Atlanta choirs and the American Guild of Organists at the city auditorium and another concert by the Elks Royal Purple band at Lakewood Amusement park will be features of Sunday afternoon.

An amateur band contest, concluding in a military review and with a massed band of nearly 500 pieces playing the "Star-Spangled Banner" is set for Monday night, May 3. A gala concert in which the Atlanta Music club chorus, and leading soloists of the city are to play at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium will be held Tuesday night, May 4.

The Atlanta Music club will present a morning concert Wednesday with the presentation of a play based on Mendelssohn's youth, staged by the Atlanta Drama league, as a novel feature. Miss Sarah Wells will present a concert at Steinway hall Wednesday night.

Borden's Southern Factory Successfully Condenses Milk

Dairying in the south took a decided rise when the Borden company, pioneer condensing concern of America, opened the first southern branch recently at Ctarksville, Miss. Reports made through local distributors of the Borden products show an almost unparalleled success on account of the fact that the giant condensery is located near the source of the product.

Diversification in crops and industries took on a new aspect, when hundreds of citizens from many parts of the south visited Starkville on the opening day, and it is predicted that many new plants will be placed by this and other large concerns in different sections of the south. Dairying, as a consequence of the marked success of this plant, is expected to become an even more important factor in the south's development, leading farmers declare.

Equipment Is Modern.

The Starkville branch of the Borden concern, is fitted to produce all Borden products, was constructed at a cost of about $500,000. Only the most modern and up to date equipment was installed and every effort to produce a superior brand of Borden commodity is being made. Success of the southern venture was assured at the outset by the fine spirit of cooperation given heads of the Borden company, and by the fact that no expense was spared in providing everything needed to produce the best milk of its kind.

The new plant is located on the Illinois Central and M. & O. railroads. Large store tanks, vacuum pans, fresh water wells drilled especially to provide pure water to be used in condensing, mammoth cream coolers and separators, labeling machines, hot wells, condensed milk coolers, pumps and drop tanks, boilers and engines are some of the machinery used in the process of condensing the milk.

"It is inevitable that other similar plants will be established in the south and there is at present a great opportunity for such a plant in Georgia," one representative dairyman declared. "Georgia's dairy products rank with the best in the entire country and can easily furnish milk for such a unit. It would be a great benefit to the farmer and help dethrone cotton as king of southern crops—a situation which has cost the south millions of dollars during the past 30 years."

Borden products include evaporated milk, Eagle brand, Dime brand, Magnolia brand, condensed milk, malted milk and others.

The history of the concern reads like a romance and marks the beginning of condensing of milk. In 1851 Gail Borden conceived the idea of sealing condensed forms of milk in order to keep them indefinitely and in order that they could be used conveniently. He started experiments amid the skeptical smiles of a small community in New York state. Today the Borden concern is one of the biggest in the world, and the method he patented in 1856 is still the basis of the world's condensed milk industry.

In 1857, in a little mill town of Connecticut, he made and sold the first condensed milk to the public. At that time it was peddled through the streets of New York in a handbag, and, later, on a push cart.

Then, the war broke out in 1861. The government commandeered the entire output of the little plant, which by that tims had received the financial backing of Jeremiah Milbank, New York financier. The nutritive value of the product was realized by doctors and hospitals were equipped with quantities of the milk. Its popularity spread, and at the present time, condensation of milk is one of the most important food product industries of the United States.

HUNTSVILLE MEN UNDERWRITE COINS

Huntsville, Ala., April 17.—(Special.)—Twenty-five men in Huntsville have underwritten the Madison county quota of Confederate memorial coins and have forwarded through E. D. Johnston, chairman of the Madison county committee, the amount that the quota came to.

The coins will be deposited in the First National bank and as the sale continues, the guarantors will be reimbursed for the advance.

Rose Festival Motorcade Plans Nearing Completion

Practically all arrangements have been completed in a score of Georgia cities and towns between Atlanta and Thomasville to welcome north Georgians who will attend the annual Rose Festival in the latter city Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, April 28-29-30, it was announced Saturday.

Already more than 25 autos with an average of four persons per car have "signed up," according to Frank T. Reynolds, of the Dinkler Hotels company, and Bonnell H. Stone, secretary of the Georgia Forestry association, which meets in Thomasville on the days of the festival.

All along the route plans have been made for the motorcade which leaves this city on the morning of April 28 at 8 o'clock, stopping for brief intervals at many cities and towns where short welcoming programs and hand-shaking will be in order.

All of Tuesday and part of Wednesday will be taken up in the jaunt under tentative plans mapped out by Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Etone. Cars will leave from The Constitution building, the autoists being furnished with road information and maps by The Constitution's road service bureau. The first stop will be at Griffin at 10 o'clock, where 45 minutes will be spent. Zebulon is the next stop for 30 minutes and Thomaston, the point for lunch. An hour and fifteen minutes will be spent and the visitors will arrive at Butler at 2:45 o'clock; Ellaville at 4:15 o'clock and Americus will complete the first day. Tuesday night will be spent in Americus and cars will leave the Windsor hotel at 8 o'clock Wednesday for the last lap of the overland trip. Leesburg is scheduled to be reached at 9:30 o'clock, Albany at 10:30 o'clock, Camilla at noon and Thomasville at 2 o'clock.

Tuesday's mileage will amount to 138 miles, while Wednesday's trip will be 25.3 miles.

Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Stone, treasurer and secretary, respectively, of the state forestry organization, are being aided in plans for the trip by a committee composed of W. Tom Winn, John E. Smith and Guy Woolford. Information concerning the motorcade may be had from either members of the committee. Members Saturday night asked The Constitution to state that persons desiring to make the trip should communicate as early as possible with the committee so that arrangements for meals and lodging may be completed.

The Rose Festival attracts many thousands annually and has been pronounced one of the most beautiful pageants of its kind staged anywhere. Ordinarily, the program covers two days and the city is thronged with visitors.

Additional attractions this year will appeal to many north Georgians interested in forestry and who will visit Thomasville to see the festivities and to attend sessions of the association.

Many Enter Cars.

Up to Saturday night the following had entered cars for the motorcade from Atlanta: Georgia Forestry association, Bonnell Stone in charge; Atlanta Woman's club, Mrs. W. Crenshaw in charge; Dinkler Hotels company, Frank T. Reynolds in charge; Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Cathcart, Southeastern Fair association, A. Brooke, in charge; Athens Chamber of Commerce, Martin Abney in charge and others.

Along the route from Griffin on toward the goal of the trip, cars will be entered from various towns through which the motorcade passes. E. L. Dykes, of Vienna, wired Mr. Reynolds Saturday that several cars from his town would be entered, while chambers of commerce at Griffin, Thomaston and other points are sponsoring the affair and expect to have more than 100 cars in line when the party reaches Thomasville.

Thirty Years of Integrity and Service

ON the eighteenth of April, in 1896—exactly thirty years ago today—there came to Atlanta a boy of eighteen whose sole occupation up to that time had been farming. With no definite work in view—with no knowledge of any profession—that boy, nevertheless, looked confidently towards the city of his choice knowing that his future there could not help but be brighter than on the farm.

HARRY G. POOLE

The thirty years which have elapsed since that time have proved that the faith of that boy—in other words MY faith—was not unfounded. A lowly opening in the undertaking business presented itself and from that opening has developed, step by step, the splendid institution now bearing my name.

Atlanta has been good to me—and I have tried to show my appreciation. I have insisted on serving as I should like to be served and from this true course there has been and will be no departure. It is simply in line with this determination that this, the proudest announcement of my entire career, is made.

Harry Gilbert Poole, Jr., my only son, is now associated with me in the conduct of this business. Through the years to come, we will go on together. His ambition, as mine, is to render an ever-increasing measure of service and with him by my side, the future looks even brighter than at any time in the past.

HARRY G. POOLE, Jr.

And so, on this, the Thirtieth Anniversary of my professional career, do I renew my pledge to the community. By the service we are permitted to render in the future will we show our profound gratitude for all that has come to us in the past.

Hand of Politics Is Seen in Farm Bill Compromise

Coolidge Swing Toward Federal Farm Board Apparently Silenced Western Revolt.

PRESIDENT IS SEEN AS SHREWD WORKER

Action Came Just in Time To Aid Election of His Supporters in Doubtful Territory.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, April 17.—By compromising on farm relief through a proposal that some regard as more than a compromise, President Coolidge has taken the curse off the western farm revolt, which carried its political threat, in timo to aid the election of administration supporters in the doubtful territory this fall.

The president's swing toward the plan for a federal farm board to aid marketing of surplus crops, financed by the government, came late, but apparently it has come in time. Leaders of congress have come forward with assurances that the desired legislation will get through in the few weeks left before adjournment, and are vying with one another in drafting bills, hesitating no longer.

Reveals Shrewdness.

The white house spokesman, when he announced tacit approval of the farm relief proposal which has gained greatest support, revealed once again the shrewd politician that observers here have recognized in Calvin Coolidge. In the nick of time, as usual, he has laid his course along the most propitiate lines.

The president's shifting of position may help him in this "off year," when the wind is apt always to be set against the party in power. That he has shifted his position is apparent, despite efforts to minimize the real nature of the legislation which is proposed. It provides for an out-and-out appropriation from the treasury to aid the marketing of surplus crops, which the president has hitherto opposed in principle, as well as a huge loan fund.

Brookhart Led Revolt.

There is one recent incident, generally overlooked, which probably had some influence on the general trend of events, the ousting of Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, the leading spokesman here of the agrarian revolt, who has gone back to his state figuratively eating fire. It will be recalled in this connection that it was in Iowa that the present farm relief movement originated, at the now well-known Des Moines conference, where bankers and business men were represented as well as farmers.

Events move swiftly here today, following the pronouncement from the white house yesterday. Republican Floor Leader Tilson went to the white house and assured the president that a bill along the lines of that introduced by Representative Tincher, Kansas republican, would be passed at this session. Tincher, himself, called at the white house afterward, thanked the president for indorsement of his plan, and announced afterward that he is willing for modifications which congress regards necessary, so long as the principle of the measure is retained. Senator Capper, of Kansas, leader of the senate farm bloc, introduced a bill similar to the Tincher measure.

COTTON MARKETING TO COST $100,000,000

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—An appropriation of $100,000,000 for the marketing of cotton would be available under the farm relief bill being drafted by Chairman Haugen of the house agriculture committee. Cotton, however, would be exempt from the equalization fee, which would be confined to the first sales of corn, wheat, cattle and swine.

Mr. Haugen virtually had completed the bill tonight.

It would authorize a total appropriation of $250,000,000 out of which the $100,000,000 cotton fund would come, to be administered separately. The remaining $150,000,000 would be used for federal aid in marketing the other basic commodities—corn, wheat, cattle and swine, and possibly wool, beans and some other products.

HUGE FERTILIZER MILL IS PLANNED BY SHOALS BIDDER

American Cyanamide Company Offers To Create $50,000,000 Air Nitrates Corporation.

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—W. B. Bell off the American Cyanamid company today detailed and explained to the Muscle Shoals congressional committee his proposal to operate the shoals property under a 50-year lease.

Mr. Bell was questioned sharply by members of the committee on how far he was willing to go in production of 40,000 tons of nitrogen for fertilizer. It is understood that he agreed to make this amount of fertilizer provided dam number 3, is built to increase the horsepower at dam number 2.

No Decision Reached.

After Mr. Bell left the committee resumed discussion of the bids with the staff of technical advisers but reached no conclusion.

It is understood that each bidder, whose proposal interests the committee, will be called to explain his bid in detail.

The American Cyanamide company in its bid for Muscle Shoals offers to create a corporation known as the Air Nitrates corporation, capitalized at $50,000,000 to operate the property, it became known today.

The company offers to lease Muscle Shoals for 50 years at a rental of 4 per cent of the present investment of the government and 4 per cent on the cost of dam No. 3 if the government will build it.

A subsidiary public utility company would be organized to distribute surplus power or an effort would be made to have it distributed through existing utility corporations.

To Build Storage Dams.

The company expresses a desire for the government to build storage dams above Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee river and lease them at 4 per cent, but if the government does not do it, the company wants the right to construct them. The bid stipulates that no dam construction shall be permitted on the Tennessee river that would detract from the power at Muscle Shoals.

Construction of dam No. 3 is made mandatory in the bid and the company does not agree to make more than 20,000 tons of fixed nitrogen annually until 200,000 horsepower is made available at dam No. 2.

The company agrees to make the fertilizer at cost plus 8 per cent profit. The cost would include 6 per cent on the capital invested by the company and 70 per cent would be charged off annually on buildings constructed by the company to cover depreciation.

Would Move Plants.

The company points out that it now has plants in the east producing nitrogen and a part of them would be moved to Muscle Shoals. The company agrees to add plant facilities at Muscle Shoals for the production of nitrogen to reach a capacity of 10,000 tons during the third year and as demands require the company will continue to increase production until 40,000 tons annually are produced.

The company points out that it is unwilling to continue to produce nitrogen if it cannot be sold, but agrees to maintain a reserve supply of 2,500 tons for market needs and continue production as the market demand requires.

It asks that part of the power not needed for fertilizer production be alloacted to "local industry at or near Muscle Shoals." It points out the possibility of difficulty in obtaining franchises for transmission lines which are in the hands of the Alabama public utility commission.

SECRECY VEILS HERRIN'S PROBE OF BLOODY RIOT

Press Barred From Inquest When Witnesses Refuse To Testify for Publication.

FEAR STILL EXISTS, CORONER REVEALS

Detachment of Troops Leave City But Others Will Remain Until Tuesday's Election.

BY ORRVILLE DWYER
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Herrin, Ill., April 17.—Witnesses called to testify at the inquest into last Tuesday's killings today refused to tell what they knew unless their names and the nature of their testimony be withheld from publication. They told Coroner George Bell they were afraid something might happen to them if what they testified to became generally known.

The coroner at once requested all newspaper men to leave the inquiry. He made the request after a short consultation with State's Attorney Arlie Boswell, who agreed the press must be barred. After the newspaper men had retired the inquest proceeded and during the recess no one would talk.

The state's attorney and the coroner even refused to tell the nature of the testimony.

Inquiry Is Secret.

"We regret we are forced to close this inquiry to the newspapers," Coroner Bell said. "But if we are to get at the truth of these killings we must have witnesses who are unafraid. With conditions as they are in Williamson county we already have the question of prejudice on one side or the other to deal with, and we must certainly avoid the element of fear as much as possible.

"This is done because we had to do it. There is no attempt at whitewash, we are simply taking the only way to get the truth."

It is understood, however, that the testimony given today was simply that of eyewitnesses of the shooting in which three klansmen and three anti-klansmen fell before the polling place in the Masonic temple here late Tuesday afternoon. Half a hundred persons were said to have seen the gun battle from various points and these are being called, it is said, to establish how the battle started, and who started it.

Some Troops Leave.

Coroner Bell closed the inquest to the newspapers as the first detachment of the troops which have been on guard here entrained and left. This was Company K of the 130th Infantry, from Cairo under the command of Captain Harry Boland.

It was said to have been ordered back home by Adjutant General Carlos Black, who deemed that the Carbondale troops which remain would be sufficient with the funerals of the three slain klansmen held and over.

Some consideration is said to have been given the withdrawal of all troops this morning but Lieutenant Colonel Robert W. Davis, of Carbondale, knowing the feelings of bitterness between the various fighting factions, is said to have refused to be responsible for any such move.

Colonel Davis and the Carbondale troops will be held until after the city election of next Tuesday at least, it was stated, and possibly longer.

Italians Give Great Ovation To Mussolini

Duce Returns in Triumph From Visit to Italian Colony in Tripoli.

Rome, April 17.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini returned to Rome this evening. He came back from Tripoli, where he had spent nearly a week, with mind filled to overflowing with the possibilities of Italy's great colony and with joyous memory of the welcome that had been accorded him there. He seemed hardly prepared for the great reception extended to him by the Eternal City. Although unofficial, it was termendous.

The vast square around the stations was crowded with people shouting "viva Mussolini," "viva Duce," while all the balconies and windows of the buildings, decorated with flags and lights, where black with cheering thousands.

All the fascisti in the capital wore black shirts and the most prominent among their number were lined up along the route, where the premier passed, saluting him in ancient Roman fashion, uttering their war cries. Mussolini responded in his usual rigid and austere manner.

When he passed through the Via Nazionale, the main thoroughfare, he walked amid scores of thousands, clapping and shouting so loudly that the sound reverberated like thunder, to the Capitoline Hill, where the national flag was hoisted while the historic bell of the municipality pealed forth.

America Presents New Plan To End Tacna-Arica Strife

RELEASED ON BOND LEADER OF STRIKE IS JAILED AGAIN

Determination of New Jersey Officialdom to Force Workers to Yield Shown in Weisbord Case

Passaic, N. J., April 17.—The unyielding determination of New Jersey officialdom to break the textile strike in this area was demonstrated again today when Albert Weisbord, the young Harvard graduate who has directed the strike, was rearrested on warrants from Bergen county as he was released on bail from indictments containing similar charges brought by officials of Passaic county.

Bergen county charges the strike leader with inciting to riot and conspiracy against the government. In Passaic county he was indicted for "hostility to the government," "inciting to riot" and "unlawful assemblage." This afternoon, each county demanded $25,000 for his liberty.

Strikers Win Support.

Meanwhile it became known that the strikers, who have been out for 12 weeks and number nearly 15,000, had been receiving assurances of sympathy and contributions to the strike relief funds from persons in all parts of the country, following dissemination of news of the threats made by municipal and county officials in the strike area.

The New York World today called upon Governor Moore, of New Jersey, to intervene and end at once the allegedly unlawful and strike-breaking acts of officials responsible to him.

Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state in the Wilson cabinet, came today to plead for the cause of free speech and the right of assemblage, when Weisbord was arraigned in Paterson before Supreme Court Justice Black. Weisbord was brought to Paterson on a habeas corpus proceeding, which it was announced had been superseded by four indictments returned against him last night by the Passaic county grand jury.

Bail Is Furnished.

Weisbord pleaded not guilty and his bail was set at $25,000. Strike sympathizers, including a host of liberals from New York, have charged that an attempt was being made to force the men and women back to work by arresting their leaders and holding them under huge and unjustified bail sums. Weisbord's bail was furnished during the afternoon.

Colby said that he thought the bail in Weisbord's case was excessive. He spoke on the principles of free speech.

"Weisbord is no enemy of the government," he said.

The indictments charged that Weisbord was a "wicked, malicious, unlawful and evilly disposed person."

Released only on $25,000 bail despite Colby's plea, Weisbord was rearrested by Bergen county officers on their warrants and taken to Garfield, where he was arraigned before Recorder Baker. There he was again held under $25,000 bail, a total of $50,000, on one of the three warrants charging him with "inciting to riot to injure persons" and preparations were made to take him to jail in Hackensack.

"The conduct of this man and his henchmen warrants a grand jury investigation," said the recorder in fixing bail.

Refuses Property Offer.

A wealthy real estate operator of Passaic offered to go bail for the strike leader, but the recorder promptly refused to accept the property he offered.

The 26-year-old strike leader was pale and nervous in court. He said he would be glad to return here to marshal his forces Monday, a day which may be the most critical in the walkout.

On Monday the mill owners in Passaic, Garfield and other nearby towns will open their mills to the striking employees. The strikers intend to stand firm and to picket each mill in large numbers so that the morale will not be broken.

Sheriff Morgan of Passaic county promises to have 150 deputies on hand to preserve order. Whether he will read the state's riot act forbidding an assemblage of 12 or more persons, as did Sheriff Nimmo in adjoining Bergen county, is as yet unknown.

Secretary Kellogg, as Mediator, Makes Alternative Suggestions to Chile and Peru.

SUGGESTS PROVINCE BE MADE NEUTRAL

If This Plan Fails, He Proposes That Tacna-Arica Be Turned Over to Some Other Country.

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—Secretary Kellogg, as mediator in the Tacna-Arica dispute, has made alternative suggestions to Chile and Peru for the neutralization of the two provinces or for their transfer "to a South American state not a party to these negotiations, upon equitable compensation."

The secretary's action was announced in a statement today at the state department, which said "as neither party is willing to surrender the territory in question to the other, and as the proposal for a division of the territory between them has been rejected, the remaining opportunity for as solution of the long-standing controversy would appear to be found in one of the suggestions above made or in a modification thereof if such is deemed advisable."

The Kellogg proposals were announced after he had conferred with Ambassadors Cruchaga, of Chile, and Velarde, of Peru, who jointly assented to publication of the plans the secretary had proposed. General Pershing had conferred with the secretary before the ambassadors arrived at the state department.

There was no doubt on the part of state department officials that the "South American state not a party to these negotiations" was Bolivia.

Referring to unofficial reports that Chile had rejected the proposal, Secretary Kellogg would say only that neither Chile nor Peru had as yet refused it.

LARGE CROWDS STONE PERUVIAN LEGATION.

Arica, Chile, April 17.—(AP)—Unofficial reports from Bolivia assert that the anti-Peruvian demonstrations last night in La Paz were the result of the alleged killing of two Bolivian officers on the frontier. The Peruvian legation was stoned by a large crowd and several shots were fired from the building. No one was hurt as all shots were fired in the air.

The demonstrants dispersed after police and two companies from an army garrison had driven them off. According to the roptr the Bolivian officers killed were Captain Urrior Lagoitia and Julian Rada.

News of the alleged shooting created a sensation in La Paz, reports continue, and a large crowd moved on the Peruvian legation. Firing of shots in protection of the building further increased the excitement and the demonstrants began hurling stones. Precautionary measures were reported to have bee ntaking to prevent recurrence of the demonstration and to maintain order.

WOMAN RECOVERS HER FALSE TEETH FROM SWEETHEART

St. Paul, Minn., April 17.—(AP)—False teeth are "an essential part of the human body, belong to the individual and would be of no use to any other individual."

So ruled Justice J. F. Doyle today in deciding that Mrs. Rose Zwerisckl should recover her teeth from her former sweetheart, Bartholomeau Xonocdas. He said he was holding the teeth because Mrs. Zwerisckl had refused to return a diamond engagement ring. The teeth fell out of the woman's mouth when the couple quarreled over the return of the ring after their engagement was broken.

In deciding that the ring belonged to the man, the court ruled that a diamond is given with the expectancy of marriage and unless the marriage is consummated the recipient of the ring must give it back.

Thieves Rob and Then Kill

:: $37,000 MAIL SWAG NOT YET FOUND ::

Thief Who Turned Slayer

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., April 17.—Thieves robbing a thief of his $37,000 mail swag; the thieves becoming killers of their thief victim, who himself had become a killer a half hour before; plenty of auto chases; running pistol battles.

All these old time thriller ingredients were unfolded today as real life episodes by postoffice inspector in charge, Grant B. Miller.

Last Wednesday at Indiana Harbor, Frank Watson, a mail wagon truck driver, was stopped by a lone bandit. He was ordered to turn over the mail sacks and make no outcry. At the point of a gun he complied, turning over $37,000 in currency.

The bandit then kidnapped Watson but near Larson's garage on the way to Joliet, his car broke down. In the confusion Watson stealthily crept to a telephone and called the police while the bandit fled.

With his three sacks of mail on his shoulder the bandit held up Dr. E. G. McMahon, of Mokena. He took Dr. McMahon's car and started for Maywood. Dr. McMahon told Deputy Sheriff Walter Fisher, of Mokena, of the loss of his car and the deputy sheriff started upon an overland chase of the bandit.

Deputy Fisher got close enough to the bandit to hit him three times with shots, but the bandit succeeded in killing Fisher. The bandit then went to a roadhouse to have his wounds dressed. Men in the roadhouse saw the bandit leave the car, saw the swag, killed the bandit, kept the money, and threw the bandit's body into a ditch near Broadview.

Examination of the bandit's body shows that he had been shot six times—three shots from each of two different calibre guns. Three of the shots are supposed to have been fired by Fisher and three fatal ones later by the killers of the killer.

Drunkenness at Frat Dances

:: BEAVER GIRLS BARRED FROM PENN EVENTS ::

Cause of College Blacklist

Philadelphia, April 17.—(AP)—Reports of drunkenness and a "general Bowery dance hall atmosphere" at recent dances sponsored by University of Pensylvania fraternities have caused President Lynn H. Harris, of Beaver College for Women, Jenkintown, Pa., to refuse further permission for young women of his college to attend university affairs. Beaver college has an enrollment of 358 students.

Dr. Harris said promiscuous drinking at the recent inter-fraternity ball of the University of Pennsylvania, given at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, precipitated the decision to "blacklist" future university events. He added that Provost Josiah C. Penniman of the university, replying to his complaint of conditions reported, told him the inter-fraternity affair was being investigated and hinted that the university council of welfare might forbid all dancing in the future.

"I do not mean to imply that all the couples were drunk," Dr. Harris said, in explaining his reference to the inter-fraternity affair. "But there were numerous men and women who plainly showed the effects of liquor, and no effort was made by anybody, so far as I could learn, either to stop the drinking or to keep them off the floor unless they began fighting or could not stand up, according to the reports made to me."

"At all of these dances some at least, are from Christian homes, and are of decent rearing." Dr. Harris wrote in his letter to Provost Penniman. "It seems scarcely proper to subject these to the sight of contact with the open drunkenness, among both men and women, and the general Bowery dance hall atmosphere that has been increasingly characteristic of the university dances.

DEFEAT OF BILL SETTLING WAR CLAIMS IS SEEN

Mills Withdraws Support of Own Measure on Learning His Company Would Be Affected.

MELLON COMPANIES ARE GIVEN AWARDS

President Is Said To Have Examined Mills Bill and To Be Anxious That It Be Made Law.

Washington, April 18.—(AP)—The legislative course of the Mills bills to adjust German-American war claims took an unexpected twist today when its author, Representative Mills, republican, New York, announced in the house that he would withdraw his support from the measure.

He had learned he explained, that he was a director and stockholder in a company that would be affected by the measure. Under such conditions, irrespective of house rules, he said he considered it proper to decline to further support the bill.

Mr. Mills informed the house that he would not participate in consideration of the proposal before the ways and means committee, before which it is pending or on the house floor. Information, which he confirmed, that he was an official in one of the corporations affected, he said, had been conveyed to him by Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, who yesterday characterized the measure a "stupendous steal."

Doubts Raised.

Addressing the house after Mr. Mills had made his announcement, Mr. Garner said he doubted if 25 members, under house rules, had a right to vote on the bill.

It was introduced several weeks ago by Mr. Mills, after its provisions had been worked out by the treasury. It proposes adjustment of war claims between the German and American governments and citizens through issuance of binds. It is estimated that unsettled claims total about $250,000,000.

It was indicated that some other republican on the ways and means committee would sponsor the bill instead of Mr. Mills while at the same time democratic members made plans to oppose the measure to the limit.

Mills Surprised.

Mr. Garner said that as soon as he found out definitely that Mr. Mills would be personally interested in the measure he felt it his duty to call his attention to it, adding:

"When I did he expressed surprise and said he did not know that they had a claim or an award under the mixed claims commission. I want to commend him and all other members who will investigate and rescue themselves if they find that they have a special interest in it.

"The secretary of the treasury, so far as I can ascertain, and I think I have conclusive evidence, is a stockholder in seven different firms which have had an award from the mixed claims commission, amounting to something over $1,000,000.

"The secretary, according to the records, is the gentleman who made up this bill.

"He says that the president has examined it and is anxious that it shall become a law."

Flyer Lunches In Capital; Dines in Ohio

McCook Field Flier Makes Record Flight in Fast Round-Trip Flight.

Dayton, Ohio, April 17.—(AP)—Breakfast in Dayton, luncheon in Washington and back again to Dayton in time for dinner tonight, thus filling two pressing engagements, was the record set up today by Lieutenant James S. Hutchinson, McCook field army flyer.

After negotiating the distance to Washington this morning so as to be the guest of Brigadier General John A. Bellinger, at luncheon, Lieutenant Hutchinson fought his way back through adverse winds and rain to play his part tonight in a testimonial to his brother flier, Lieutenant John A. MacReady.

He was in the air a total of nine hours and 40 minutes on the round trip.

It all started this morning when the lieutenant received an urgent request from General Bellinger, that he attend the noon luncheon in Washington. The general, who is about to be retired from the service, was entertaining all of the pilots who have taken him around the country. Hutchinson thereupon wheeled out his De Haviland and flew, post haste, to the party.

Lieutenant MacReady, premier altitude flier of America, is being feted tonight by the McCook field detachment of the air force in view of his expected early departure from the service. Hutchinson felt he could not risk his neck getting to one dinner and pass up the other.

MacReady's associates have selected a silver and gold sword as their parting tribute to him.

Effort to Impeach Butler Testimony Is Made by Cates

CRISIS IN FRANCE LOOMS AS FRANC MAKES NEW LOW

Government Adopts Stringent Measures, With Anxiety Reflected On Stock Market.

Paris, April 17.—With the franc falling to another new low mark—the third low record in three consecutive days—a new crisis appears on the horizon of French politics and finance.

The franc today collapsed to 29.87 to the dollar and 145.15 to the pound sterling.

The recent drops are especially disconcerting because it was strongly believed that the adoption of the financial law providing extraordinary revenues would improve the situation. It was expected, too, that the promise of peace in Morocco and the prospect of debt settlements with the United States and England would aid to bolster up the slipping currency. But the reverse has happened and everyone is seeking the cause.

Public anxiety is reflected in the nervousness of the stock market. Stringent mensures are being inaugurated by the government, including an order that all district attorneys prosecute pitilessly all speculators and circulators of false reports.

Experts declare the chief reason for the debacle is the fact that French foreign commerce, awaiting the expected improvement in exchange, delayed the necessary purchases of dollars and sterling and now is forced to buy heavily despite the absence of improvement. The popular tendency is to attribute the slump to speculation, particularly on the part of foreigners. This suspicion has made American and British tourists unpopular in many quarters.

The corridors of the chamber of deputies are buzzing with a report that when that body reconvenes the radicals and socialists will attempt to overturn Briand and bring back Herriot.

OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED AGAINST FLOATING DEBT.

Paris, April 17.—(AP)—A general offensive against the floating debt was launched today when a committee of which President Doumergue is honorary president and Marshal Joffre, commander-in-chief, was formally installed for the purpose of receiving voluntary contributions for a sinking fund.

The primary object of the free offerings sinking fund of which the committee will take charge is to reduce the short term bonds so that they will no longer menace the treasury. The fund will eventually serve to retire inter-allied war debts, as well as domestic loans, though other measures are expectedd to eke out the proceeds of the voluntary subscriptions.

People in all walks of life seem eager to do their bit for Joffre and the French treasury in the new battle of the Marne, and the prospects are that the campaign during the war which brought 1,500,000 francs in gold into the Bank of France will be cast into the shade. The voluntary fund is not counted upon to work the miracle alone of French financial salvation, but the spirit it develops is expected to help largely in solving France's financial difficulties.

BRIAND SUMMONS LONDON AMBASSADOR

London, April 17.—The French ambassador to London, hurriedly called to Paris, left this morning accompanied by a French financial attache who only returned to London from Paris last night. He has been called for an important council concerning the Franco-British debt for a settlement of which Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Churchill now is pressing.

Premier Briand, it is said, is thoroughly alarmed at the recent slump in the franc and has called a conference of French political and financial experts to discuss what to do. British financial circles are pessimistic about the future of the franc and are predicting a rapid fall to 150 to a pound or even further unless something is done immediately to stabilize French finances and arrange for the payment of the debt, of which there is no sign.

Declares He Wants To Ascertain Actual Facts of Conversation Between General and Officers.

"COCKTAIL PARTY" EVIDENCE ENDED

Court Adjourned Until Monday Morning When Arguments in Williams Case Will Begin.

U. S. Marine Base, San Diego, Cal., April 17.—(United News.)—Additional witnesses called before the court-martial of Colonel Alexander S. Williams, charged by General Smedley D. Butler with intoxication, continued to pour into the court records today a mass of contradictory evidence which tried the tempers of opposing counsel and brought frequent intervention by officers of the court.

Defense counsel was defeated in an attempt to impeach the testimony of General Butler and announced this afternoon that they had completed rebuttal testimony. The judge advocate announced that he had no more witnesses to call, and the trial was adjourned until Monday morning, when final arguments will begin.

Cates Assails Testimony.

The attack upon the testimony of the marine commandant was made by Captain Clifton Cates, defense attorney and witness, who questioned Captain George Stokes, one of the guests at the "cocktail party" who was resummoned before the court by Rear Admiral Washington, presiding officer.

Cates began to question Stokes regarding conversation with General Butler's aide, Colonel Ellis Miller, when he was interrupted by Captain Leo Hermle, prosecutor:

"Are you trying to impeach the testimony of General Butler by impeaching the statements of Colonel Miller?"

"Yes," replied Cates. "Colonel Miller gave conflicting testimony in connection with conversations between General Butler and Captain Cates."

Uphold General Butler.

Hermle declared that Butler's testimony could not be impeached by an attack upon the statements of his aide. He was sustained by the court. Major J. L. Doxey, another who had been recalled to the stand, then testified that in his opinion Colonel Williams was not intoxicated at the Hotel Del Coronado.

"What was the nature of the accused's eyes?" he was asked.

"I noticed nothing abnormal about his eyes," the witness declared. "I believe the colonel was all right."

A written question put to Lieutenant Witburn, another aide to General Butler, was vigorously objected to by the judge advocate.

"We are trying to impeach the testimony of General Butler," Captain Cates shouted. "We are trying to determine the actual facts of the conversations between the general and his officers."

Declare Recess.

Members of the court halted the argument by declaring a recess, but afterward allowed Cates to ask Wilburn whether he talked with Captain Stokes regarding the report that Williams had been in Ti Juana earlier in the day of the cocktail party.

"There were rumors around headquarters about that," said the witness, adding, however, that he had not talked with Stokes.

The court-martial was adjourned following statements by both sides that they had no more witnesses to introduce.

FATHER OF HARDING PLACED ON TOTAL DISABILITY LIST

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—Dr. George T. Harding, father of the late president, was notified today by the pension office that he has been placed on the total disability list of civil war veterans with an allowance of $72 a month. Dr. Harding spent the winter in Florida and he is now visiting relatives in Washington before returning to his home in Marion, Ohio. The pension was obtained by Senator Willis, republican, Ohio.

At Atlanta Pen, He Declares

Washington, April 17.—(Special.)—One man's opinion of a term in the Atlanta federal penitentiary is given in the following dispatch from Frederick, Maryland, printed in the Baltimore Sun:

Frederick, April 15.—Robust, sunburned and enthusiastic, Harry A. ("Hoppy") Grove returned to his home here today singing praises of the southern "playground" where he has spent a year's "vacation" playing golf, tennis and baseball.

The "playground" which Grove extols is the federal prison at Atlanta. Grove had no idea of selecting it for so long a period of rest, relaxation and recreation. He was impelled to go by a federal judge, who told him there was nothing for him to do except spend a year and a day in Atlanta.

That happened when Grove was convicted on a Volstead violation charge. Regretfully he started for Atlanta. But now that he actually has experienced all that Atlanta has to offer, he pictures the charm of the Atlanta prison as an all-year-round resort with the enthusiasm of an Atlantic City booster or a Florida land agent.

It's an expensive resort at that, Grove says. Although the government was paying his board and lodging, he said he spent during the year $2,700 for food and sporting goods.

Grove said he did not lack the companionship of "good fellows" or the pleasures of the carefree, outdoor life. In the "liquor colony" of which he was one, were about 200 men. None lived in a dark, cold, barred prison. Instead they lived outdoors in tents on the prison farm. Around the camp there was not even a wall to suggest the prison atmosphere.

Among his fellow colonists were former Representative John W. Langley, of Kentucky, and former Governor Warren C. McCray, of Indiana. Langley, Grove said, is a "regular fellow" and is popular with his associates. McCray is prone to brooding and is not nearly so affable as Langley, according to Grove.

PHILLIPS FAVORS 2 TRUNK HIGHWAYS

Macon, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—The closing session of the Georgia Education association convention which has been in progress here for three days, was held this morning. C. J. Bennett, Dalton, newly elected president, presided. The attendance dwindled considerably for the reason that many of the delegates caught trains yesterday afternoon and last night for home.

The main speakers on the program this morning were Jack McCartney, of the Central of Georgia railway, and John R. Phillips, Louisville, member of the state highway committee. Mr. McCartney spoke at length on education and industrial progress. He gave some interesting statistics in regard to transportation and agricultural production and declared that Georgia had scarcely touched the surface in the development of the state's natural resources.

"While Georgia is regarded as an agricultural state, it is interesting to note that only 13 per cent of the freight tonnage of our line came from agriculture products," he said. "Twenty-eight per cent was products of mines; 21 per cent were products from forests; 31 per cent manufactured products."

Mr. Phillips, who is an advocate of two trunk-line paved highways for Georgia, told of needs of better highways. He advocated a paved road from the Tennessee line to Florida and another from Columbus directly across the state. With all main highways paved, he pointed out the advantages of bettering school conditions especially in the rural sections of the state.

A number of resolutions were adopted today at the closing session of the association. Among them were: Resolutions asking that all teachers be examined for communicable diseases before being given a teacher's license; that the legislature be asked to create a pension fund for disabled teachers from the decrease in the pension fund for Confederate veterans; that the legislature be asked to create a million-dollar equalization fund; that the dues be increased to $1.50 a year; that a permanent secretary be employed by the association.

Kyle T. Alfriend, dean of Bessie Tift, was chosen for permanent secretary. Mr. Alfriend stated that he was not prepared at this time to say whether he would accept the position, since it would necessitate him giving up his work at Bessie Tift.

Governor Walker and the legislature were praised for advancing the state educational program and resolutions recommended that the program be completed in 1927. Opposition to the proposed modification of the Volstead law was included in the resolutions passed.

The executive committee will decide at a later date where the next convention will be held. There was a spirited fight on the floor this morning between Macon and Atlanta for the 1927 meeting but it was decided not to make a decision at this time.

NOTED EDUCATIONAL WORKER VISITS CITY

Miss Mary MacSkimmon, of Cambridge, Mass., president of the National Educational association and one of the foremost educators in the United States, arrived in Atlanta Saturday night and will be principal speaker at a joint meeting Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock of the Fulton County Teachers' association, Atlanta Teachers' association and the Atlanta-Fulton county unit of the Georgia Educational association, in the auditorium of the Fulton High school.

Teachers and others interested in educational work of the city and vicinity have been invited to the meeting.

A luncheon will be given at the Henry Grady hotel Monday at 12:30 o'clock, by principals and other officials of Atlanta's schools in honor of the visitor. Several points of interest about the city will be visited today by the noted educational worker, including a trip to Stone Mountain. Emory university and Agnes Scott college.

Miss Mary Baker, principal of the John B. Gordon school and president of the American Federation of Teachers, will make the welcome address at Monday's meeting.

Miss Maude Rhodes, president of the Atlanta-Fulton county unit of the Georgia Educational association; J. W. Scott, president of the Atlanta Teachers association and Boyd Taylor, president of the Fulton County Teachers' association, will meet with members of their respective associations during the joint meeting Monday afternoon.

Dodge, Durant Close Automobile Plants in Canada

Toronto, April 17.—(AP)—The Dodge Motor Car company, of Canada, and the Durant Motor company, of Canada, suspended operations temporarily today, as a result of the lowering of duties on imported motor cars. About 400 employeees in the Dodge plant and 600 in the Durant plant were affected.

Both suspensions were ordered, official announcements said, in order that the ocmpanies may decide on future operations as a result of the decrease in the tariff. The stoppages, it was indicated, were altogether independent of whatever policy the Canadian motor car manufacturers adopt. Canadian motor car manufacturers, together with all other Canadian manufacturers affected by the tariff changes, will meet here April 21 to determine their course.

D. A. V. HEADS URGE ATLANTANS TO GIVE

"We need more workers and we need more money for the campaign is dragging," was the message sent out Saturday from the convention headquarters of the Disabled American Veterans, in the Hotel Ansley.

"We are not discouraged—far from it! But we don't want to take several weeks on a few days' job," said Ben I. Hall, in charge of convention headquarters. "It ought not to be hard to raise $35,000 in a city like Atlanta, which has given so generously to every worthy cause.

"We believe the money and pledges would be in hand for the full amount if we had been able to get a sufficient number of workers into the field but our boys, all disabled, are not able to keep up the pace of office-to-office calls.

"Atlanta invited the D. A. V. convention to hold its 1926 session here and the local organization promised that the fund would be ready to pay for the convention expenses. We have had a lot of assistance from Asa G. Candler, chairman of the finance committee, from Mayor Sims and from Atlanta citizens who have helped with the committees. But they are not able to carry the whole load."

Julian V. Boehm, chairman of the citizens executive committee, has called a meeting of that body for Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Ansley.

'Peaches' Browning Engulfed By Curious New York Crowd

:: BOYS AND SHOP GIRLS SHOUT GREETINGS ::

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, April 17.—A crowd of several thousand persons engulfed Peaches Browning as she left a West 38th Street hat shop this afternoon. They trampled upon her and pushed her to the sidewalk.

Peaches and her Daddy, Edward West Browning, left the hotel Gramatan at Bronxville, N. Y., shortly after 9 a. m. Browning bade his wife a lingering good-bye at West 72nd street and went to his office, while Mrs. Browning drove to meet her mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan, at the Hotel Commodore.

Peaches was alone when she left a hat store in West 38th street an hour later. While she was trying on hats her limousine had been forced to make may trips around the block for crowds collected whenever it stopped, shouting and peering inside.

Try to Clear Throng

Four patrolmen and a police sergeant tried in vain to control the sidewalk throng as "Peaches" left the shop to walk to the motor, 25 feet distant. They could not clear a path.

Shop girls plucked at the pearl and crystal embroideries on her black satin coat. Youths shouted greetings, most of them good natured. Smartly dressed shoppers yielded shamelessly to curoisity, joining the throng that surged about the girl bride and finally grew so dense that she and the policemen whose arms she grasped were dushed down to the sidewalk.

Finally Browning's footman assisted in extricating her from the jam and landed her in a taxi requisitioned hastily.

Returning to the Gramatan late in the afternoon the aged millionaire's bride resumed the first authorized story of her romantic courtship and marriage.

"From what little I knew of matrimony when a wife mentioned shopping, the husband either pulled a wry smile else grouched," she said. "That's the traditional attitude toward a favorite pursuit of my sex.

Encourages Shopping

"But Daddy Browning encourages me to go shopping, and sometimes, as yesterday, for instance, goes with me, looking about the shops.

"Some men haggle over prices and then prrobably pick out a white elephant of a hat or frock for their wives. Horrid material or bad style. But there's none of that with my Daddy. He has an eye for cut and fit and color. Besides that he knows values in clothes as he does in real estate.

"But there's only one fault to find with him—he's too generous!

"Earlier in the week I bought a dress in a Fifth Avenue shop that cost $125. It seemed extravagant to me. I felt almost wicked. But he said, 'Why that's cheap! cheap, dearest!

Buys Cheap Hats

"I've spent a great deal of money. Some days it has been $1,000. I usually keep $500 on hand, and when I need more I send for it. Daddy wants me to spend all I wish and to have a good time.

"I've always admired Daddy's taste. He has about 35 suits, all of them tailored and 1,000 neckties—I do believe.—always with handkerchiefs to match.

"This seems romantic, and maybe silly, but I think one of the reasons I fell in love with him was because I noticed how spic he always looked.

"Daddy" Uses Perfume

"Daddy uses perfume, too. It's a French brand called Amber Antique. I don't care a great deal for perfume. When I use any I take some of his.

"I'm going back to my books soon. There'll be private tutors, of course. It's to please Daddy. Now that I have the title of Mrs. Edward West Browning I must live up to all Daddy's expectations. I've made up my mind always to keep my mind and heart bright—for Daddy's sake. He is so wise I must learn a great deal before I can hope to catch up with him. Expensive clothes and manners—anything besides what's in your heart—don't count.

"It isn't easy to remember that every girl can't have a father-sweetheart like mine. I'm so sorry for all the rest!

"There is one thing I want to clear up. Some newspaper printed a mean story saying I was discharged from Earl Carroll's 'Vanities' chorus because I was bow-legged. Well, it isn't true! And I'm not bow-legged, either! It was all so strange I told Mr. Carroll I couldn't bear it."

New York.—With approximately 5 per cent of the population of the country, New York city requires nearly 12 per cent of all the electrical energy developed in the United States. This means, according to Arthur William, New York Edison company vice president, that for every person in the city there is available in electrical energy the equivalent of more than 30 human servants.

Parachute Jump At Candler Field Scheduled Today

Two carloads of airplanes and spare parts are expected to arrive in Atlanta early this week for the A. B. McMullen company, which recently started commercial aviation operations here.

Archie Comer, rated as one of the best airplane mechanics in the United States, arrives today from Huntington, W. Va., flying a new-type plane, and will take charge of the equipment of the McMullen company here. He will demonstrate the ease and agility of the new-type ships over the war-time types this afternoon at Candred field.

Another attraction scheduled for enthusinsts at the field will be Bonnie Rowe, parachute jumper and stunt man extraordinary, who plans to try out entirely new stunts on the wings of Comer's plane. Bonnie was bruised in his parachute jump at Spiller's ball park Thursday when he dropped thirty feet to the concrete sidewalk on Ponce de Leon avenue to prevent striking trolley wires. He expects to be in fine form however this afternoon.

The McMullen company will have at least five ships in operation from Atlanta field by May 1, according to Walter Chambers, district manager. The company now maintains fields at Daytona Beach and Tampa, Fla.

BRENAU COLLEGE PLANS FESTIVAL

Gainesville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Hundreds of alumnae and friends of Brenau college are expected in Gainesville at the end of next week to attend the annual May festival and historical pageant being produced by students. Special interest in the event has been aroused this year by preparations for Brenau's $500,000 endowment fund campaign, students and Gainesville people working to raise the city's quota of $100,000 for the fund. The festival program begins Friday, April 30, and extends to Monday, May 3.

Pageant Is Feature.

The feature of the festival is the pageant. This display, arranged and designed by the students, shows the growth of education in the seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth centuries and the growth of Brenau college since the institution was founded fifty years ago. A second section of the pageant depicts the future for the college after the half-million-dollar endowment fund is raised.

There will be appropriate costumes and costume dancing between sections of the pageant. Nearly 100 Brenau girls from all parts of Georgia and the south will participate.

The remainder of the May festival program for this year is as follows:

Friday, April 30, 8:30 p. m., "The Melting Pot," a play in three acts, to be given by the Cushman club, dramatic organization of Brenau college; Saturday, May 1, 9 a. m., the art exhibition, and household arts exhibition. At 4:30 p. m. on Saturday the board of trustees of the college will hold a very important meeting; and at 8:30 o'clock a gymnastic exhibition will be staged by students in the physical education department.

On Sunday, May 2, Mu Phi Epsilon, the honorary musical fraternity of the college, will present a special concert at 4:30 p. m. Monday, May 3, at 10 a. m., the annual track and field meet will be held. At 4 p. m. the same day the class day exercises will take place. At 8:30 the grand concert will be given.

The organization of an endowment fund campaign executive committee of 34 prominent Gainesville citizens was completed last week, and will begin active work at once to raise Gainesville's $100,000 of the half-million-dollar endowment program.

Dates for the intensive campaign in Gainesville have been set for May 10 to 17. More than 100 men and women are expected to have active places in this campaign organization—the largest working force of volunteers that Gainesville has seen since the days of the Liberty Loan drives.

McDermed Is Chairman.

O. A. McDermed, president of the chamber of commerce, has been chosen as general campaign chairman. Other officers of the committee are: Hayne Palmeur, chairman of special gifts committee; J. H. Hosch, director of team organization; Edgar Dunlap, chairman of publicity and speakers' bureau; W. P. Martin, chairman of church and school cooperation, and C. A. Rudolph, campaign treasurer.

Student activities in raising funds for the endowment have been going on for more than three years. The student body voluntarily effected its own organization, and has succeeded in raising more than $3,000 for the endowment fund without soliciting subscriptions of its members or anyone else. This student organization is now rendering the general Gainesville campaign committee its most effective cooperation.

Local Celebrities Appear At W G S T Sunday Concert

Radio fans of the nation will recall tonight memorable days of 1922-23 when The Constitution's big station WGM stood out among the world's biggest and most popular broadcasting stations—for Nora Allen-Volpi and Signor Emilio Volpi once again will cross before the microphone to thrill music lovers.

The two stars will appear in a special Sunday program at WGST, Georgia Tech's station, which formerly was WGM and entertained the nation from the top of The Constitution building. More than two years ago it was dismantled and given by Clark Howell, Sr., editor of The Constitution, to Tech to be used in teaching radio engineering to a big class of students.

Promptly at 7 o'clock tonight Signor Volpi will sound the first bar on the piano and a moment or two past 7 o'clock, Nora Allen-Volpi's soprano voice will wing its way to countless receiving sets scattered throughout the nation. By many listeners it will be recognized—because no artist in the south ever attained greater popularity as a radio singer than Miss Allen did when she appeared regularly at WGM.

For many months, in fact only a few times since 1923, has Nora Allen appeared in a radio program, and the same might be said of Signor Volpi. Both are teachers of voice and coach grand opera students. For many years Miss Allen was a member of the Chicago opera company, later touring the nation in concerts. Signor Volpi, before coming to this city, directed orchestras and opera companies in the United States, Cuba and South America.

Tonight's program will be for one hour, Miss Allen's numbers being interspersed by selections by pupils in advanced classes of the Volpi and Allen schools here. She will be the soloist at the concert at Lakewood today.

Coast Line Files Plan To Acquire A.B.&A. Railway

Washington, April 17.—(AP)The Atlantic Coast Line filed its application with the interstate commerce commission today to acquire control, by purchase of the common stock, of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Coast railroad, a corporatino to be organized to take over the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic, now in receivership.

The Coast Line also asked permission to assume obligations with respect to the guaranty of dividends and redemption of the road's preferred stock.

Notice has been served on the commission by a committee of stockholders of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic that it would oppose the Coast Line move.

LOCAL LIBRARIANS WILL HONOR NOTED EDUCATOR ON VISIT

Miss Tommie Dora Barker, librarian of Carnegie library, announces that Charles Belden, librarian of the Boston public library and president of the American Library association, will be a visitor in Atlanta on April 28. While here local librarians will give a dinner in his honor on the night of April 28 at the Carnegie library.

Mr. Belden is coming to Atlanta from Chattanooga, where he will attend the meeting of the Southeastern Library association on April 22-24. It is probable that other librarians will come to Atlanta from this meeting. This is the fiftieth anniversary year of the organization of the Library association and a general observance of the occasion is being made throughout the country. Local librarians will take the occasion of President Belden's visit for an observance of the event in Atlanta.

Several Atlanta librarians are on the program for the Southeastern meeting. Miss Barker will give a paper on "A Comparison of Southern Public Library Budgets, Book Collections, and Staff, with National Standards"; Miss Mary Frances Cox will give a paper on "Desirable Budgets and Book Collections for High School Libraries of Varying Enrollment"; Miss Beverly Wheateroft will discuss "The State as a Unit in Library Service."

ATLANTA PRESBYTERY TO MEET AT JACKSON

Jackson, Ga., April 17.—(Special.) Plans have been completed for the 119th session of the Presbytery of Atlanta which will open a two-day session here Tuesday at 10 o'clock with a sermon by Rev. J. S. Lyons, moderator.

The opening day will be devoted to election of officers, reports of committees and a memorial of Rev. A. B. Mathes by Rev. J. G. Patton, Sr. Rev. R. O. Flinn and Rev. W. S. Hay will officiate at the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

A feature of Wednesday's session will be the 11 o'clock sermon by Rev. S. B. Hay, whose subject will be the "Vicarious Atonement." On Wednesday afternoon commissioners to the assembly will be elected and the minutes of the presbytery read.

The sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian church.

London Women Stage Parade

:: WIVES TIRED OF CONSTANT LABOR TROUBLES ::

In Protest Against Strikes

BY CHARLES C. M'CANN.

London, April 17.—With 25,000 women participating, the world's first strike of housewives—a "strike against strikers"—was staged in London today while hundreds of police guarded the women from possible counter-demonstrations.

There was no violence, however, and the housewives were unmolested in their attempt to demonstrate that the real sufferers from strikes are women and children. Giving the men a taste of their own medicine, they also demonstrated that women can go on a walkout with equal effectiveness. Beds were unmade and dinners uncooked in thousands of English homes while their mistresses were marching through the streets of London.

By special train and omnibus the women had poured in from every part of Great Britain. Every class of women was represented. There were Scottish fishwives and titled ladies. Flower girls from Piccadilly Circus and textile workers from Nottingham mingled in the demonstration with the wives of merchants and bankers.

"General" Drummond Leads.

Under the hard-boiled leadership of "General" Flora Drummond, one of Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst's aides in the hectic suffragette days, and with the blare of 20 bands lending a martial air to the occasion, the women forced nation-wide attention to the feminine view of strikes. They paraded from Victoria Embankment through Trafalgar square, Piccadilly, and beyond the Hyde Park Corner to Albert Hall, where they listened to stirring speeches.

Months ago the women had become fed up with constant labor troubles which meant nerve-wracking days in the kitchens and explanations to whimpering children as to why father wasn't working and why there was no food in the house.

The result—their own one-day strike, under the auspices of the Women's Guild of Empire—was one of the most impressive demonstrations in London's long history.

Many labor leaders claimed it was a capitalist effort to hurt the working man's cause. Because labor had opposed the parade the police escort was large. At Albert Hall several thousand labor sympathizers greeted the marchers with boos and jeers and there was some booing when the parade started, perhaps because the mounted society women in the lead started off before their humbler sisters were ready and had to return after parading some distance by themselves.

At the Albert Hall the crowd sang the Red Flag.

CONVICTS' TRIAL SET FOR THURSDAY

Trials of R. L. Travis and Roy Wilson, Fulton county convicts, indicted on charges of murder in connection with the death of Captain Pat P. Newsome, guard, who was shot and almost instantly killed during a mutiny on March 9 of north side camp convicts, have been set for Thursday before Judge Frank McLaughlin, of Columbus, Ga., who will preside in the first division of Fulton superior court this week.

Travis, Atlanta's "lone bandit," whose daring robberies of Atlanta grocery stores spread terror through the city last year, was indicted jointly with David A. Perkins, highwayman, and Raymond Sisson, who robbed Foote and Davies company of loot in the form of several thousand dollars' worth of revenue stamps.

Perkins was found guilty of murder and recommended to the mercy of the court last week by a jury in Judge G. H. Howard's division of Fulton superior court. He was immediately sentenced to serve the remainder of his natural life in the confines of a Georgia prison camp.

Sisson, who was the first of the convict mutineers to face a jury, was found guilty of first degree murder and sentenced to pay the extreme penalty in the electric chair in Milledgeville on May 28. Frank Hooper, Sr., chief counsel for the defense, filed a motion for new trial upon agreement before Judge Howard, who set May 22 as the date for hearing before Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., in Griffin, the magistrate who presided at the trial.

Albany Lodge Prepares For Elks' Convention To Be Held May 20-21

Albany, Ga., April 17.—(Special)—Encouraging reports from all committee heads were heard Wednesday night at a meeting of the executive group responsible for the coming convention of the Georgia state Elks' association which will be held here on Thursday and Friday, May 20 and 21.

While this committee was in session in the clubrooms of the Elks' home, 16 embryo Elks were being put through their paces in the lodge rooms overhead. There are a number of candidates being taken into the order prior to the convention date but as many candidates as can be handled efficiently on the big auditorium stage are being held in readiness for the degree team of Atlanta Lodge No. 78, which will put on an exemplification of the ritual and initiation on Thursday night, May 20, as one of the features of the convention program.

Members of the local lodge have shown considerable activity in getting applications for membership into the order and the question of "signing up" and "joining the Elks" before the convention date is one of the most talked of subjects in this city, although the convention is still more than a month in the future.

LEE ANNOUNCES IN 7TH DISTRICT

Rome, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Representative Gordon Lee, of the Seventh Georgia Congressional district, today announced his candidacy for reelection. No opposition has been announced to date.

Representative Lee is serving his 11th term as representative from this district.

In his announcement Congressman Lee said that it was being made at this time in response to many letters from friends inquiring if he will be a candidate to succeed himself.

Cured His Rupture
I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 237 M Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—(adv.)

WOMEN VOTERS NAME OFFICERS

St. Louis, Mo., April 17.—(AP)—Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland, Ohio, today was nominated for reelection as president of the National League of Women Voters in convention here. The recommendation of the nominating committee is considered equivalent to election.

Other officers nominated are Mrs. James Morrison of Chicago, first vice president; Miss Adele Clark, Richmond, Va., second vice president; Miss Ruth Morgan, New York, third vice president; Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, Ohio, fourth vice president; Miss Mollie Ray Carroll, Baltimore, Md., fifth vice president; Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, Farmington, Conn., secretary; Miss Katherine Ludington, Lynne, Conn., treasurer.

Regional directors nominated are: First region, Mrs. James E. Cheesman, Providence, R. I.; second region, Mrs. Casper Whitney, Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y.; third region, Mrs. Mary O. Cowper, Durham, N. C., fourth region; Mrs. William Hibbard, Chicago; fifth region Miss Marguerite Wells, Minneapolis; sixth region, Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, St. Louis; seventh region, Mrs. Ernest Matt, San Francisco.

All officers are to be elected for two years' terms in accordance with an amendment passed providing for biennial instead of annual conventions.

Efficiency in government was the subject of today's general discussion.

With only three dissenting votes the convention took today under consideration a resolution of the Pennsylvania delegation calling upon congress to refuse to "undermine or weaken" the 18th amendment.

The resolution also urges national and state executives to appoint to enforcement offices only those supporting prohibition. Under the convention's rules final vote on the resolution will be reached Tuesday.

OFFICER WOUNDED BY PISTOL SHOT; F. GAINES SOUGHT

C. Hambrick, special agent of the Louisville and Nashville railway, is at his home, 840 Oglethorpe avenue, suffering from a slight pistol wound, while police are searching for Frank Gaines, who lives next door, said to have done the shooting.

Patrolmen Pollard and Betsill investigated but were unable to learn Saturday night the cause of the shooting. Witnesses informed them Gaines fired on Hambrick but they didn't know the details.

Chattanooga Men Visit Cartersville Regarding Tourists

Cartersville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—A number of prominent business leaders of Chattanooga composed of a party that came to Cartersville recently to confer with local business men about the routing of tourists north and south, through this section of the state.

In the party were Lon Faust, president of the Chattanooga Automobile club; Dick Parks, secretary of that organization; Al Smith, W. A. Austin, A. B. Seay, J. E. Travis, E. W. Holmes, Will Burton and L. M. Mullinax.

PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR KIWANIS TRIP

Waycross, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Judge H. D. Reed, Waycross, governor of the Kiwanis clubs of Georgia, in referring to the international convention to be held in Montreal, has issued the following statement to the clubs of the state:

"Georgia Kiwanians are completing arrangements for a large attendance at the international Kiwanis convention which will be held at Montreal, Canada, June 7-10. The convention will be the greatest gathering in the history of the organization. It is expected that 6,000 Kiwanians will meet in the historic city.

"An interesting program has been prepared. It will include addressed by speakers of international reputation from the United States and Canada, conferences on subjects of interest to Kiwanians, music, sightseeing and entertainments of various kinds.

200 To Attend.

"The Georgia delegation to the convention will comprise 200 or more Kiwanians from the 63 Georgia clubs. Many of them will be accompanied by their wives and daughters. They will leave Atlanta on a special train on the morning of June 4 and will be joined at Greensboro by delegations from North Carolina and South Carolina.

"The afternoon of June 5 will be spent in Philadelphia sightseeing and visiting the exposition. June 6 will be spent on the Saint Lawrence river from Clayton, New York, to Montreal. After the convention the party will visit Portland, Maine, and Boston, and will go by water from Fall River to New York city.

"An interesting feature of the trip will be the suitcase exposition of Georgia products, suggested by Dan G. Bickers, of the Savannah club. Each Georgia club will take a suitcase filled with the products of its community. They will be assembled and exhibited at Montreal. Georgia producers, whose goods are sold in Montreal, will also have them featured during the convention by dealers who handle them.

"Members of the Georgia party will wear white hats bearing the word 'Georgia.' Special Georgia songs are being arranged and will be sung en route and during the convention. Accommodations have been arranged for all Georgia Kiwanians at one hotel and special Georgia dinners will be served. While the international character of Kiwanis will be apparent throughout the convention, the fact that Georgia Kiwanians are from Georgia will be emphasized from the time they leave Georgia until they get back."

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

THE ANDREWS BOMB.

The recommendation of General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury and head of national prohibition enforcement, that the legalization of light beer—non-intoxicating—be effected as one method of arresting the present orgie of hard liquor drinking in America, cannot fail to be interpreted as an official admission that prohibition enforcement is utterly failing. Otherwise not the slightest suggestion of a compromise with alcohol, even "to a non-intoxicating extent," would be considered.

Perhaps the most startling feature of his supplementary testimony before the senate investigating committee Wednesday was his admission that millions of gallons of "home brew" are being distilled weeky in homes for domestic use only, and that while this is "prohibited," the real purpose of enforcement is to take intoxicating liquors only out of commerce—a purpose, lamentably far from even a gradual realization. That appears to be a fresh encouragement to the family "still."

The fact has been unmistakable, since the swing of the pendulum almost to an extreme in arrests for drunkenness, and in the flagrant defiance of the Volstead act in every militia district in America, that the local manufacture, for sale, of various and sundry kinds of concoctions to produce inebriacy, and homicidal and suicidal mania and moral irresponsibility, presented the most serious aspect of the whole miserable situation. While more exploitation has been given to the smuggling problem, and to the big synthetic rectifying operations resulting from alcohol diverted from legal channels, the daily operation everywhere of hundreds of thousands of commercial "stills," turning out alcoholic liquors from the fermented "mashes" of almost every conceivable vegetable and fruit and plant and grain and wood, is a problem much more difficult of solution than the apprehension of smugglers, even though only 5 per cent of the "imported" products are arrested, according to the testimony of General Andrews.

And yet, realizing these facts to be true, the country was hardly prepared to hear the statement that there are enormous numbers of small private stills set up in homes everywhere, all over the land, merely to make the liquors for private home consumption—which situation, admitted the prohibition head, is "tearing at the morals of the young to a distressing extent."

The beer suggestion of General Andrews will not set well with the ultra prohibition element. Nor with the majority element of the country if such a compromise should tend toward a final repeal of the amendment, and toward the final return of the brass rail and the beer saloon. President Coolidge, it is said, frowns upon it.

The process of edging up, by degrees, to a statutory defiance of a constitutional law would seem to be a paradoxical situation. And yet there is undeniably a fear of it. As a result of this fear General Andrews, for being frank, has probably impaired his usefulness.

One thing is certain, this country cannot indefinitely endure the present situation. The conditions as clearly brought out in recent surveys of prohibition leaders, and in the present congressional investigation, shows beyond question the intolerable mess the entire country is in with regard to liquor, and the alarming spread of death and disease and mania and immorality by reason of it.

The saloon must not come back. The federal constitution must not be abused and defied. The 18th amendment must not be repealed. But the government must arrest the present carnival of bootlegging, and crime, and tragedy, and immorality resulting from the cataclysm of law defiance in this respect.

Something in the interest of temperance, sobriety, health and morality must be done—and that at the earliest possible moment.

MARVELOUS GROWTH.

That Atlanta made steady gains in population, industry and finances during 1925 is clearly shown by the 1926 city directory which came off the press recently. The following statistical totals with comparisons tell an unanswerable story:

Population — 1926, 256,385; 1925, 253,783.

Bank capitalization—1926, $16,200,000; 1925, $15,308,510.

Bank surplus and undivided profits — 1926, $12,500,000; 1925, $12,406,419.

Desposits—1926, $163,217,521; 1925, $133,351,831.

Total resources—1926, $223,880,237; 1925, $198,051,622.

Postal receipts—1926, $3,628,823; building costs, $10,403,588.

Of the above the population figures only are estimates, the universal rule being to multiply the names in the directory by 2½ to cover the men, women and children whose names do not appear. In the 1926 directory there are 102,555 names as against 101,513 in the 1925 edition.

The most outstanding feature, perhaps, and one that shows the most encouraging economic condition, is the increase in bank deposits of approximately $30,000,000 in one year.

In analyzing the population feature it must be understood that the great suburban development of the past year naturally attracted thousands of people to residences beyond the city limits whose names do not appear. And yet the fixed increase—considering the large number of Atlantans who spent much time in Florida during a great deal of 1925, in business activities connected with the abnormal conditions in that state—is phenomenal. Most of those citizens, who left Atlanta only temporarily, are returning daily. Atlanta's increase in population in 1926, therefore, will probably break all records.

These figures show a marvelous city growth.

THE TEACHERS' PAY.

The final act of the extra session was the enactment of the bill by Representative Stark, of Whitfield, submitting a constitutional amendment to increase the borrowing power of the governor to $3,500,000 for the prompt payment of the school teachers' salaries, thus preventing losses heretofore forced upon them by the necessity for accepting discounts in the sale of their warrants.

If the amendment is ratified, as it should be—for the necessity for meeting promptly the state's obligation to its teachers is too pressing to admit of argument—the next assembly will pass the enabling act, and provide for the payment of the debt the governor will have been empowered to create.

A state debt is a state debt, it matters not whether it is represented by a debenture bond or by a specifically secured bond — the resources of the state are necessarily behind any legally authorized obligation. It would have been more satisfactory, more businesslike, more consistent, to have submitted a clean-cut state bond amendment. The interest rate would have been lower, the credit of the state would have been better conserved.

In the legislature's failure, however, to let the people pass upon a straight educational bond issue, it is hoped—in the interest of justice—that this debenture measure may be ratified.

When teachers are paid promptly, and are standardized, and allowed adequate salaries, a decided step forward in our public school system will have been taken.

LOWER COTTON RATES.

Cotton growers, through their cooperative marketing associations, are appealing to the interstate commerce commission for lower freight rates. There are many good reasons for the petition, instituted specifically by the Arkansas group, but having the sympathetic indorsement of other state organizations.

The high freight rates that apply peculiarly to the transportation of cotton are causing losses to growers that are inexcusable. The transportation act protects the railroads. It fixes a standard for net earnings. It does not so protect the shipper except to define that rates shall be "just and reasonable."

The earnings of the roads are greater than at any time in the nation's transportation history. They are greater, it is claimed, in the cotton belt than in any other commodity belt by reason of forced rates on that major commodity that are not "just and reasonable." Then such revisions should be made as to make them so. The railroads will profit even the more by agreeing to this.

If the cotton farmer is handicapped and embarrassed by high freight tariffs, or if a justifiable production profit is turned into a loss by excessive carrier charges, the entire economic structure feels it. Merchants and other shippers feel it just as acutely as the cotton producers. A remedying of such a situation would therefore strengthen the general commercial status and strengthen rather than diminish railroad earnings.

There is not the slightest doubt that major railroads of this country have been "edging-up" on the public until a reaction will set in, which will be generally hurtful if it is not stopped. Railroads are essential to trade and to development. They deserve encouragement. They deserve to be cooperated with. But cooperation demands that the railroads shall also enter into it, not merely for selfish and narrow purposes, but for continued success through the success of those whom they serve and with whom they deal.

The public has a different viewpoint of railroads from that of 25 years ago. Then politicians fed upon the unrest of the people that the railroads had invited. A more cooperative policy on the part of the latter during the past decade has turned public antagonism to public support and sympathy.

But this condition cannot long prevail, nor can the pendulum be held at a plumb, unless the railroads show a more popular spirit of helping their patrons as far as consistent with good service and fair earnings.

GO TO CHURCH.

While conflicting forces are warring as to the prohibition issue, and the front pages of newspapers are devoting entirely too much space to the exploitation of crime, and older heads are worrying as to the laxity of social license, and the tendency of the young to jazz is alarming, would it not be well for everybody to turn today to the good old religion of our mothers—go to church, listen, study, think of the beautiful ideals, instead of the horrible cesspools of life?

The other day several great publishing houses in the world were asked by a magazine to name the ten "best sellers," and every one of them named the Holy Bible as the best—not one of the best sellers, but the best seller among the millions of books that have been published since its promises first gave comfort to a soul-hungry world.

It will always be so, because there is no other story half so beautiful, half so inspiring, half so heartening. It is the pillar of strength by day, the lounge of heart-repose by night.

This is the Sabbath day. Surely a portion of it should be devoted to worship—to a surrender to the better impulses, to an intimate study of the Giver of all blessings, to a reverential appreciation of the Father of all mercies.

BORDENS COME SOUTH.

The other day in Starkville, Miss., the Borden company, one of the world's largest milk condensing institutions, opened a great southern branch—the first plant of the kind built in the south. It cost a half million dollars, and is equipped with the most modern machinery. All the Borden products will be made there. Naturally it has given the dairying industry in that state, and in the entire southeast, a tremendous impetus. It marks an admission of the south's potential opportunities in raw milk and cream production that must be of inestimable value in the future.

The opening of this, the first great milk condensing plant in the south, means that others will follow. That is inevitable. Just as the textile industry started to the south 25 years ago and developed year by year until today it is the great textile section of the world, and as the ceramic factories are coming to the south, and other factories in line with the general trend, this move of the Borden company is undoubtedly prophetic.

There is no field in America more promising for successful dairying than the southeast—than Georgia. Already creameries are being put in in various places, and the farmers of Georgia have turned to small dairy herds, since the advent of the boll weevil and the necessity for balanced agriculture, as never before. There is an excellent opportunity for a great condensing plant in Georgia and no doubt, as other industries are finding their way to this section, so will this one.

FOR NATIONAL PARKS.

The bill pending in congress to establish the Shenandoah and the Smoky Mountain national parks has been revised to include also a Mammoth Cave national park in Kentucky. Secretary Work has not approved the latter but has approved the other two—the Shenandoah in Virginia and the Smoky Mountain in North Carolina and Tennessee.

The national park commission appointed by the secretary of the interior two years ago recommended the Shenandoah first, and then issued a supplementary recommendation for the Smoky Mountain.

The conditions to be met outside of governmental are proceeding rapidly and satisfactorily in both of these instances. There is little doubt now that these parks will be established — the first national parks, other than memorial, or military parks, to be established in the eastern states.

The Constitution views the progress in this matter with peculiar pride. It took up vigorously but alone the fight for a national park in the southern Appalachian in 1922, conducted the first expedition, and subsequently continued its campaign for an Appalachian park commission to make surveys and recommendations until Secretary Work appointed such a commission.

The latter became so interested and enthused that he personally headed the personal inspection tour of the various sites.

It was at first hoped that a four-state park, touching the two Carolinas, Georgia and Tennessee, could be established, but the impracticability of obtaining a suitable connecting site in Georgia, without converting the national forests, became quickly apparent. It was finally decided to have two parks, as outlined.

The progress that has so far been made has been marvelous, and within a few years at most the people of America will find in the mountain areas of the south park attractions equal to those of the west, the Yellowstone, Yosemite, Glacier, etc.

In the meantime the development of the Georgia national forests for recreational purposes will proceed.

These are advancements in mountain development that are worth while—advancements to be proud of.

CHILD HEALTH DAY.

May 1 is children's day. It always has been and always will be. And it should be. We should give more thought to it as a children's health day. Every day should be a health day—for young and old—as much as it is humanly possible to make it. But the purpose of the May day celebration is to focus especial attention upon our children—"our most precious national asset," as Herbert Hoover has said—and upon their health, which also means their happiness, and their usefulness.

The American Child Health association suggested, and is aiding in promoting, May day as national child health day, believing that it is a picturesque and effective instrument in developing what Mr. Hoover calls "a permanent American movement toward securing to our children their most elemental rights; to be born well, to have a healthy childhood, and to reach maturity in the happiness that comes in its fullness only to those whose physical heritage has been safeguarded."

The association does not attempt to suggest nor to plan state or local programs. This is the privilege and the responsibility of the state chairmen and their associates; and the wisdom of this policy was proved by the sound and far-reaching success of many state programs in 1925. It endeavors, however, to enlist, to coordinate, and make as widely effective as possible the interest and cooperation of national leaders, national organizations, editors, the radio and moving picture interests, outstanding advertising and commercial bodies. It is working closely and constantly with the leaders of these groups.

Mrs. C. A. VerNooy, of Athens, is chairman of the Georgia May day committee. She urges all schools in the state to lend their best efforts toward using the May day celebration to emphasize health subjects in the schools and in the community. She has sent the following to superintendents:

"If you have not planned to have an elaborate May day festival growing out of the health work done in your school during the year, please give the children a picnic to celebrate the beginning of your summer round-up of pre-school children who will enter school next fall. If your P.-T. A. has not entered every school in your county in The Delineator contest—as suggested in inclosed outline—please see that this is done next fall, using inclosed stamped envelope to give me a report of your intention to help to make 'every father and every mother a blue ribbon parent in 1926.'"

This is an important and an urgent matter. Every school should join heartily in the spirit of making the day one of real usefulness and service as well as one of happiness for all the children.

GRAND OPERA.

Atlanta will be the mecca this week for the music lovers of eastern America.

The 16th annual Metropolitan Grand Opera season, which begins with the rendition of Aida Monday evening, promises to be the climax of a long series of undisputed successes.

The return of old favorites, and the addition of new all-American stars, tend to intensify the keen interest. The repertoire is admirable.

From every section the beauty and culture of the south will be represented.

From the east and central west groups of prominent men and women will join the pilgrimage to the music capital. For Atlanta Grand Opera is now a national institution.

A cordial greeting to the great staff of artists, to the others of the Metropolitan organization, to he visitors, to everybody. It is the week of weeks in Atlanta's cultural life.

THIS OLD WORLD FOR ME

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

If it's springtime, if it's fall,
This old world for me!
Somehow think it beats them all—
All that I can see!
Stars that shine in heaven so high,
They must cheer it, speeding by!

II.

With its bloom, or with its blight—
Even its Calvary Tree,—
With its darkness and its light,
This old world for me!
Not a note its music mars,—
Lovelier than a heaven of stars!

In Search of One's Self

BY M. ASHBY JONES

In the Phaedo Crito asks Socrates where they shall bury him. He replies, "It makes no difference, but be very sure that you find me, for I might escape you." That does not simply apply to the experience which we call death, when the spirit leaves the body. In the every-day relationships of life, one can never be certain that he has found the real man, for dwelling within the same body there seem to be many personalities. One meets a man in his office, curt and cold, and then meets the same man, genial and cordial, in a company of his friends. We come in contact with a man driving a cruel bargain in a trade, and then see this same man in front of his fireside, the center of a loving circle of children.

Instances might be indefinitely multiplied of the principle that varying circumstances seem to elicit a variety of personalities from the same man. One needs only to examine himself to discover these multiple personalities, when startlingly different desires demand expression in life. In one mood he seems to be nothing less than a beast demanding to be fed, and fed at any cost. Again a voice clear as the call of an archangel's trumpet demands the consecration of every power for some heroic service. At one time there is a flippant, rollicking, careless self which shouts like an irresponsible boy. Again a voice, earnest and solemn in its tone, sounds through the soul, like the chant of a cathedral, summoning every faculty of spirit to worship. And man, upon close examination of himself, will be horrified at the possibility of what he might do under certain conditions. Or at other times he stands dazzled and skeptical before the splendid personality he might become.

Possible Personalities.

People on the outside, noting some of these varied expressions of the man, are puzzled to know which is the man himself. Friends say that his best is the true and real man. Enemies smile at these expressions of the good and call it hypocrisy, declaring that the worst is the real man. The truth is that no one mood or expression is a true definition. Each mood is a revelation of man he may be. Someone has said, "A man is not a fact but only a possibility, a constant becoming." That is, he is not something fixed or manufactured.

The explanation, to my mind, is that each of these varying moods or expressions of a man, is the result of some underlying appetite or desire, which for the time being is dominant in the personality. This dominant desire furnishes the motive of his mood, or his act. Should that motive grow in strength and habit of expression, mastering the other desires and thus becoming fixed and permanent, it will ultimately determine the kind of man he is to be. So each varying mood is, in a sense, a flashlight picture of the man that can be.

Note the cold glitter in the eye of the man who translates the interests of others into his own advantage. This may become characteristic, and every power of his personality hardens as he coins men into selfish advantage. It is terrifying to think that the eager greediness with which a man turns to drink may become so dominant in his life as to make the definition of his personality, expressed in the word "drunkard;" that is, an animal that lives to drink. But we would rather turn to the love-light in the eyes of that father, as he opens his arms to a little child, and remember that the purity of the passion which lit the radiance of that smile may become the mastering motive of his life, and that his personality may become a beckoning invitation to the wee ones of the world for sheltering love.

The Lost Man.

Indeed, I would rather that each one of us would think of the very best which has ever stirred within us—the tenderest sympathies, the loftiest ambitions, the highest ideals—and know that each one of us can be that best. For it is true that the best which you have ever seen as a possibility within yourself, is only a prophecy of that far better and nobler personality which you may be.

One may well ask, with modest skepticism, where that best self is. The answer is that he is lost and you must find him. Should not this, after all, be the supreme purpose of life? When baby child toddles out of the nursery, all big-eyed to see the world, something inside is saying, "Something is outside, to get it, or go be it." Yes, something is lost, and he starts out on a long search to find it. He does not know it, and possibly will never know it, but what he is searching for is himself.

If you are in a large city, seeking a certain place, you are lost until you find the way to your destination. No matter where else you may be, whether the surroundings be pleasant or unpleasant, you are lost. The crowd about you, moving hither and yon, may none of them be lost, for they are on their way to their destination. So in life, no matter what you are doing, or where you are, until you are on the way to your best, you are lost.

STORIES OF THE SOUTH

Tennessee's Triangular Contest

BY SAM W. SMALL

The most exciting campaign in the south, following the reconstruction epoch, was "the triangular contest" in Tennessee in 1872.

The congressional apportionment of that year gave Tennessee an additional congress member. The legislature could not be convened in special session to redistrict the state, so that in the November election that new member had to be chosen as "congressman-at-large" by the voters of the state as a whole.

Ex-President Andrew Johnson, after leaving the white house, was passionately hungry to get back into the national melee and have it out in congress with the radical enemies who had so harried him as president and unsuccessfully tried to impeach him.

He sought the senatorship in the legislative session of 1871, but was traded out of it by what he declared "the treachery of ingrates" whom he had befriended and trusted, therefore ,as the race for congressman-at-large would test his hold upon the democrats of the state he became a candidate for the office.

In the election of delegates to the state nominating convention Mr. Johnson won a clear majority. His stronghold was in East Tennessee, but it had long been the custom of the mountain region delegates to avoid the tedious and expensive journey to Nashville to personally attend conventions. Instead they sent proxies to trusted friends in Nashville to sit for them and vote their instructions. That was done by most of the Johnson delegates from the eastern counties.

Meanwhile a merry row had broken out in Nashville over the governorship. Governor John C. Brown, ex-Confederate general, had promised before his election that when elected he would appoint General B. Frank Cheatham, famous "Fighting Frank," as superintendent of the state penitentiary. But Brown appointed another man and that made Cheatham and his friends hornet-mad. They waited until Brown announced for reelection in 1872. Then Cheatham slipped down to Memphis, was serenaded by his admirers and boldly announced himself as a candidate for governor to succeed Brown.

The so-called "Confederate ring," led by ex-Senator Isham Harris, with Colonel John C. Burch and his "Nashvillee American" as party organ, was then dominant at Nashville. The ring was backing Brown and Cheatham's candidacy threatened to smash it. The boss-men hurriedly assembled and took Cheatham behind the door. They pledged him that if he would withdraw from the governor race they would nominate him for congressman-at-large and his election would be sure. The good old hero fell for their plan and that put it up to the ring-masters to make good.

But when the convention met the ring found itself shy of a working majority and it took the only way out of the hole. Having control of the state committee that body ruled that the vote of no county should be received that did not have an actual delegate on the floor of the convention. That ruled out enough Johnson proxies to give the ring control, whereupon the Johnson men bolted the convention and the nomination was handed to Cheatham.

That night the central part of Nashville was a seething mass of mad partisans of Johnson. They took him bodily from his hotel to the public square and demanded that he should declare his independent candidacy. In a scathing speech he did that and the big fight was on.

The republicans saw a chance and nominated Horace Maynard, the congressman of the Knoxville district. The ensuing campaign was a joint discussion by the three candidates, covering the state from end to end.

In many places the ex-Confederates rallied to Cheatham with such bitter demonstrations as to prevent Mr. Johnson from speaking to the assemblies. In other places they would try to howl him down or would desert the audience. But Johnson was of undaunted courage and often compelled the crowd to hear him and sometimes changed their jeers to cheers. But the result was inevitable, Maynard, the republican, was elected. But two years later Mr. Johnson won the state and was chosen United States senator, and soon died while holding that office.

Liquor Always Troublesome, Says Sullivan in Reviewing Past and Present Situation

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, April 17.—(Special Correspondence.)—In the hearings about prohibition and enforcement, and what to do about both, which have been a major center of interest in Washington for the two weeks just closing, the strongest and most sensational emphasis was laid on the fact, as alleged, that there is more law breaking now under federal prohibition than there was before—more law breaking under the nationwide prohibition law than in the old days when the liquor traffic was regulated by the states, each according to its taste.

Along with this went the implication that not only in this respect, but in all respects, the old way was better. That, indeed, is the central thesis of one whole school of the opponents of national prohibition. They want some change made, either in the eighteenth amendment or in the Volstead act, or both, or in the judicial interpretation of them which will permit each state to be its own judge of what to do about liquor within its own borders.

In this comparison of the present with the past there is, as it seems to the writer, at least one fallacy of a familiar sort—a fallacy that is so frequent as to be almost universal in all the fields of human thought. There is at least one fallacy, and perhaps more. To think that something different would be more agreeable than what is is one of the commonest human traits. Especially to think the past was golden is one of the most familiar sentiments of human nature.

The figures that raised upon the senate committee during the last two weeks seem to say there is more law breaking now than there was before the eighteenth amendment brought Uncle Sam into the business of preventing the manufacture and sale of liquor. Undoubtedly the figures, as figures, are correct. No one questions the figures, which come mainly from the records of the federal courts; and no one questions the good faith of those who brought the figures forward.

But two things must be remembered. One is that there is a higher standard of law now than there was before. The present law forbids all liquor at all times and all places. Naturally that increases the number of violations and attempted violations and prosecutions for violations. In short, a very much smaller quantity of liquor making and liquor selling might produce a very much greater quantity of statistics about law breaking.

Under the old regime there was prevention and attempted prevention only of some liquor selling, in some places and at some times. Only some of the states attempted complete prohibition; and even those states did not attempt, or could not legally attempt, to stop the shipment of liquor from other states to individual consumers within the states. Other states, including all the larger ones, refrained from any attempt whatever at general prohibition. Such states as New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and many others merely placed limits on the places and times when liquor could be sold.

Naturally under any attempt at complete prohibition there is more law breaking and attempts at law breaking than under the old condition of partial and often very mild limitations on the sale of liquor. Today every person who attempts to supply liquor to another, at any time or place or under any circumstances, is a potential law breaker. As such he is subject to the attention of the federal government and gets into the statistics. In the old days only a mere fraction of such attempts came under the notice of the law. Naturally the statistics show an increase.

The second thing to remember is that Uncle Sam really attempts enforcement. The federal government makes no exception, never undertakes the policy of winking at violation. That, also, swells the statistics of law breaking. Under the old regime comparatively few states or communities really tried to enforce the law in all places at all times. To wink at much of the violation was a policy that attended liquor regulation in nearly every state. Some states contentedly permitted the liquor regulation laws to be dead letters as respects the major portion of their population.

In 1904 the legislature of New York state was about to consider changes in its liquor regulation laws. The New York Tribune on January 6, 1904, just as the legislative session was beginning to get together a summary of the liquor laws, and of the conditions attending their enforcement, in all the states situated like New York—in all the states, that is, in which there were large cities. It was an excellent journalistic idea and thoroughly well carried out. After The Tribune had got its facts from its correspondents and observers throughout the country, it printed them in an impressive broadside. The brief extracts reproduced here are taken from the reports—which were a majority of the whole—about cities in which enforcement was attempted only partially or not at all. Several cities, including Philadelphia, Atlanta, Baltimore and some others, reported adequate living up to the law.

The Tribune began its summary with a brief editorial note:

"The question of Sunday liquor selling in New York threatens to loom largely in the legislative session which opens in Albany today. . . . By way of furnishing our lawmakers, and to the public generally, information as to the experience, custom and laws of other states and municipalities, The Tribune herewith supplies reports from the principal cities of this country."

From St. Louis The Tribune's observer reported:

"The law as to Sunday closing is clear and explicit, but is treated as a dead letter. Even the formality of a closed front door has long since been abandoned. The saloons are as wide open as are the churches, and the aggregate attendance therein is much greater."

The St. Louis law provided that any saloon keeper "who shall open such dramshop, or shall sell, give away or otherwise dispose of, or suffer the same to be done upon or about his premises, any intoxicating liquors in any quantity on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $200, shall forfeit such license, and shall not again be allowed to keep a dramshop for the term of two years next thereafter."

The Tribune's observer in St. Louis reported: "There is no case on record where this (action by the police or by the prosecuting attorney to enforce the law) has been done."

This St. Louis report of conditions in 1904 has several lessons for the present generation. It is the case of a city which, just like many cities today, resisted the enforcement of prohibition. The difference is that in the old days a state was willing to let its large cities resist the state's prohibition law. The states let the cities get away with it. That was common under the old regime of regulations by the state governments.

But the federal government has a larger sense of its dignity and responsibility than a state government. Uncle Sam is not disposed to make exceptions. If Uncle Sam were willing to do what the state government of Missouri was complacently willing to do, and what other states did, namely, permit the big cities to ignore the law—in that event probably we should have much less commotion about the eighteenth amendment.

We shall see this Missouri and St. Louis situation as it was under the old regime duplicated in several other states with large cities in the same period.

In another respect the Missouri situation was analogous to the present. It was the case of a majority residing in the rural districts passing a liquor regulation law—and a minority in the cities resisting it.

The Louisville observer reported:

"The saloons in Kentucky are not supposed to be open on Sunday, but each city observes the law as it deems best . . . The statute makes it an indictable offense to sell liquor on Sunday . . . but in Louisville, and also in Covington and Newport, the Sunday law is not observed. By common consent the doors of all saloons are as wide open on Sunday as any other day, and it has been found that this gives the best results."

From New Orleans the Tribune's observer reported:

"The Sunday law of Louisana has been on the statute books since 1884, and it never has been changed in any particular . . . Its enforcement is a farce so far as the city of New Orleans and large towns are concerned. . . . . The well known contempt of the saloon element for the Sunday law and its general disregard, except during spasms of enforcement, have led to a sentiment in favor of its repeal on the ground that it cannot be enforced, but, fortunately, this sentiment is not strong enough to effect any change in the law."

There is much interest and possibly some value in that old symposium. For one thing, it will convey to the newer generation of readers and voters the fact that trouble about liquor is no new thing. Measured in trems of voters, of interest in public affairs, generations are very short. Some millions of persons are now voting whose memories and whose newspaper reading does not go back of 1918. Young folks do not begin to read the serious parts of newspaper or to take an interest in public affairs until they are sixteen or eighteen. Doubtless many of these young voters think that before the eighteenth amendment was passed, before the year 1918, we never had any trouble about liquor. Doubtless from reading what is now said they may think that ante-1918 was a time when everybody was satisfied, or at least much more nearly satisfied than now. Reading these extras from the New York Tribune of January 6, 1904, will show them another picture. There was at least as much about liquor and about lawbreaking in the newspapers of ten and twenty years ago as there is now.

There is something to be said for the dry point of view that the liquor interests always oppose all regulation. They oppose total prohibition now, and they opposed partial prohibition before. The drys think there is no kind of degree of regulation that the liquor interests will agree to and obey. They say that what we had before 1918 was a modification of the Volstead act. The liquor interests didn't approve it or obey it. Would they, the drys ask, obey some different modification of the Volstead act that we might adopt now?

The one possible proposal of change that has a chance of making headway with the drys is the government monopoly, the government dispensary method of monopolizing the liquor traffic and keeping it wholly out of private hands, clear of the incentive of profit, free from any motive to stimulate consumption—such a government dispensary system as is now practiced in Canada. The drys might be brought to consider that. They will hardly ever consent to the return of liquor, in any form or degree, as a private business.

One of the advantages of some acquaintance with the past, even the immediate past, is to learn that few political problems are really new. The liquor question may seem a troublesome question now, but it always has been a troublesome question ever since it occured to man to regulate it. Doubtless it will continue to be troublesome for some generations to come. Men long for solutions to questions, for something very concrete and definite and thoroughgoing—something that will enable us to say, "Well, that question is out of the way, anyhow." But there are few such solutions for any question, few such magic amulets. The drys a few years ago thought complete prohibition through constitutional amendment would be the final answer, would end all trouble. But it hasn't. Neither, probably, will the next phase be the final one, whatever the next phase may be.

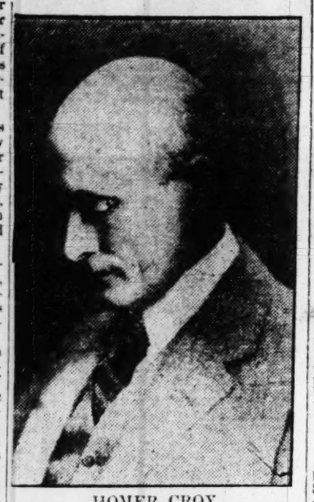

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

They Had To See Paris. By Homer Croy, author of "West of the Water Tower," who last summer went to Europe, bag and baggage, for a year of wandering abroad. His books and his pictures have been a subject of interest since the publication of his first novel.

The title of his new book recalls the comments that were made, both by friends and people in general, over Croy's going to Paris, he having become widely known as well as newly rich by the sale of several books, three I believe, the first of which was located in his home town, entitled "West of the Water Tower."

Mr. Croy has created a most unusual type of a hero for his new story, for Pike Peters should be found listed with the real human characters that have made several American writers famous in the past few years.

Pike Peters and his family lived in Clearwater, Okla. It will not be necessary to get a map for the purpose of locating the little town, for, as the author says, "the large complete atlases are no good, and unless you get the right kind of a map you can't tell whether the name belongs to this tiny dot or to that tiny dot a few millimeters over." He suggests that if the reader wishes to go to this trouble the best thing to do is to get a railroad folder, or an automobile guide, for it is as impossible to get out of the reach of motor travel as it is the very refreshing drink of Coca-Cola.

HOMER CROY,

creator of Pike Peters, hero of Mr. Croy's novel. "They Had to See Paris." This picture shows how very serious humorists usually look.

Our hero becomes an oil king and then comes the great longing to see Paris and in a style befitting his new position. Mrs. Peters immediately plans to enter French society and secure a titled husband for her daughter. With the assistance of a friend, guide and philosopher, this newly rich family start out to storm Paris, and as the readers have already guessed, the adventures are many, the incidents are filled with comical features, and the accidents, episodes, etc., will keep the reader in a state of excitement wondering what the Pike Peters will do next. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The High Adventure. By Jeffrey Farnol, author of "The Broad Highway," who usually believes in creating heroes who like to travel, and this time he has selected Jeremy, nephew of Sir James Trevor, who after a serious interview with his uncle, was advised to try the Broad Highway, with only his dog for a companion, the result of which caused him to make the following comment:

'We are out upon 'The High Adventure,' you and I: battle, murder and sudden death, Bill; blood, fire and stricken field are all one to us. Show me your teeth—excellent! Look at these fists—sufficient, I venture to think! They did well enough at school and university and shall do better, I trust."

So the young nephew of a noble house starts on his way followed by his only friend, Bill. From this time on Jeremy, who had dreams and visions of real adventure, had all he wanted, and even more than he dreamed of, for he entered the land of romance and then life became worth while for Jeremy and Bill, his faithful dog and friend. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

The Pride of the Town. By Dorothy Walworth Carman. When two young lovers are ready to announce their engagement they have the world with all its sunshine and flowers before them, for all the world loves a lover.

It was under just such circumstances that Hypatia and Christopher started out in life together with all the romantic ideas that usually fill the minds of a young bride and groom who are very much in love with each other, and yet one wanted to be a poet and the other a musician.

And they were surrounded by the following: "Main street rises up to crush both artists. Ladies Aid societies, better baby campaigns, the thousand and one demands of church and community threaten to engulf Hypatia; while Christopher inevitably goes the way of the go-getter, and becomes an exemplary member of the business clubs and the Loyal League of Antlers."

This is a thoroughly enjoyable story and one that will prove entertaining to any man or woman who loves life and its every-day affairs. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

Child of the Wild. A Novel of Alaska. By Edison Marshall, author of "The Sleeper of the Moonlit Ranges." It is the interesting story of Homeless Land and of a little boy who fights to free himself from its friendless shores. The author is a well-known writer. The illustrations are by Herbert M. Stoops. (Cosmopolitan Book corporation, New York.)

Rodomont. A Romance of Mont St. Michael in the Days of Louis XIV. By H. Bedford Jones, which is considered one of the best romantic stories written in a long time and, while the writer is noted for his unusually striking heroes, not one has been presented with more admiration than the young Bostonian—Rodomont.

There's plenty of adventure, intrigue and love to cause all the excitement and enthusiasm in which the readers of today are mostly interested. The titles of the chapters, which are from the 1st to the 15th, almost tell the story—the last two chapters, "What Is Written Is Written," and "The Lie," both of which end the story in a most thrilling style. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The Son of the House. By Anthony Pryde, author of "Nightfall," "Spanish Sunlight," etc. In this most interesting novel the central figure is Julian Charnwood, a clever and successful young man, who is on his way home to England with the fortune he has made in South America. In this story the other leading characters are Denis Hay, his friend, a dreamer and idealist; Delphine, Olive and other charming girls who make this a most attractive story.

The author has built his story on a splendid foundation and, with the interweaving of the romances of a present and a past generation in which there are many dramatic features, the reader will deeply appreciate this new contribution by an author whose stories are noted for their colorful background. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

Herbs and Apples is by a new author, Helen Hooven Santmyer, and while it is a first novel, it has a title that almost tells the story that she has written, giving "fresh outlook on life and a promise for the future."

The story is woven around the young daughter of Dr. Richard Thornton, who was named Derrick Thornton and who had spent her life in a small town in southern Ohio. She is the possessor of more ambition than her father, surer that she will some day be a great writer than he was that some day he would be a great surgeon, but she learns that ambition does not always bring happiness to us or to those we love.

The story is beautifully told and the writer has created the splendid character of a young girl who learns only too well the result of the title—Herbs and Apples. (Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.)

The Happy Ghost. By H. H. Bashford, author of "The Corner of Harley Street," which proved to his many readers that he was a good story-teller. In this new book there are 20 most interesting stories, all of which possess good plots and are written with the human quality which makes his stories of special interest. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

A New Name. By Grace Livingston Hill, whose books have been a welcome visitor since she made her old college friends happy by the successful development of her literary talent.

She writes like she looks from the pictures that have been used from time to time in The Constitution's literary page—strong, healthy and happy. Even the cover of Mrs. Hill's new novel is most attractive, as it tells the story of a man and a maid.

Readers of the author's writings are loath to even have an outline of her stories—they want to enjoy it all first-hand—and for this reason the announcement is simply made that her new book has been received. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

With or Without. By Fanny Heaslip Lea, author of "The Dreammaker Man," a story that was so beautiful that its many readers always expressed their great pleasure to their friends after reading it.

The author introduces her principal characters at a time when the domestic wheels were not running very smoothly. In fact, she says in the first paragraph: "The Devlins were having a row. Nothing extraordinary. Merely one of those periodic outbursts, those lava flows, as it were, by which volcanoes and marriages from time to time relieve an inner tension, an accumulation of ash."

The story is really woven around Sally Devlin, whose seven years of married life are rehearsed for the benefit of the readers. It is simply a story in which there could be a good deal of supposin.'

For instance, suppose you had left a fairly good job to marry a certain young man who had all the promise of success, and that in a short while the rainbow colors began to fade; suppose there wasn't quite the same old thrill about keeping house; suppose love-making was getting stale, and romance was a thing of the honeymoon days, and suppose a chance came to you to be independent? Would you take it? Or would you try to think that happier days would come?

Now what Sally did without much supposin' is the story told by the author with her usual witty pen and in clever style. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

Inspector French's Greatest Case. A detective story by F. Wills Crofts, author of "The Cask," etc. (Thomas Seltzer, Publisher, New York.)

Gun Gospel. By W. D. Hoffman, who is a product of the west and is thoroughly familiar with the scenes of which he writes. He has edited newspapers in Arizona and New Mexico and owned a ranch on the Rio Grande. Lovers of western fiction will find many thrills in Mr. Hoffman's latest book. (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

Challenge. By Joan Sutherland, whose description of a series of brilliant scenes in Paris, London, the Riviera, of Washington and international affairs, will be found of special interest by the reader who likes a plot that covers several countries and their customs. It is a novel of love and adventure. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

Mr. and Mrs. Haddock in Paris. By Donald Ogden Stewart. This interesting family is already well known to many readers whose report of their European trip last year was filled with so much excitement. But they, like the Croys, are interested in Paris, and its people and styles. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

An Intimate Record of the Tour of the Prince of Wales to Africa and South America. By Ralph Deakin, special correspondent of The London Times, with a preface by H. R. H. The Prince of Wales, K. G.

The Price of Wales has been called the most popular traveler in the world, and the reader no doubt will enjoy reading about his travels almost as much as the prince enjoys traveling. The introductory which covers several pages is entitled "The Prince and His Mission."

It was last March a year ago that the prince left England in the battle cruiser "Repulse" and started out on one of the journeys that have made him the greatest traveler of the world. Just as the boat left the pier the royal marines began playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me," which did not seem to cause even an extra ripple on the water's surface or an extra smile on the prince's face, yet there was a look of affection as he waved a last farewell to his brother, Prince Henry, and of interest "as the blue-gray ship slid out under her own steam," and with all the pride and dignity which brought forth exclamations of admiration, "she finally disappeared into the grayness of the outer roads."

The royal welcome was given him everywhere—"Muy Simpatico," was the greeting of South America, contributing for his pleasure the "fascinating sights of a fascinating country," in which it cannot be said that Africa brought up the rear.

The story of his interest during his travels is most entertainingly told from the holding of the durbar on the great Kano plain to duck shooting and polo playing, etc.

No traveler's trip to these wonderful countries has been as significant, and the story of this volume of over 300 pages loses none of the flavor of the native pomp and ceremony, and there is no doubt but what his travels have been the means of bringing about a better understanding of certain affairs in which the whole world is seriously interested. (J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia, price $4.)

THE HISTORY OF FRANCE.

The History of France. By Jaques Bainville, and translated by Alice Gauss, A. M., and Christian Gauss, A. M., Litt.D. professor of modern languages, Princeton university, a very handsome book in blue and gold on the cover of which are the following lines:

"You have read recent biographies touched with the magic of the novelist's art—here is history that takes on the allure of romance."

The story of France has been told and retold many times, and while the writers are from every country known there has always been a charm about the story of France that was appealing in the telling again of the same old story. But in reading "Bainville's History of France," which will prove to be of more than usual interest, the reader will understand why so many editions have already been sold in France.

The writer knows his native land and, therefore, has the inspiration to write of the beauties of France in a way to make it as entertaining and as exciting as the well-written novel of today. He tells not only of the thrilling deeds, but of the motives of the men who have been the leading spirit of France's greatness in his most absorbing story of this land.

And from the first if the reader will follow the mood of the writer "through Philip Augustus' development of the monarchy, the many wars of France's enemies so interestingly told, the gay Renaissance courts, the religious wars which have always been like a reign of terror, the reemergence of the power of the crown under Henry IV, Louis XIII and Cardinal Richelieu and Louis XIV, the great career of Napoleon, the picturesque alternation of monarchy, republic and Napoleon III's empire, the troubled fortunes of the republic, down to France's part in the great war," he will find the volume one of the most entertaining that has been written.

The illustrations are of the characters who have made the history of France—Louis XIV. being the first and Napoleon Bonaparte the last. It also has an index which will be of a great of assistance in reading the history. D. Appleton and Company. Price $3.50.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

The Light Which Cannot Fail. True stories of heroic blind men and women. By Winifred Holt, author of "A Beacon for the Blind," with an introductory letter by the Rt. Hon. Viscount Bryce, and a prefatory note by Joseph Reinach. E. P. Dutton & Co. New York.

Who's Who of the Oxford Movement. Prefaced by a brief story of that movement. By Sir Bertram Windle, well known in Great Britain as the author of twenty or more books.

Sir Bertram first became interested in the Oxford movement 40 years ago when he made the acquaintance of Cardinal Newman and of others who were important actors in it. Since that time he has made a study of the period, its letters and memoirs, and has ferreted out details concerning many of the very minor characters, with the result that his book is, in many respects, a final statement. The Century Co. New York.

A First German Book. By Frederick Betz, A. M., and William Raleigh Price, both men being educators of prominence in universities. In the preface the writers give the information with reference to the student's work. American Book Co. New York.

Studies and Songs—Books I and II, for Individual Sight Singing. By Laura Bryant, director of music in the public schools of Ithaca, N. Y. Words by Edith Horton.

Indigestion. What it is and How to Prevent It. By Dr. Arthur L. Holland, assistant professor of clinical medicine in the Cornell University Medical college. The author of this book gives the facts, causes, treatment and methods of prevention in a plain and common-sense style that will make it understandable to anyone.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

Kathleen Norris has paid splendid tribute to Louise Closser Hale's recently published novel of the stage, Home Talent. (Holt). Mrs. Norris says it is "the shrewd, funny, tender and temperate book that we who love her earlier stories had every reason to expect from her. . . . One laughs outright—unless one feels that curious twist of the heart that means crying outright instead." Here is a close-up story of player folk by a distinguished player, for Mrs. Hale has won fame for her stage characterizations—she knows whereof she writes.

Appleton will issue this week as the latest addition to their Whole World Music Series, "Operatic Violin Selections the Whole World Plays." The volume is edited by Albert E. Wier, and contains some forty selections from classic, romantic and modern grand operas by Bizet, Boito, Deliebs, Flotow, Gluck, Humperdinck, Massenet, Meyerbeer, Moussorgsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Verdi, Wagner and other world-celebrated composers.

"Healthy entertainment for men of all ages" is what The New York Times calls Douglas Fairbanks' new motion picture, "The Black Pirate," which has just opened in New York. Mr. Fairbanks' book, "Youth Points the Way," might very well be described in the same words. In it he most entertainingly tells "men of all ages," man and boy, how he manages to make life a sport and wring every atom of vigorous enjoyment from it.

Two more "Parnells" are coming—"The Parnell of Real Life," by William O'Brien, and "Parnell—the Last Five Years Told From Within," by Sir Alfred Robbins, but St. John Ervine's "Parnell" has the advantage of being the first of the present-day group in the field and it has been favorably received in the United States and England.

Who first used the term, "the melting pot," to describe the United States as a receptacle for immigrants? The term was popularized when Israel Zangwill wrote his famous play with this title, in 1908, but it is said that the expression was used by Carl Schurz many years before. It appears again in "The Melting-Pot Mistake," by Henry Pratt Fairchild, professor of sociology at New York university.

MINISTERS FIGHT ATTACK ON BIBLE

Charlotte, N. C., April 17.—(AP)—Thirty-two ministers and laymen representing various churches in North Carolina met here and organized a "committee of one hundred" for the express purpose of combatting all influences in the state schools and institutions of learning which "tend to destroy the faith of the people in the bible as the inspired word of God."

Following the meeting, which was held in the First Baptist church, it was announced that steps would be taken to form an organization in every county in the state to promote the cause represented by the "committee of one hundred." While only 32 names were announced as of those present, it was said that the list would be increased to 100.

Judge Walter H. Neal of Laurinburg, spokesman for the group, made public following the meeting resolutions which he said had been adopted by the organization accompanied by an explanatory statement. The statement which Judge Neal said is really interpretative of the resolutions follows:

"1. We are unalterably opposed to the union of church and state.

"2. We are likewise opposed to any attacks issuing from any source that tend to discredit the Bible as the inspired word of God.

"3. Inasmuch as our state-supported schools are not permitted to to teach the Bible, we are strongly opposed to their teaching any doctrine which tends to destroy the faith of our people in the scriptures as the authoritative word of God.

"4. We conceive the purpose of our state-supported schools and colleges to be the servants of the whole people and not the servants of any class of so-called liberalists or fundamentalists

"5. We commend to the consideration to the people of North Carolina the following statement of Thomas Jefferson: To compel a man to furnish contributions of money for the propagation of opinions which he disbelieves, is sinful and tyrannical.' Our schools shall be our servants and not our masters.

"6. In order to the accomplishment of the foregoing, we earnestly appeal to the citizenship of our state for earnest and effective cooperation."

POTATO OUTLOOK VERY PROMISING IN TOOMBS COUNTY

Lyons, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Early sweet potato growers of Toombs county are very enthusiastic as this has been the best season for transplanting they have had in several years. The beds are turning out more this year than last and the plants will be put out earlier for a larger acreage of early Big Stem Jersies.

It is generally thought this county will ship 200 cars of these toothsome sweets for the early markets this year and arrangements are being made for handling them on more markets than ever before.

Georgia Editors Plan To Attend Editorial Meet in Los Angeles

Sandersville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—A number of Georgia editors are planning to attend the annual meeting of the National Editorial association which will be held in Los Angeles, June 30-July 1-3, according to Gordon S. Chapman, vice president of Georgia for the association.

A special train will be operated out of Chicago via Kansas City and El Paso. The railroads have granted excursion fares for the meeting and it is estimated more than 300 from all sections of the country will attend.

Mr. Chapman, who has been made publicity director of the N. E. A. trip, will have a private office aboard the special and will furnish the members with daily feature stories en route and also during the convention in Los Angeles.

Following the business meeting the editors will spend 10 days sight-seeing in California and later will return via Seattle. Others of the party are planning side trips to Alaska and the Canadian Rockies, Mr. Chapman states.

Georgians who make the trip will be provided a special Pullman out of Atlanta to join the special train at Kansas City, it is announced.

SANDERSVILLE PLANS CITY AUDITORIUM

Sandersville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—A long-felt need will be filled when this city is provided with another auditorium. The women composing the Sandersville Music club have raised approximately $1,000 towards a $2,000 fund to purchase 500 opera chairs which will be placed in the old school auditorium.

This will give Sandersville an assembly hall for school purposes and a large auditorium for entertainments. The committee in charge of the work states that new stage scenery will also be provided which will give Sandersville one of the best equipped auditoriums in the state.

Kahn To Be Distinguished Visitor Here During Opera

In the person of Otto H. Kahn, of New York, Atlanta next week will entertain one of the most distinguished visitors ever to come to this city.

Mr. Kahn, one of the best-known financiers of America, is chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company, and also a director of the Music Festival association of Atlanta. He is to arrive in his private car, accompanied by a group of other distinguished New Yorkers, Wednesday of next week in order to attend some of the performances at the auditorium during the season of Atlanta opera this year.

Thursday at noon Mr. Kahn will be the guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the chamber of commerce, at which time he has promised to make a short talk.

He and his party—which includes Bernard M. Baruch, E. Roland Harriman, W. Forbes Morgan, Henry Rogers Winthrop, James I. Bush and Fred P. Moore—will be entertained at a number of important functions during their stay here. In addition to Mr. Kahn, three of these visitors, Mr. Harriman, Mr. Winthrop and Mr. Moore, are directors of the Metropolitan.

In the striking personality of Mr. Kahn's devotion and helpful service to art blends with genius for business to a greater degree than in any other outstanding American of this generation. Not only is he a leader among Americans whose business is international banking, but he is also the foremost of the practical patrons of art in America, especially of music and the stage.

After he had completed his education at the Classical High school of his native city, Mr. Kahn entered a banking house in Karlsruhe, Baden, where he started his business career as an office boy. In his spare time he continued his musical studies which he had begun in his early youth, and attended lectures at the local university. He then served for one year in a Hussar regiment in Mayence, and after a short stay in a banking house in Berlin, took up his residence in England, where he remained for five years with the London branch of the Deutsche bank, occupying for the last two years of that term the position of vice manager.

Accepting an offer made to him by Speyer and company, he came to New York in August, 1893. On January 1, 1897, he entered the firm of Kuhn, Loeb and company, as a partner. He became acquainted with Edward H. Harriman, an acquaintance which ripened into intimate relationship. In the phenomenal career of that great railroad builder and developer, which reached its climax in the ensuing 12 years, Otto Kahn was his closest associate, and Mr. Kahn's constructive mentality and financial skill counted for much in the vast enterprises with which the names of Harriman and Kuhn, Loeb and company came to be identified.

Mr. Kahn's sympathy for and practical interest in artistic affairs have made him famous as the directing force in the progress of the Metropolitan Opera house, as a potent and helpful factor in many other art undertakings, and as the generous and enlightened patron of young American talent. He is president and chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company and the leading spirit in the movement recently brought to fruition to build a new home for grand opera of a design that will permit, among other improvements, more and better low-priced seats than in the present opera house. He is a staunch believer in democracy in art and in a notable address recently delivered before the Carnegie Institute of Technology, urged the country at large not to be satisfied to be the mere "hinterland" of Broadway in theatrical matters but to seek out and give opportunity to young talent and to provide its own dramatic fare through establishment of community and other theaters.

Outside of his business, his interests are varied and cover a wide range. He is honorary director of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, London; vice president of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra Society, director of the American Federation of Arts, the National Economic league and the Research corporation. He is chairman of the National Music week committee, vice president of the English Speaking union, trustee of the Museum of French Art, and trustee and chairman of the committee on arts and letters of the Italian-America society.

Mr. Kahn is a director of the American International corporation, director of the Equitable Trust Company of New York, and director of the Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad company. He is chairman of the committee on finance and currency of the chamber of commerce of the state of New York. He is a trustee of Rutgers college and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and on the committe of trustees of Carnegie Institute of Technology. The University of Michigan, George Washington university and Lincoln Memorial university have granted him honorary degrees. The governments of France, Italy, Belgium and Spain have bestowed high decorations upon him.

PROFESSOR HALL IS NEW PRESIDENT OF OREGON SCHOOL

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Madison, Wis., April 17.—Professor Arnold B. Hall, of the social science department of the University of Wisconsin, announced tonight that he had accepted the presidency of the University of Oregon and would resign as a member of the faculty on Saturday. Before going to Eugene, Ore., Dr. Hall will teach in the summer school of Chicago university and hold a social research conference at Hanover, N. H. He expects to assume the presidency of the institution September 1.

His salary will be $12,000.

Graduating from the University of Chicago in 1907 Mr. Hall held instructorship there and later, and from 1909-10 was a lecturer in public law at Northwestern university. In 1910 he joined the Wisconsin faculty. He is the author of many books on legal subjects and is considered one of the best authorities on the Monroe doctrine.

PLANS USE OF PLANES TO CHECK SMUGGLING

Brownsville, Texas, April 17.—(AP) Airplanes will be used by the Mexican government as a means to check smuggling across the Rio Grande, A. C. Vasquez, Mexican consul, announced today.

The aerial patrol should result in fewer aliens and less liquor being sent across the border into the United States, and likewise, check the flow of smuggled merchandise into Mexico, he said.

Montezuma Oil Station.

Montezuma, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Within the past week the Standard Oil company has purchased two valuable properties here upon which a $15,000 service station will be erected, it is announced. J. W. Lewis will be the company's superintendent here.

Former Kaiser Alleged to Have Stolen Crown

Berlin, April 17.—(AP)—New clews have been uncovered by Prussian state detectives in the hunt for the $875,000 jeweled crown of the late Queen Augusta, first wife of Kaiser Wilhelm II, which mysteriously disappeared from the royal palace on Unter Den Linden more than three years ago.

The information, police said, virtually established the fact that the beautiful crown was smuggled out of the palace in 1922 and that Princess Hermine Von Reuss wore it at Doorn, Holland, when she married the former monarch in exile. The crown legally belongs to the Prussian government.

A former court jeweler told the police that the crown was brought to him in a leather hat box by a man who represented himself as an agent for the kaiser. The man, it is said, told the jeweler that it was the kaiser's greatest desire to see Princess Hermine wear the crown of his forurements the kaiser knew the crown would not fit the princess and asked that it be made smaller.

The jeweler said the agent called for the crown after it had been remodeled with the remark that he was taking it to Doorn for the wedding November 5, 1922.

THOUSANDS THRONG TO HEAR GIPSY SMITH

Thomasville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Several thousand people each night fill the big tent where the Gipsy Smith meetings are held. The crowds come from all of the nearby towns in Georgia and Florida and interest seems to increase.

Mr. Smith has consented to preach at a union meeting in Moultrie Sunday morning, returning to Thomasville for services that night.

Have a MAYTAG Party at YOUR HOME next Washday

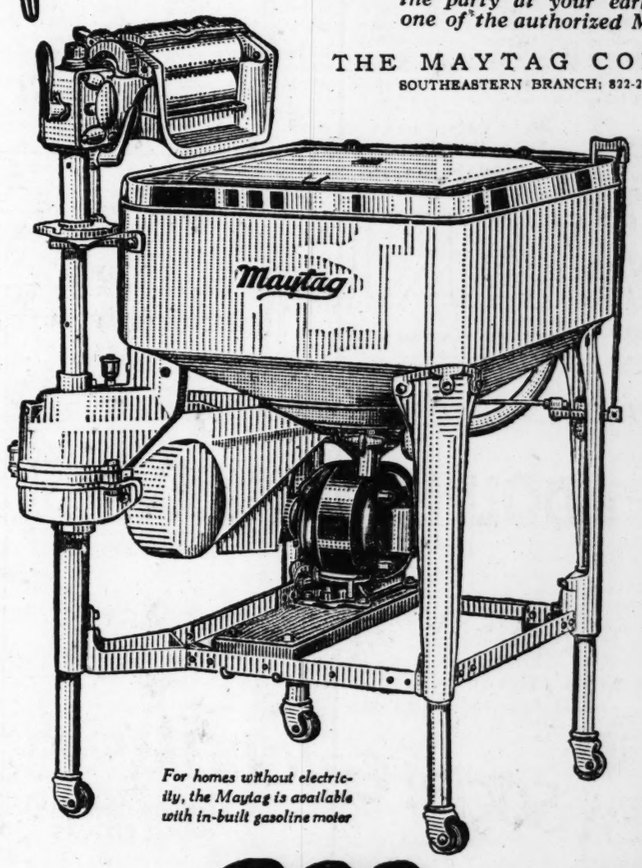

Yes, or on any other day that seems most convenient. At a Maytag party you simply gather up all of your regular week's wash. Put the fine white garments in a pile, and the colored clothes in another. Sort out the heavy blankets. Make a heap of the overalls, coveralls, or other work garments.

Then watch the Maytag wash them all, quicker and better than you ever dreamed a thorough washing could be done. See how clean they're washed.

You will enjoy a Maytag party because there is nothing to pay, no refreshments to serve, and you will not be urged to buy if the Maytag does not prove that you need its services every week in the year. Think of washing 50 lbs. of dry clothes in an hour — no hand-rubbing of soiled collars and cuffs. Take out clothes and put in others without stopping the machine. Learn in 30 minutes the easy, quick, sensible way to get out a big wash.

Invite your friends, if you wish—but arrange for the party at your earliest convenience. Phone one of the authorized Maytag dealers listed below

HOWARD PHOTOPLAY IS 'A SOCIAL CELEBRITY'

"Skylarks" Is the Stage Presentation for This Week.

Night clubs seem to be getting more than their share of publicity these days. The latest picture in which one appears is Adolphe Menjou's new Paramount production, "A Social Celebrity," which will be the feature screen attraction at the greater Howard theater this week.

The sequence in which the cabaret acts as a background serves as the climax to the film. In brief, this is what has happened, preceding the scene: Menjou, a barber with lofty ambitions, on arriving in New York, is persuaded, because of his bearing and smart clothes, to pose as a titled foreigner. He does, with disastrous results. First, he falls in love with a beautiful heiress; second, she does the same thing; third, he can't bear to leave her go; and, fourth, he doesn't want to! So there you are—and it is at this minute that, after having attended theater, the couple, and some mutual friends, are dining at a supper club.

In walks a young lady who knew our hero in "the old days" when he was not so prosperous. And she, seeing a chance to hurt him, bursts a bombshell by telling all the news that's fit to print. She tells them exactly what he is—a barber—and he is immediately deserted. But, in the end, everything comes out all right, as you'll see when the picture is shown.

Malcolm St. Clair directed Menjou's latest, and he has done a masterful job. In the supporting cast are Louise Brooks and Chester Conklin, both of whom are featured.

One of the leading features of the John Murray Anderson stage revue, "Skylarks," is the Six Paschas, a company of Arab acrobats who close the act with a whirlwind finish which is said to exceed the speed limit for vaudeville attractions of this character. The troupe has been prominently featured in the big variety houses of Europe for several years and is now electrifying American audiences with its daring stunts. Patrons of the Howard will not lack for thrills when they see these six men in their breath-taking performances.

The overture for the week by the Howard orchestra under the direction of Joseph Littau will be "Richard Wagner," one of the famous music masters' series.

The renown plastex film novelty, "Man or Illusion," will have its first southern showing at the Howard this week. In this remarkable picture the film characters are brought out with such startling realism that they appear to be real human begins.

Melvin P. Ogden will render an organ solo at the mighty Wurlitzer entitled "Spring." Other subjects on the program will include an Educational comedy and an International news reel.

Another continental artist, this time in the mechanical department of moving pictures, has been signed by Carl Laemmle after a spirited contest. Paul Leni, famous German painter and film architect, whose work in "Wax Works," was highly commented upon by the New York critics, is expected to arrive in New York any day. He will go immediately to Universal City to design the settings for "Love Me and The World Is Mine," and other big Universal pictures soon to be placed in production.

Latest additions to the constantly growing list of writers, directors and story material at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer west coast studios, are Marc Connelly, playwright, and picture rights to "Gates of Doom," by Rafael Sabatini, and William Anthony McGuire's current stage success, "Twelve Miles Out."

The Beautiful Cheat, Laura LaPlante Star, Photoplay at Rialto

The Rialto theater this week offers a three-way program of excellent screen entertainment.

The feature picture is "The Beautiful Cheat," with Laura LaPlante as the star, supported by Harry Myers and Alexander Carr.

The second of the series of six lessons on the Charleston with Arthur Murray as the instructor, will be flashed on the screen. Mr. Murray will go into the more intricate steps of this amazingly popular dance in this lesson, after giving the fundamental steps in the first lesson last week.

Another pleasing screen number, an old favorite with Rialto audiences, will be another episode of the series, "The Adventures of Mazie."

Pathe News will be shown and William Whitney Hubner will conduct the musical program, accompanying the Charleston lesson with carefully chosen and times music.

There is danger of going into hysterics over "The Beautiful Cheat", according to advance critics.

After a run of good pictures there is difficulty in finding words to convey the information that this is the best entertainment that has been offered here for many months.

It is gay, riotous laughter amid scenes that disclose the inner workings of a motion picture studio. The story is about a little shop girl who rises to stardom surrounded by the fiction that she is a great Russian emotional actress.

Miss LaPlante is dainty, dashing and beautiful with her portrayal tinged at times with an appealing wistfulness. She is supreme in her role which is by far the most captivating she has ever had.

Harry Myers, as her press agent, injects a large share of comedy into this picture by his unique ways of publicizing his client. One of the main sources of comedy is the efforts of all concerned to maintain the claim that Miss LaPlante is Russian.

Alexander Carr, as the producer whose financial fate hangs on the success of the first picture, gives an amusing and touching portrayal reminiscent of his wonderful acting in the role of Purlmutter in "Potash and Purlmutter," the stage play in which he appeared for eight years.

Bertram Grassby deserves mention for his part of the nobleman who loses the girl. Youcca Troubetzkoy, a real Russian prince, has his biggest role in American pictures. The youth is so handsome that he passes all understanding. Helen Carr is very sweet as Lady Violet Armington, while Robert Andersen is a riot as the truck driver admirer of the little actress.

Helen Dunbar, Tom Guise, Kate Price and Walter Perry complete as well a rounded cast as has ever played here.

The story is from Nina Wilcox Putnam's "Saturday Evening Post" series and was adapted by A. P. Younger. Edward Sloman directed the picture admirably.

'VANISHING AMERICAN' ALAMO NO. 2 FEATURE

"Their retreat into the desert fastness is marked by a trail of blood."

This portion of the story of the western hemisphere's first citizens is included in "The Vanishing American," filmed by Paramount from the story by Zane Grey on the Navajo Indian reservation, 165 miles from a railroad.

This epic of the American Indian, written in the sincere, direct dramatic manner that characterizes all of Zane Grey's works, is not a tragedy, but in its he did not gloss over the transgressions of the white man against the red. George B. Seitz, who was entrusted with the directing of the picture, has followed the story faithfully, both in letter and spirit.

The bitter, courageous, determined but hopeless stand of the Indians against their white enemies, their retreat from the green fields and well-watered country they had called their home for centuries into the barren desert wastes is a powerful episode of "The Vanishing American," which opens at the Alamo No. 2 Monday for four days.

At the head of a company of 500 persons, Seitz established a base camp at Kayenta, on the Navajo reservation in northeastern Arizona, and remained there approximately four months. Richard Dix, Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Malcolm McGregor are the featured players.

On the same program will be shown a brand-new Buster Brown comedy.

West End Theater.

Featuring Bennet and Duvall, of the famous school of stage dancing by the same name, Manager Alpha Fowler, of the West End theater, has gone beyond himself this week in providing entertainment at his playhouse. At each night show Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday these stars will give terpsichorean exhibitions which are certain to rival the best exponents of dance in the country. Added to that he has a collection of pictures which will find heartiest favor with any appreciative audience.

In addition to the excellent dancing features, pictrues which will be seen include "The New Commandmant," in which an old Atlanta boy, Ben Lyon, and Blanche Sweet will appear in leading roles. This production, tremendous and withal enthralling, carries one's mind into deep paths—then clears up and leaves a most wholesome effect. It's a good picture to see on Monday and Tuesday.

On Wednesday the indomitable Richard Dix comes in the "Lucky Devil," an interesting, gripping sort of production that has met highest praise in many cities where it has been shown. If Dix is playing in it, it must be good.

For Thursday and Friday Manager Fowler has secured none other than "The Sea Hawk," with Milton Sills in the big role of his life. This great picture needs no introduction here—its vastness, its grip, its great and quickly succeeding plots have been narrated in books, plays, pictures and fireside stories. But it always is new and carries a tremendous "punch." West End theater fans will find something with a kick to every foot of reel in it.

That winds up a pretty well arranged program, this writer believes.

'THE RECKLESS LADY' STARS BELLE BENNETT

Metropolitan Picture Also Features Atlanta's Own Ben Lyon.

"The Reckless Lady," at the Metropolitan theater, tells the story of an estranged wife and mother who eks out a precarious but substantial living for herself and her daughter by playing at the gaming tables of Monte Carlo. The crisis of the story deals with the tremendous sacrifice made by the mother in her daughter's behalf.

Belle Bennet tand Lois Moran, the two actresses who have been accorded such acclaim in "Stella Dallas," are seen in the respective roles of the mother and daughter. Ben Lyon, featured in both previous Kane productions, again has the leading male role in "The Reckless Lady." James Kirkwood and Lowell Sherman, two of the most popular actors in the films and on the speaking stage, fill the other featured parts.

The comedy of the picture is in the capable hands of Charlie Murray and Marcia Harris. Murray came to New York for the sole purpose of working three days in the Kane picture.

Thomas Holding, Edwin August, Julia Hurley and Louise Beaudet fill small but important parts.

Irving Berlin's love songs, "Always," "Remember," "I'd Climb the Highest mountain, If I Knew I'd Find You" are grouped in one unit as the overture presentation by Enrico Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra. Dixieland, an original stage presentation introducing Volpi's double male quartet, features southern and negro melodies in a plantation setting, while the main theme for the feature picture si a waltz ballad, "While We Danced Till Dawn."

A Hal Roach comedy, "The Wages of Tin," and Metropolitan news complete the program.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

LON CHANEY'S BEST PICTURE LOEW'S GRAND

Loew's Grand theater will bring a rare treat in pictures to Atlanta this week when "The Black Bird," Lon Chaney's latest picture, will be the attraction.

Lon Chaney, creator of thrills, is at it again!

He thrilled with criminal horror in "The Penalty," with the horror of deformity in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame;" with the horror of the supernatural in "The Phantom of the Opera," and now, in "The Black Bird," he thrills with the ultimate horror—of mystery.

Throughout the remarkable new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer play he is a thing of mystery; not a ghost, but a human being, whose mystery lies in an overwhelming suspicion that, in the denouement, crystallizes into one of the most daring surprises ever attempted by an actor.

The story, an original by Tod Browning, who was also its director, and who directed Chaney in "The Unholy Three," to which the new story can only be compared, is laid in London's mysterious Limehouse district. Chaney plays two roles—the one an underworld czar, overbearing, vicious, murderous; the other a crippled worker in a Limehouse mission, whose soul at times achieves almost angelic heights. Chaney's transitions from one role to the other are a piece of acting unparalleled on screen or stage.

A notable cast was assembled for the production, in which the scenes laid in the English music hall form a bright spot and give opportunity for a lavish display of talent on the part of Renee Adoree, remembered as the heroine of "The Big Parade," and who plays a French music hall performer of the Anna Held type. Doris Lloyd is charmingly natural as "Limehouse Polly," an English vaudeville girl, suggesting Alice Lloyd somewhat. Owen Moore, as a suave crook of London's upper crust, is sinister without being guilty of over acting or dropping from his genteel pose, and Andy McLennan as "The Ghost," is a striking portrayal of the London gangster.

Polly Moran supplies inimitable comedy relief during the picture, and others in the cast with adequate roles are Eric Mayne, William Weston, Sidney Bracy, Ernie S. Adams and Peggy Bert.

The settings, depicting London's Limehouse and an old music hall, are startlingly real. On the whole, the picture may be said to be to the screen what "The Bat" was to the spoken drama.

'A PARISIAN NOVELTY' LOEW'S HEADLINE ACT

Blending music and singing with a dancing program of super-excellence Jack Allyn and Alice Tyrell, two noted musical comedy stars, will bring their Apaches in "A Parisian Novelty," as the headline attraction on the new vaudeville bill next week.

In this act there are nine people and they feature a pleasing series of dance numbers and a varied musical program which includes several selections by their orchestra. Peggy Hoffman is with the revue in dances of her own creation in a bright setting of Parisian atmosphere.

Loraine Howard and Florence Lind, two girl singers, will bring their "songalogue" comedy entitled "Wedding Belles."

Another popular star on the new bill will be Cliff Nazarro, late star of many Broadway successes and also a favorite artist of the Columbia phonograph records. He is assisted by Bob Geraughty and they present a pleasing song and dance skit with music on the piano.

Jose Saxton and Jack Farrell will appear in their new comedy sketch, "The Elopers" which is full of bright lines and clever situations.

The Pickfords in a novel juggling and acrobatic act, will open the new bill.

The feature picture attraction for the week is Lon Chaney's, "The Black Bird," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture produced by Tod Browning.

BILLY BEARD HERE AS FORSYTH FEATURE ACT

An unusually fine combination of talent is to be offered Monday at Keith's Forsyth theater, where the vaudeville bill is headed by two well-known stars either of which would easily take top honors on the ordinary vaudeville program. They are Bily Beard. Atlanta's favorite minstrel and blackface comedian and a native son of this city, and Homer Lind, famous operatic baritone, who appears in a musical sketch that features comedy and dancing in addition to song.

Bily Beard needs no introduction. He is one of Atlanta's greatest stage successes and is known affectionately to hundreds of citizens of this city. His present vehicle is a monologue that sparkles with the sort of wit that made his nickname "The Party From the South" a slogan known all over the nation.

Mr. Lind heads a company of six people whose talents combine singing, dancing and comedy in almost equal proportions.

Other acts during the first half of the week include W. E. Ritchie and company, in "Bits and Pieces;" Jack Crafts and Elsie Lamont, comedy singers and dancers, and Welch and Mealy, whose vehicle is named "In the Land of Laughter."

Ritchie is a cyclist whose paraphernalia is as varied as the contents of a junk shop and the comedy effects resultingly new. "Put Up the Lights" is the title of the offering by Crafts and Lamont, who have a clever and rapid-fire sketch.

Besides the aforementioned headliners during the last half of the week there will be three other good acts. These are by the Haney Sisters and Fine in a singing, dancing and musical revue called "At the Crossroad;" Bernet and Clark, in "Settled Humor," an airy comedy bit, and Frank Le Dent and partner, in a fine juggling act.

Pathe News and Pathe Review will be the screen attraction during the first three days, while another edition of the News and Aesops Fables Pictures will be shown Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Palace Theater.

Famous stars and popular titles appear on the excellent bill presented this week at the Palace theater in Inman Park. Manager Alpha Fowler has chosen wisely and with exceeding care with the result that the very best entertainment available is to be offered at the popular community playhouse from Monday until Saturday.

Colleen Moore starts the week in a swiftly-moving dramatic romance of the modern flapper called "We Moderns." This play throws a very vivid and entirely new light on a much discussed subject of the day. To see the dangers and difficulties this particular flapper lives through and to witness her ultimate conversion to the simple old-time life is to live an hour of really gripping drama that no one should miss.

Wednesday brings the inimitable Adolph Menjou with his winning ways in an uproarous comedy entitled "The King on Main Street. Menjou carries off the honors in the title role of this popular screen play in his usual satisfying manner and the story itself is so exceptionally clever and so admirably worked out in the action that a well-nigh perfect screen production in the lighter vein is the result.

"Old Home Week," with one of great favorites of the screen, Thomas Meighan, comes to the Palace Thursday and Friday. "Old Home Week" is a play that never fails to register and has played no small part in the brilliant career of its star. For all of those who love the old-time straight legitimate drama with a dash of clean comedy and a touch of tender lover this play is a sure winner.

Saturday "High and Handsome," with the gallant and picturesque Manrice Flynn, will thrill the juvenile matinee attendance and furnish rare western thrills for those older heads who attend at night.

Berlin Writes Song a Day

:: HITS FEW AND FAR BETWEEN, BUCK SAYS ::

But Majority Never Used

BY ROBERT D. LUSK.

Washigton, April 17.—Irving Berlin is one of the greatest writers of "flops" in the music composing business.

The millions who danced to the strains of "Remember" or who hummed "Always" during their more sentimental moments this winter might consider this a gross exaggeration, to say the least, but it has been given out in good faith by Gene Buck, song writer for Ziegfeld's "Follies," and president of the American Society of Authors and Composers.

"Berlin writes a song a day," Buck said. "Some of them are hits, but the vast majority never see the light of day."

Buck was in Washington arguing against passage of the Dill-Vestal bill which would fix the price radio broadcasters were to pay music writers for the use of their songs. He has presented a picture of the plight of song manufacturers which would make the most woe-begone farmer weep.

"I have written 40 Broadway musical shows," Buck declared, "and you could count the number of hits on your fingers."

"I've written just about that many, too," chimed in Raymond Hubbell, who started the world singing "Poor Butterfly."

"I imagine in my life-time I have written 2,500 songs," said Silvio Hine.

"When we are getting out a new edition of the 'Follies,'" Buck said, "I always write between 75 and 100 songs, and only about 25 are used.

"You never can tell when you are writing something that will take. Consider the most popular song of today —'The Prisoned's Song.' It hasn't any of the elements of the modern song. It is an echo of the music of about 40 years ago.

"But the public thinks that a writer just sits down and raps out a hit. The hits bring in a lot of money, but they are few and far between."

So Buck is here with other representatives of Tin-Pan alley appearing before the senate patents committee to fight a bill which would establish the price which the composer might receive from the use of his music by broadcasters.

"It is government price-fixing of the worst type," Buck charged.

"The radio interests did a $500,000,000 business last year while we, who, with our music make possible the popularity of the radio, received only $112,980," he said.

"The American Telephone and Telegraph company recently sold the use of WEAF for one hour a week at the rate of $3,000 an hour, and yet they would deny us the right of bargaining with the A. T. & T. for the use of our music."

American Firms Victims of Censor In Honduras City

BY EST L. VERDAD.

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Belize, British Honduras, April 17. American and other foreign concerns and citizens are the victims of a reign of terror and censorship in the republic of Honduras, Central America.

The American companies operating in Honduras are the chief objects of persecution. They, being big companies and strong, can carry a large burden, so the idea seems to be to pile it on. These companies have had to pay pretty dearly for the privileges they have. And, after having paid, they are made, if possible, to pay and pay again.

On April 8, Mr. Link, an American employee of the Standard Fruit company at LaCeiba, received a letter asking for employment, with a threat of assassination if the petition were not granted. Mr. Brownson, of the same company received three similar letters. The latter went to the American consul, who took the letters to the governor. The governor said he was not in a position to do anything. The consul suggested that he would request the American government to send a gunboat to LaCeiba to safeguard American lives and property to which he received the following reply:

"You can do as you please. The bay is quite ample for one or more of your war vessels, but I'll make them respect the sovereignty of Honduras."

On April 6, Manlio Czarelli, prominent business man, principal owner of the Naco Shoe factory, employing about 160 persons, was killed as a result of the anti-foreign movement. An investigation showed that the mayor was cognizant of the plot against Mr. Czarelli. The assassin, although he had been identified and had been seen in different parts of the town following the murder, was not arrested.

Letters are constantly censored. The small business community is afraid to make any complaint to Washington or other governments, fearing reprisals.

WOMAN GIVEN DIVORCE FROM GOLFING HUSBAND

Omaha, Neb., April 17.—(AP)—Testifying that her husband, John W. Hughes, former Nebraska state golf champion, neglected her for the golf links, Mrs. Anna Ethel Hughes was given a divorce in district court here.

Since their honeymoon in 1918 her husband's enthusiasm for golf caused him to give up social affairs and disagreements followed, Mrs. Hughes said.

Mrs. Hughes was given custody of their six-year-old child, $400 a month alimony, an automobile and other articles of furniture.

WOULD ABOLISH FLORIDA CITY HEALTH BODIES

Tampa, Fla., April 17.—City health departments would be abolished and health work centralized in county departments working in conjunction with the state organization under provisions of a bill submitted to the county commission for approval here Friday and which may be introduced in the 1927 legislature.

Dr. L. M. Coulter, district state health officer, presented the bill which Pinellas county representatives are understood to be planning to bring before the legislature. It has the endorsement of Dr. B. L. Arms, state health officer, Coulter said.

"County health departments would make Florida the empire state in the union," declared Dr. Coulter. "The state needs cleaning up. We have ideal climate but public health problems are not being solved."

Polk county is the only county in the state maintaining its own health department, it was said.

The county commission withheld its indorsement until its county physician had made a study of the bill.

HAIRY VETCH FIELDS THRIVE IN SUMTER

Americus, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—H. A. Cliett, county agent, conducted 50 Sumter county farmers and Americus business men on a tour of this county here Wednesday. Twenty demonstration fields where hairy vetch is now growing were visited. H. A. Starr, director of the equipment station at Tifton, who accompanied the party, declared these fields to be among the best he had seen anywhere in Georgia, while F. D. Alexander, a field crop specialist of the State College of Agriculture, praised Sumter county lands highly.

TECH RADIO PLANS ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM

Radio station WGST at Georgia Tech will offer splendid programs next Monday and Thursday nights, it was announced Saturday. Monday Tech students will give "Talks Back Home" and music will be furnished by Conklin's Gleneco orchestra. Thursday Dr. W. D. Ross, of the school, will speak.

Old Folks Made New

"It is now five months since I took a course of your medicine for gas and stomach trouble and I am feeling entirely well. My friends all tell me I am looking twenty years younger and I certainly feel as they say. I am recommending MAYR'S to all ailing with stomach and liver trouble." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. LAKEWOOD PLEASURE PARK OPENS TODAY

Elks' Royal Purple Band Concert This Afternoon Is Overture to Fun.

With the Elks' Royal Purple band playing a merry overture to another 24 weeks of carnival and mirth, Atlanta's mammoth amusement resort at Lakewood park will jump into its full stride this Sunday afternoon.

The new summer season is on, having opened with a bang of rifles in the shooting galleries, a blare of music from the caliope of the big carousel, a deafening roar from the propellers of the airplane swing and the medley of other sounds, thrilling and gay, that are peculiar to Atlanta's one big outdoor playground.

The park has been put through the hands of a hundred painters, landscape gardeners, decorators, carpenters, electricians and amusement device experts for weeks in preparation for the gala opening which occurred Saturday and which will be featured this Sunday afternoon by the first band concert of the season.

New rides, new shows, new things to see and hear and do have been added to the long list of old favorites and the resort is ready at its opening to assume the distinction of being the biggest and most complete of its kind south of Coney Island.

"Lakewood Amusement park was established by the Southeastern Fair to serve as a gloom-chaser for all Atlanta and north Georgia and this season we mean to make it fill the prescription right down to the last smack," Oscar Mills, new secretary-manager declared Saturday as he greeted the vanguard of the summer's throngs.

The only sad part of Laura La-Plante's trip to New York was Carl Laemmle's refusal to let her accept the offer made by Edgar Selwyn, John Emerson and Anita Loos, to play the principal role in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on the stage. Mr. Laemmle decided that it was necessary to complete the balance of the La Plante pictures which start off with "Butterflies in the Rain" and that a stage interlude would make it impossible for her pictures to be completed on time to meet existing contracts.

Cameo Theater.

"Sally, Irene and Mary," which comes to the Cameo on Wednesday and Thursday, is the story of three chorus girls of New York, who challenged life, experimented with it, and sought to drain its cup to the last sweet drop, found that all which glitters is not gold. Sally O'Neill, Joan Crawford and Constance Bennett have the leading roles in the picture, which is a revelation of night life in Gotham, with scenes of extravagant lavishness and beauty, with pep and personality, and a powerful dramatic moral.

On Monday and Tuesday the Cameo offers Lon Chaney, William Haines, Norma Shearer and Ian Keith in "The Tower of Lies," the story of a girl whose happiness was built on a tower of lies, whose false happiness was brought at a terrible price, and of her retrieving herself to search for true happiness.

Lon Chaney, master of make-up and character roles, portrays the role of the girl's father, and his performance is of the excellence of his roles in both "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Norma Shearer, who has the role of the daughter, was never more beautiful or convincing.

And on Friday and Saturday the Cameo will present the return engagement of what is Richard Barthelmess' most dramatic and powerful production, "Soul Fire," adapted from the stage play, "Great Music." In this picture Bathelmess is a young musician searching for inspiration, and failing to find it, descends into the depths, wanders around the world and finds his music among the most unusual adventures that ever befell man. Bessie Love plays opposite the star in this picture.

The Metro-Goldwyn Mayer executives these days are playing host to Brtish royalty. Lunching with Irving Thalberg and Director Edmund Gouling the other day were Miss Poppy Bearing, daughter of Sir Godfrey Bearing, the British political leader; Lady Sheila Loughborough, celebrated as one of London's famous beauties, social leader and friend of the Prince of Wales, and Captain Allister MacKintosh, the distinguished Brtish officer who recently married Constance Talmadge.

"Twelve Miles Out," by McGuire, has been one of the most sought after of the Broadway productions, it is understood. At different times various picture companies have been reported to have made the purchase. But with this announcement by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the situation is finally settled. The purchase price, naturally, is high because of the keen competition.

'SKYLARKS,' BIG STAGE FEATURE, AT HOWARD

Audiences seeking action in their entertainment will find plenty of it in "Skylarks," the John Murray Anderson revue which the Publix Theaters corporation with the showing of Adolphe Menjou's latest Paramount picture, "A Social Celebrity." In fact, Mr. Anderson has jammed more action into this stage number than was found in any of its predecessors in this series of revues. Twenty-five people take part in "Skylarks," which is billed as moonlight fantasy. The cast is headed by William Stamm, tenor, and Almajane Wilday, soprano, in the characters of Pierrot and Pierrotte. Others to be seen are Mildred Halliday, solo dancer; Lenora's Jewels, the Six Paschas, Arab Acrobats; the Publix Quartette and the Publix corps de ballet. The stage settings and costumes were designed by Hermann Rosse, the lances were arranged by Boris Petroff, and Nathaniel Finston prepared the musical accompaniment.

Alamo No. 1 Theater.

"Casey of the Coast Guard," the new Pathe serial, starring George O'Hara, the two-fisted, fighting hero of the "Fighting Blood" series, starts Wednesday. O'Hara, as Ensign Casey, whose name struck terror into the hearts of smugglers—Casey who was fearless, fighting for the United States coast guard against international smugglers. A red-blooded story of the perils of the United States coast guard, full of daring adventure, mystery and romance. This serial was made with the full cooperation of the United States coast guard. You must see it.

"Wildfire," an exciting story of the race track—the burning of the stables, crooks, romance and the big race—brings to you a big climax you've never seen before. This completes what you would call a knockout program.

Monday and Tuesday, William Desmond in "Straight Through"—the comeback of a fighting cowboy. First a hard-boiled cowboy in the great west, he took the big chance and won. Don't miss this stirring drama of the great outdoors with an unusual climax.

Friday and Saturday "Blue Blazes"—a wild-riding cowboy who feared nobody! He rode recklessly into a gang of outlaws and tamed them in the wildest battle the old cowboys can remember. Pete Morrison, as the star, makes "Blue Blazes" a blue streak western with a powerful punch.

Adapting Lloyd Story.

Adela Rogers St. John, noted magazine writer and author of several popular novels, has been given the next Frank Lloyd story for adaptation and is now busily engaged in this task. The Lloyd picture will be a film version of Jules Furthman's "The Wise Guy." Lloyd is now preparing his cast, said to be one of excellence. The producer has just returned from a four months' visit to the Orient. First National will release "The Wise Guy."

Colleen Moore.

With "Irene" completed and almost ready for release, Colleen Moore, dainty First National star, is busily engaged in the preparation of her next story, "Ella Cinders." Colleen is fortunate in having several of the finest stories for production in her possession. "Ella Cinders" is but one of them. "Irene" is to be released next month. It is regarded as Colleen's finest screen achievement. Alfred E. Green directed.

UNIVERSAL MOVIEGRAMS.

Edward Laemmle, who is directing "The Whole Town's Talking," by John Emerson and Anita Loos, has added to his already exceptional cast, the comedian, Billy Engle. "The Whole Town's Talking" is on the Greater Movie list.

Elaborate preparations are being made for Reginald Denny's new picture, "Take It From Me," adapted by Harold Thew from the musical comedy of the same name. William A. Seiter has nominated Blanche Mehaffey as leading woman of the company.

The first feature picture of Universal's newest western star, Fred Humes, has been completed at Universal City. It is entitled "Yellow Back," and was directed by Del Andrews.

Marc Connelly, whose latest play, "The Wisdom Tooth," is one of the most discussed hits of Broadway, has been engaged to turn out an original film story for M-G-M.

Get back that lost weight!

When you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanlac will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.

When you know it has worked wonders for so many folks it's folly not to take advantage of Tanlac's help yourself. Don't put it off another day. Get a bottle at your druggist's now and start the good work right away. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation.—(adv.)

Tanlac Built 20 lbs. of Solid Flesh

"Five years ago severe stomach trouble wore me down. I was unable to work for days; could neither eat nor sleep. I tried Tanlac and it amazed me. I put on 20 lbs. and feel better than ever before."

Sugar.

New York, April 17.—No changes occurred in the raw sugar market today. Spots and nearby were quoted at 4.14 duty paid, at which level 10,000 bags of Cuban in port and 5,000 bags of Porto Rican for second half of April shipment were sold to local refiners. Heavy buying for Cuban and trade account advanced raw sugar futures 2 to 3 points in early trading but with more favorable labor conditions in Cuba there were increased offerings on the upturn and partial reactions occurred. The close was 1 to 2 points net higher. May closed 2.43; July 2.56; September 2.67; December 2.78; March 2.87.

The refined sugar market was unchanged at 5.25 to 5.60 for fine granulated with only moderate inquiry reported.

New York, April 17.—(AP)—Bond prices continued to point toward higher levels today but trading was dull and featureless. While an undercurrent of strength was evident at the start, the market soon was influenced by the general loss of interest which marked dealings in securities.

The pressure of investment funds seeking an outlet held most of the United States government obligations around the year's highest levels. Most of the buying centered in the fourth Liberty 4 1-4s and the treasury 4s.

The foreign list continued to make a good showing, although most of the price changes were fractional. French issues ignored the downward drift of the franc to another low record, some of the government and municipal bonds scoring moderate gains.

Price movements in the railroad and industrial divisions lacked uniformity, but the trend was mainly upward. Chicago and Alton 3 1-2 per cent certificates, Norfolk Southern refunding 5s and Ulster and Delaware 4s, moved up 2 to 4 1-2 points, while other liens which had led the advance earlier in the week eased off on realizing sales.

Stock Market Passed Through Exciting Week, Rallying Toward End

With Opinion in Wall Street Decidedly Mixed, Many Amateurs Are Taking the Short Side.

BY CHARLES H. PLATT.

New York, April 17.—(Special.)—The market passed through a rather exciting week with pronounced weakness in the early stages, and with some fairly good rallies in individual stocks towards the end. The opinion of the "street" is decidedly mixed and has been for the past three weeks. The bearish contingent maintains that pools which got into trouble have not yet sold all their holdings but are taking advantage of every little display of strength to hand out more stock; the bulls contend that practically all the stocks are in the hands of bankers and rich corporations and that these parties are just awaiting the right opportunity to manipulate the market upward in order to distribute their holdings and avoid carrying large loads through a long dull summer.

There is a much larger element than either of the groups mentioned, which is neither very optimistic nor very pessimistic but totally without fixed opinions and just waiting to see just which way the cat will jump. From this unorganized source there can be drawn a great buying or selling force, according to which way "the powers that be" bring about the market trend. There is a new willingness among amateurs to take the short side and this is a factor that is being given due consideration. It is one of the causes that brings about greater irregularity than has ever before been apparent.

It is notable that in normal times, and particularly in upswinging markets, such as were in effect last year, that out-of-town buying is heavy. Just at present most of the trading comes from the big financial centers and the crowds that hang around boardrooms have become so sophisticated that every little movement is credited as being the result of ulterior motives and secret moves on the part of somebody, usually designated as "they," and corresponding in nature to what is termed in police circles "the higher-ups." If these forces of dark ways and mysterious manoeuvers are operating at schedule, they are certainly double-crossing the so-called "wise boys," for nobody seems to be making any money. Most of the time the market is just rallying and reacting, although in the middle of the past week a very definite downward trend developed for a time. The fact that divisions of stocks in no wise related to each other were under the most severe pressure seemed to point to additional strength on the selling side.

Speculators at Loss.

All during the week, speculators were at a loss for reasons satisfactorily explaining the contrary movements. Support for stocks seemed to be almost entirely lacking and forced sales brought lower bids in practically every issue. The tendency of bid and asked prices on inactive stocks was to spread which pointed to a great uncertainty on the part of specialists. Several of the most prominent stocks broke through the year's low in the periods of most active selling, and at times the heart was nearly taken out of the most optimistic bulls.

The specialties were weak most of the time and in many instances made "double bottoms." Volume was inclined to increase at the lowest points, which was a further cause for discouragement. Many of the shrewdest observers are giving out statements to the effect that a spring advance will shortly be on the tapis, but the market certainly did not bear out these prognostications. There was quite a bit of covering by short interests in the motors and it is confidently expected that these stocks will be among the first to recover. Professional pressure was undoubtedly brought to bear every time a weak spot appeared, but such trades as came in at these times were quickly covered whenever a chance came to take a few points profit or the necessity of taking a loss seemed apparent. The market showed great vulnerability and the support that did come in was not strong nor of an impressive character.

The conditions prevailing in the loan market had more effect on prices than for several weeks, indicating that it was strictly a stock market of the professional kind. It is reported that a great many of the largest operators who have been on the bear side for the past six weeks have turned their attention to picking up good stocks at levels that seem cheap. The Wall street firms that are heavy advertisers and which specialize in mail campaigns are sending out many lists of common and preferred stocks which give big yields at present levels. The resultant investment buying is enormous. Last year new customers were coming in of their own accord, but it is different now, and printers are more actively soliciting business and receiving more orders than they have in the past two years.

Oils Did Well.

The oils did about as well as any of the list and while they could not be classed as strong, did not show the same tendency to break wide open as did some of the industrials. Oil production fell off a bit and with the season of greatest oil use closely approaching, a great deal of favorable comment on these shares is heard. Odd lot buyers are accumulating oil shares steadily. It is rumored that several firms most prominent in connection with oil mergers had to borrow heavily to prevent their stocks from going down sharply and some reports are to the effect that control of the biggest independent oil groups has changed hands completely during the past month.

The motors were subjected to the most severe selling pressure and some of them went down a long ways, but they were quick to recuperate whenever the screws were loosened. First quarter reports of the motor group are excellent and it seems that the full 1926 earnings will compare favorably with 1925, although it is probable that the inventory positions will be radically different. Those companies which were so liberal in extra dividends last year are expected to tighten up the purse strings and most of the buying of motor stocks at this time is in expectation of selling them somewhat higher before summer. It is difficult to locate a trader or investor who contemplates holding his automobile shares through the entire year. An entirely different sentiment prevails regarding the truck and bus stocks as well as the tire and rubber issues, nevertheless, they acted even worse than the motors, if a comparison of actual earnings and dividends is made.

Money Rates Fluctuate.

Money was tight at the beginning of the week, but it was only a temporary condition that was blamed on the Cuban situation, although this seemed a rather poor excuse. The market is much more susceptible to the influence of money rates than it has been for months and the ratemakers seem to be taking full advantage of this condition. Large loans were called early in the week and put out again almost immediately. There is almost always some unsettlement in the money market in the middle of the month. Action in the bond market indicated that bond buyers, that is buyers of the high grade issues, anticipate long continued easy money.

There was decided strength in the gilt-edged bonds and they pushed their way into new high ground, but the buying was almost exclusively institutional, for the individual bond buyer has not yet decided that the time is ripe for accumulation. Bond salesmen who solicit the business of buyers taking from one to five bonds, are not doing very well. The government bonds were active and strong but foreign issues were not in good demand. Railroad bonds were bought on rising prices, especially the best grade of them. There was not a great deal of life among the speculative issues as they go with the stock market.

Reports indicate that railroad earnings in 1926 will certainly duplicate those of 1925 and probably exceed them. The prospect of reduction of interest rates payable to the government is bright and while railroad stocks did not act impressively, neither did they move down drastically when they did start off, and there was evidence of the strongest kind of buying support underlying the market. The western roads showed a sharp falling off in passenger traffic last year and blamed it on the Florida boom. The railway equipment issues were inclined to be featured in the trading, and they had many boosters and buyers. These companies are expected to show a marked improvement in earnings for the year.

Metal Market Weak.

The coppers did not act well for the metal market itself was weak, governmental action against the bakers, supplemented by complaints of stockholders about the method of financing, made every baking company's stockholder nervous and those shares are rapidly going into fewer hands. Radio stocks were hampered by monopoly charges. The textiles are still suffering from lack of business and too many strikes. The Mexican situation was pretty well ironed out but there seems to be a few wrinkles that refuse to respond to the methods used and, as it is still a sore spot, stocks of companies operating in Mexico acted poorly. The sugar shares declined sharply as a result of Cuban strikes and a general lack of knowledge as to the cause of present unsettled conditions prevailing on the island.

Steel stocks were generally weak and experienced traders continue to class these companies as the real and only leaders from which accurate conclusions can be drawn as to the actual trend development. Figures made public last week indicate that stockholders of the big steel companies are becoming more and more disappointed by lack of action on increased dividends. There is a larger floating supply than a few months ago and the conclusion drawn that a larger extra dividend will come shortly in order to offset this adverse position. The operations of the biggest steel company were reduced to around 95 per cent and iron and steel prices were off considerably. There is a noticeable slackening in orders from the automobile companies.

Generally clear weather made for an easier cotton market. While there was no precipitate selling, support was lacking and prices sagged. Gains in quotations do not hold, and although the report on consumption showed a record amount of cotton used, the old crop is still hanging over the market and general comment on the cotton situation is bearish.

Safety Poster Contest Plans Made for Children

Announcement of the second annual safety poster contest to give children of Atlanta public schools an opportunity to display originality in preparation of safety posters for the Atlanta Safety council, was made Saturday.

Two prizes of $5 and $2.50 will be awarded for the two best posters submitted by the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of the public schools. The contest begins April 15 and will close May 15.

Posters are to be submitted on a 14-inch by 22-inch four-ply card board. Each contestant will sign an assumed name to the poster and will enclose this name, together with the real name, address and the name of school in a sealed envelope attached to the back of the poster.

Principals of schools are requested to send each poster submitted to the office of the Atlanta Safety council, 403 Chamber of Commerce building.

New York, April 17.—(AP)—Renewal of yesterday's selling movement, based primarily upon better weather conditions for the new crop start in the south led to further declines in the cottoa market today. All new crop months made new low ground for the season, but the decline was checked by trade pricing or covering around 18.51 for May and 17.00 for October. May later rallied to 18.61 and October to 17.14.

The market closed steady, net 7 points lower to 2 points higher. The opening was easy at a decline of 7 to 13 points, active months soon showing net losses of 13 to 15 points. Selling on the better weather was stimulated by relatively easy Liverpool cables, poor trade advices from Manchester and reiterated talk of domestic mill curtailment.

Covering in new crop months and trade buying of the old, checked the break at about the 18¼-cent level for May, however, and the market was less active with forenoon prices decidedly steadier.

The official forecast for partly cloudy or cooler weather in the south probably disappointed recent sellers and there may have been a little buying on apprehension that unsettled coaditions would develop over the week-end. July sold up from 17.95 to 18.12 and December from 16.66 to 16.76, and the market closed within a few points of the best.

Private cables reported hedge selling and liquidation in Liverpool on the better weather news from the south and unsettled labor conditions in England, adding there was only a small demand for cotton cloths in Lancashire and that yarns were depressed.

Advices from Fall River said some looms were being stopped in the mills there, owing to poor trade conditions, and there were reiterated reports of curtailment in southern mills, although no definite figures were mentioned.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 60,576 bales against 90,831 last year.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, April 17.—(AP)—Spot quiet; middling 19.10.

PRICES SLUMP IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, April 17.—(AP)—There was fairly active trading today for a Saturday session and, although prices slumped off 10 to 12 points in the early trading on the execution of overnight selling orders and in sympathy with lower Liverpool cables, the decline was recovered in the later trading, due to covering over the week-end.

The rally was also helped by the barometer lines on the weather map holding out the possibility of a recurrence of unsettled weather over Sunday. The close was very steady and within a point or two of the best, showing net losses for the day of only 1 to 3 points.

At the start the market opened easier and first trades showed losses of 6 to 12 points. Prices continued to ease off after the call under the pressure of overnight selling orders and May traded down to 17.80, July to 17.35 and October to 16.34, or 10 to 12 points below yesterday's close. These prices proved to be the lows of the day.

During the second hour of the session prices rallied on covering by shorts for over the week-end and on more or less buying based on the barometer lines on the map holding out prospects of a change in the weather. All the early loss was recovered, active months paralleling the close of yesterday.

The close was within a point or two of the highest with the undertone very steady.

Exports for the day totaled 10,465 bales.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, April 17.—(AP)—Cotton spot closed steady, 17 points down. Sales 4,629. Low middling 14.40; middling 17.90; good middling 18.65. Receipts 2,459; stock 328,703. ....

The Day in Finance

By R. L. BARNUM.

Things Are Happening So Fast in Wall Street With Production Apparently Exceeding Consumption, That Thinking Traders Are Becoming a Bit Worried, Barnum Says.

New York, April 17.—Things are happening so fast in Wall street that thinking people are going off in the corner by themselves whenever they get a chance for the purpose of restoring some degree of order in their mental furniture. It has only been a matter of a few short weeks since the stock market was daily making a new high average price for all time with our financial and industrial leaders talking of the promising general trade situation and outlook saying that there was not a cloud in the sky.

First, out of a clear sky, the Federal Reserve bank announces that, acting on instructions from the Federal Reserve board at Washington, it was asking the member banks in this Federal Reserve district to compile and publish weekly statements showing loans for their own account and for the account of out-of-town banks and others secured by stock exchange collateral. The immediate response to this request from both stock exchange and banking people in Wall street was that while stock exchange loans were high there were good reasons in the industrial and railroad current earnings and outlook for the speculation that was going on in stocks and that as high as they were stock exchange loans were not too high; that, anyway, the fact that stock exchange loans were high was common knowledge and that hence the figures to be given out at the request of the Federal Reserve board would be "old stuff." When the unexpectedly large figures were published it was plain that too much of the country's credit was being used in stock exchange speculation. Stock prices began to decline with the extent of the decline rapidly increasing until there was forced liquidation, the like of which, some people had never before witnessed.

Over-Production Blamed.

Following this smash in the stock market attention began to be drawn to the continued decline in the average commodity price which had been going on for many months, indicating that production of raw and finished goods was running ahead of consumption.

Next, out of a clear sky, a run starts on banks in Cuba, making it necessary for banks here and in Canada to rush something like $100,000,000 to our southern neighbors to satisfy depositors that there was no real cause for withdrawing their money. Next we learn that bankers here and in Canada have the Cuban situation well in hand; that pla s are being worked out for a solution of Cuba's troubles; that responsible people are saying the Cuban situation is "old stuff;" that the real trouble with Cuba is that world supply of sugar has been ignored; that entirely too much sugar has been raised by Cuba; that selling prices of sugar are below the cost of production; that with capital invested in an over-supply of sugar Cuba is facing a modified form of what happened there and to us and elsewhere in 1920.

Thinking people here in Wall street are going off by themselves to get their bearings whenever they get a chance during these strenuous days, and even nights for some, because it is realized that in the days unexpected and sensational news of the past few short weeks things have happened to recall what happened in 1920. In 1920 with our industrial machinery going even faster than during war times, it was commonly believed that everybody could turn out all the goods they could make because there was not enough to go around. Out of a clear sky, however, it was learned suddenly that there was more than enough goods to go around; that the job ahead was no longer one of trying to get out more goods but what to do with the goods already on hand.

People Asking Questions.

Today thinking people in Wall street are going off by themselves whenever they get a chance because they are trying to find out if it is likely that the unexpected news developments of the past few weeks mean that we are going to be fooled again just as we were in 1920 when the stock market was daily making new high records for all time and apparently in the general trade situation and outlook there was not a cloud in the sky.

There is absolutely no question now but that the sustained decline which has been going on in the average commodity price for months has been saying plainly that we were making too many raw and finished goods despite the assurances coming from many quarters that there was no accumulation of goods; that the situation and outlook were most promising, that there were no clouds in the sky. However, those here in Wall street who are going off in the corner by themselves, not for the purpose of trying to fool themselves but to get at the real facts, are arriving at the conclusion that while there has recently been overproduction of raw and finished goods the situation today at worst can be only a very, very modified form of 1920.

Thinking people here in Wall street are trying to find out where the money released as a result of the recent collapse in the stock market is going. If there is to be a slowing down in general trade the released credit is not going there. It is not reasonable to suppose that speculation in real estate or building will absorb any more credit. The conclusion reached is that in many cases the credit released by stock market liquidation is going to carry inventories that heretofore have required less credit because of the more rapid turnover. However, granting this, there is absolutely no chance that 1926 inventories will be a repetition of 1920. At the peak in 1920 rediscounts of member banks at the federal reserve banks reflecting inflation in all directions mounted to $3,127,000,000. Today these figures are a bare $500,000,000. In 1920 we were crazy enough to believe we could sell all of the goods we could make. But we found out different and as a result, despite the fact that general trade since 1922 has been recovering we have continued to buy from hand-to-mouth.

Manufacturers and jobbers have been forced to carry some stocks because they found that the retailers realizing our overproduction facilities would only buy from hand-to-mouth and could get goods promptly from competitive jobbers and manufacturers. In recent years retailers have passed whatever burden there was in carrying goods over to the manufacturers and jobbers. But even so, today there are no frozen loans reflected in heavy rediscounts of member banks at the federal reserve banks. There are no frozen farmers loans. We may and probably will have temporary slowing down in production just as we have had every spring starting in 1923. But there are no reasons for believing that there is anything in the financial and industrial situation and outlook closely resembling 1920, this despite the unexpected sensational news of the past few weeks.

MISSING FLYERS FOUND IN DESERT

Cairo, April 17.—Surviving a burning ordeal on the swirling sands of the Palestine desert after searching parties had feared they were dead, Captain Estevez and his mechanic, the Spanish aviators who led the Madrid-to-Manila flight until they were lost last Sunday, have been found alive and in reasonably good condition.

Estevez was found some 40 miles from the desolate spot where he had abandoned his plane. Not far away, an hour or more later, was found his mechanic. The two men are now under medical treatment for exhaustion and blistered, slightly septic feet developed as they trudged over the stifling, shifting dunes of the desert wastes.

GEORGIA RANKS THIRD IN SOUTH'S BUILDING

Washington, April 17.—Atlanta ranks third among southern cities in the amount of building contracts awarded during the first quarter of this year, being surpassed only by Miami, Fla., and Houston, Texas, according to figures compiled by the F. W. Dodge corporation.

The total amount of contracts awarded in Atlanta during the first three months of 1926 is $8,383,064, comparing with $10,925,936 in Miami and $8,581,928 in Houston, according to the report.

Georgia ranks sixth among southern states, though she is surpassed also by the District of Columbia. The total in the state is $10,089,387.

Florida leads with a total of over $59,000,000.

publication entitled, "The Writ of Certiorari."

The treatise deals with its subject in a manner peculiarly helpful to the practicing attorney and contains a complete collection of legal forms incident to the practical application of the law of certiorari in all of its phases, from the original petition to final judgment, with copious annotations from the code of Georgia, reports of the supreme court and the Georgia court of appeals on questions relating to forms and procedure in certiorari cases.

The volume contains 202 pages, including a general index and index to forms, and is published by The Harrison company, from the press of Foote & Davies company.

Judge McClelland was born in Atlanta and prior to his long term of distinguished service upon the bench was one of the leading members of the Atlanta bar.

DR. W. W. ALEXANDER ADDRESSES YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING

Birmingham, Ala., April 17.—(AP)—Jim Crow laws of the south are unjust and should be repealed, in the opinion of Dr. Will W. Alexander, of Atlanta, expressed today before the Interdenominational Young People's conference, in session here.

Dr. Alexander declared it was unjust for the white majority to discriminate against the negro minority, and called attention to the "inconvenience experienced by negro travelers who do not have smoking car and Pullman privileges and who are forced to ride in such dangerous places as the front coaches of trains afford."

Mr. Alexander said that negroes were ruled against not only in matters of travel, but also in education, housing conditions, in the courts and social affairs.

"The courts of the south," said the speaker, "do not find white men guilty of crime upon the testimony of negroes." He added: "A country which does not protect every individual by law will ultimately become an unsafe country in which to live."

"Every person, regardless of race," said Mr. Alexander, "should have every opportunity for advancement of powers which are within them."

Mr. Alexander said that Richmond's population was 32 per cent negro, "and yet only 5 per cent of the territory of that city is allotted to the race."

"Do you believe in the repeal of the Jim Crow law?" asked someone in the audience when Mr. Alexander had concluded.

"I believe in the repeal of unjust laws and it is unjust," replied Mr. Alexander.

Another questioner asked:

"Do you think that educated negroes are more hostile to whites than uneducated negroes?"

Mr. Alexander replied: "Naturally so. As the mind is cultivated one sees more clearly the injustices done."

"Do you believe in segregation?" another person asked.

"My time is up. I shall answer that later," said the speaker.

Mr. Alexander said that he did not advocate intermarriage. "That is not necessary to a Christian solution of the problem," he declared.

Jesus taught respect for personality, Mr. Alexander asserted.

Continuing he said: "The final rule by which personality will be judged is not race but character. That race will be supreme which is most capable of being Christlike. Being a true Christian is to wish every race to have the fullest possible advancement of which it is possible."

Chattooga Pensions.

Summerville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Back pensions amounting to approximately $11,000 will be paid to Confederate soldiers and widows of soldiers in Chattooga county by J. Edgar King, ordinary, as soon as the arrangements can be made to convert the rentals of the Western & Atlantic railroad, which have been pledged by the legislature for the payment of back due pensions.

ENDEAVOR UNION REELECTS MOYE

Columbus, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—The Georgia Christian Endeavor union in 14th annual convention tonight elected the following officers for 1927:

President, Thomas A. Moye, Atlanta; Sanford K. Bell, vice president, Atlanta; Miss Edith Hoke, secretary, Macon; E. T. Crawford, treasurer, Griffin.

Pastors advisory board, Rev. J. C. Pryor, Demorest, Dr. C. R. Stoffer, Atlanta, and Rev. M. R. Williamson, Griffin. The election of officers followed an elaborate banquet tonight at which more than 400 people were guests.

The nominating committee recommended that the next state convention be held in Savannah in 1927. The convention will close Sunday night.

COURT DISMISSES SUIT OF PETROVA AGAINST AUTHOR

New York, April 17.—(AP)—The suit of Olva Petrova, the actress, against William Henry Roberts, a London author for $100,000 damage for slanderous remarks accredited to him in connection with a plagarism suit against the actress, was dismissed today in the appellate division of the supreme court. The court reversed a decision of Justice Reigelmann which held the service of summons and complaint against Roberts was properly made.

Roberts claimed the service was not proper because it was made while he was attending court in the trial of his successful suit charging Miss Petrova with plagarizing material from his "La Rubia" for her play, "The White Peacock."

HOUGHTON SPEAKS TO MEN'S MEETING

Today's program at the Baptist Tabernacle, marking the half-way point in the two weeks' "old-time" revival, will consist of a mass meeting for men only at 3 o'clock and the regular night service. Dr. W. H. Houghton, pastor, will be in charge at both services, with special musical features directed by A. Douglas Swaggerty. The Aida brass quartet and a choir of 100 voices will sing.

The final week is expected to arouse even greater interest than the series of sermons last week when Dr. Houghton preached on "Atlanta's Greatest Sin", flaying parents for their "neglect of children" and scoring dance halls and clubs as being responsible for the "wavering home life of the nation."

Topics Announced

Sermon topics for the week include "From Stage to Pulpit", Monday night; "When Jazz and Death Danced Together," Tuesday night; "Short Beds and Narrow Covers", Wednesday; "Second Coming of Christ", Thursday; "The Red Chord In the Window", Friday and others. Dr. Houghton's powerful discussions of timely topics and his style of speaking against sin has attracted thousands, and this week's services are expected to prove more attractive, church officials said Saturday.

At this afternoon's mass meeting, Dr. Houghton will speak on "Ask Dad—He Knows", during which he will take up subjects for men only. This meeting is set for 3 o'clock and plans are being made to accommodate an immense audience. The pastor is expected to deal in his sermon with plain subjects and to discuss them in usual terse, "straight-from-the-shoulder" manner. The Aida quartet will offer special numbers.

Scores Join Church

Scores of new members were added to the Tabernacle's roster last week through Dr. Houghton's preaching, many of them by conversion and others by transferring letters from churches outside the city. The present revival, officials report, has attracted greater throngs than any similar service since Dr. Houghton became pastor nearly one year ago. New high attendance records and many more members are expected to be featured this week.

Prior to coming to Atlanta Dr. Houghton was engaged in evangelistic work in many of the largest cities of the world. He came here soon after a revival in a city in Ireland which created profound interest there.

In many large American cities he has been equally as successful and now is regarded as one of the strongest and most forceful speakers in Southern Baptist circles.

JONES AND GUNN TO PLAY IN BRITISH OPEN TOURNEY

Entries Forwarded Saturday; Atlantans To Start Trip May 1

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

One more tournament was added Saturday to the list of those in which Atlanta's golfing stars, Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn, will participate in the British Isles this summer. Their entries in the British open tournament were forwarded Saturday to England by the United States Golf association, making four regular tournaments in all in which they are entered.

The fact that Jones would take part in the open already had been published in Atlanta, but Watts Gunn had been undecided. This tournament makes it necessary for the team to remain abroad through June, for the open starts June 22 and continues through June 26. The original plan had been to sail for home after the Walker cup matches June 2 and 3.

According to Associated Press dispatches Saturday night from New York, George von Elm, the Los Angeles star, who also is entered in the Walker cup matches, will stay over for the open, making more than a score of Americans who will try for the British championship. Four times out of the last five years entrants from this country have captured the British open, which now is held by Jim Barnes. Harry Brower, a Princeton athlete, who now is a student at Cambridge, England, also has entered the open as an American.

Complete Itinerary.

The complete itinerary of the corps of Atlantans who will visit England for the greatest series of golf tournaments ever played between Britons and Americans now has been arranged. On May 1 Jones, the national amateur champion; Gunn, who was runner-up in the last amateur tournament; Thomas B. Paine, a member of the executive committee of the United States Golf association, and other members of the party will entrain at noon from the Terminal station for Washington, where on May 2 the two golfing stars will take part in a match which has been arranged by Roland Mackenzie, of that city. He also is a member of the Walker cup team and will leave the night of May 2 for New York with the Atlanta party.

Final details of the trip abroad will be arranged after arrival in New York, from where the entire Walker cup team will sail on May 5 aboard the magnificent Aquitania, of the Cunard line. The boat is expected to dock at Liverpool on May 12.

In Gold Vase Tourney.

The first tournament in which the Americans will participate is the gold vase, played annually at Sandwich. That is on May 17. From there the party will go to Muirfield, in Scotland, to play in the British amateur tournament May 24 to 29, and the Walker cup matches will be held June 2 and 3 at St. Andrews, the famous Scotch course. The British amateur is set for Lytham and St. Anne's course June 22 to 26.

There had been some talk of the Americans participating also in the French championship, but the dates are so close to those of the American open that the party will sail after the British open.

Golfers Prospered On Fla. Invasion

New York, April 17.—The professional golfers, who have been feathering their nests amidst Florida prosperity during the winter months, are trekking northward.

This has been a most prosperous year for golf professionals. Connected as they have come to be with real estate ventures in Florida, they have reaped rich rewards for their ability to sink the little white ball into the cup in considerably fewer strokes than gaping amateurs. The latter are supposed to buy the real estate.

Arnaud Massey and Archie Compston furnished the principal foreign invasion this past winter, and did well. The Frenchman and his big British partner probably made more money than they would have amassed in half a dozen winters abroad.

Walter Hagen, king of the match players, demonstrated his superiority over Bobby Jones at this style of play by leaving the Atlanta youngster far behind in their professional versus amateur contest. Hagen received $8,500 for this one match alone, involving a few hours work on two successive Sundays. His winter's work probably has netted Walter more than $50,000.

Soon, now, attention will turn to the big golfing events of the year, the National Open and the National Amateur championships.

On their showing this winter, it is hard to select the winner of the open from among the professionals, presuming that Bobby Jones doesn't have an exceptionally good week and add this crown to the others that already decorate his wavy, brown thatch.

A random guess is that Willie Klein, a youthful Jerseyman, who is highly thought of by Willie Macfarlane, the present title holder, may annex the open championship of 1926.

It is hard to see who can keep Bobby Jones from winning his third amateur championship in succession.

Honor Iowa Coach On Olympic Selection

One of the coaches who will assist in the development of American Nurmis and Ritolas for the 1928 Olympic games is G. T. Bresnahan, of Iowa. He has been picked as a member of the National A. A. U. committee on long distance running. Bresnahan's best product in the distance runs is Harold Phelps, who took the international 2-mile at the Penn plays last spring, was twice Big Ten cross-country champion and was a member of the 1925 Olympic squad.

PREP LEAGUE LEADERS MEET IN BIG GAME

BY BILL WHITE.

The Prep league baseball fans will be treated to a feast Tuesday afternoon when the league leaders clash for the first time this season. The Bluebirds and the Tech High Smithies will lock horns to determine who will occupy the top place in the league standing. University has been hitting a mighty stride this last week and seems to be the favorite bet to win in this struggle. Although Tech High has failed to lose any games so far and are going strong against oppostion in the Prep league, with a strong line of pitchers, such as Van Brocklin, McHenry and Burton, University will be a cloud in Tech High's sunshine this week.

Boys' High was squeezed out of a baseball game Monday when the Bluebirds rallied to win out with a bare margin of one run, and also drew a bye and remained idle Thursday, but played Lanier Saturday. Boys' High will play Fulton Monday at Piedmont park, and will have a hard time overcoming this obstacle, as Fulton has been hitting all pitchers consistently.

As Tech High got a late start in the schedules they have a few postponed games to play off, but have made an impression in all the games played so far. The Smithies will encounter Decatur and should not have much trouble trouncing them with Royston on the mound, backed with their hard-hitting outfield.

Hard Battle.

The Marist-G. M.-A. struggle which was scheduled for Thursday and postponed to Friday was again put off indefinitely because of a government inspection of the East Point Cadets which was being held Friday. Coach Morrow will have to round out a strong team by Monday for the Cadets will battle the fast and hard-hitting Bluebird aggregation on the U. S. B. diamond. And more trouble will fall to G. M. A. Thursday when they play Tech High at home, if the Cadets are successful against University they should not have any trouble in dealing with the Smithies, as these are the league high standers and present the strongest competition to be found in the local league.

Marist will be on their pins Thursday as they play University and will have to play tight ball to keep down an over-running score, as the last time they played the Bluebirds went wild and ran up a 21-run lead on the Bean boys.

Another game was added to University's lead Wednesday as Decatur forfeited 9-0, making the Bluebird's lead more intricate. Lanier lost a lop-sided game Friday afternoon to University, their biggest opponents in the G. I. A. A. This makes the second game that the Bluebirds have grabbed from the Poets. By defeating Lanier the Bluebirds boosted their G. I. A. A. standing.

Irish All Anxious To Land in Majors

A survey taken recently at Notre Dame brought out the surprising fact that most of the eighty ball players on the squad would like to be big league ball players after their college days were over. However, every one who desired to play in major league company qualified his answer by stating: "When I graduate, then I might take a chance at it."

Champion Cager On Michigan Five

Frank Harrigan, of Grand Rapids, Mich., probably was Michigan's most valuable basketball player during the 1926 season. Team tabulations show that he played 485 minutes in 12 conference games and made 110 points against Big Ten opponents. He succeeded in making twenty-two out of thirty-five free throws and during the last four games had a perfect free throw average. Captain-elect Eddie Chambers, of Niles, Mich., was second with 92 points, but with a free throw record of only 18 out of a possible 41. Captain Dick Doyle, of Galesburg, Mich., made 82 points for his team during the season and made 16 out of 39 free throws.

FAST WORK BY THE MAN WITH THE CAMERA

When Mule Haas hit a double in the first inning to drive in Clarke and Murphy with the first Cracker runs of Saturday's game Kenneth Rogers was there to get the crack of the bat and he swapped plates so fast that he also got Clarke and Murphy as they dashed in. The top picture shows Haas and the lower one the two base runners ahead of him.

108 RUNNERS ENTER ANNUAL U.S. MARATHON

Boston, April 17.—(AP)—One hundred and eight runners are entered for the 29th annual American Marathon, Monday.

Albin Stenroos, of Finland, Olympic Marathon king, and Clarence De Mar, four times winner of the Boston Athletic association's 25 mile classic, are favorites.

De Mar claims that he has never been in finer fettle. His friends who have watched him workout predict he will carry off the title easily for the fifth time.

Stenroos has decided to remain in the United States as a number of the Finnish-American A. C. of New York. He came to this country last winter.

MANY RECORDS FALL IN OHIO RELAY MEET

Columbus, Ohio, April 17.—(AP)—Honors were widely scattered in the annual Ohio relay held here today at Ohio State University stadium. Upwards of a dozen meet records were broken in 36 major events.

Illinois and Michigan each scored four firsts in the university division with Ohio State trailing closely with three. Wisconsin copped two. In the college division Ohio Wesleyan, Michigan State Normal and Michigan State college athletes were outstanding.

Among class "A" high schools, Urbana, Illinois, athletes attracted chief attention. Urbana sprinters captured two events and St. John's Military Academy of Wisconsin took another of the nine in that division.

Interest centered in the two hurdle races, the 120-yard high and 220 low in the university division. Captain George "Phin" Guthrie, Ohio State, and national hurdle champion, Werner, Illinois captain and Guthrie's opponent in numerous hurdle races in the last two years, were the principal contestants. Guthrie won both and in the high hurdles set a meet record of 15 seconds flat, bettering his former mark by 2-10 seconds. Guthrie was awarded two gold watches, the prizes, but presented one to Werner.

A sensational finish was witnessed in the distance Medley relay for universities, won by Illinois. Kennedy, Ohio State two-miler led until the home stretch when he was overtaken by Little, of Indiana. Then both were nosed out by Stellam, of Illinois, who finished apparently fresh as the other two were assisted from the track.

Cornell U. Builds New House for Crew

Cornell oarsmen are planning to construct a new boathouse within a year as a result of a transaction between the university authorities and the city of Ithaca to control the west bank of the Cayuaga inlet, where deeper water and better weather conditions will be available than at the present time. It is also the desire to afford visiting crews better conditions.

Leaves School To Be A Boxer at 17 Years

Browns Have Three Snappy Young Hurlers

The Browns figure they have the three best young pitchers in the league in Gaston, Giard and Ballou. The trio are wearing St. Louis uniforms as the result of two trades made by Sisler. Gaston and Giard came from New York with Bush for Shocker and pitched winning ball last year. Now he gets Ballou for Bush.

Tough Road Ahead.

SATURDAY'S game at Spiller park, during which some of the most ridiculous baseball ever produced was played for the home fans, only proves that a baseball club looks bad when it loses and looks good when it is winning. The Chattanooga team, which had played big league baseball on its first two appearances here, suddenly went to pieces Saturday and the game was turned into a farce so far as it was concerned.

Don't believe that it was the fault of Hinkle entirely. He looked like the greenest sort of a player Saturday, but he is a good ball player who has given able assistance to a losing Lookout cause for some time. He blew, but so did Bogart and so did Don Anderson.

AS had been feared, John Brock's knee was so hard hit in Friday's pastime that he still was limping Saturday. He may be out of the game again today, but the Crackers are fortunate in having on hand Roy Luebbe, who worked behind the plate against Chattanooga in the last game and caught a fine game. He also socked a single which helped the local cause no little.

The team is stronger in all around ability this year than last. Luebbe is faster and younger than Joe Jenkins and will hit for a better average, although Joe was no mean hitter. Brock is every bit as good as he was a year ago, which is pretty good.

THE Crackers left us Saturday night to stack up against a pretty tough assignment—that of beating both Mobile and New Orleans in series away from home. What the locals accomplish on the road this trip will go a long way towards settling in the minds of the fans what the team will do the rest of the year.

True, both Mobile and New Orleans are rated as the class of the circuit, along with the Crackers, but they must win at least half of their games to gain the confidence of the people. The team has not been hitting and in the second game against Chattanooga was not fielding. But the Crackers are better than that. They will hit better and it is well known that they form a great fielding combination.

AND, by the way, the Chattanooga team is no mean outfit. The city which has supported a green and trying team for many years seems headed for competition with the rest of the league in earnest this year. For the first time in a long time, for instance, the Lookouts are composed of seasoned players. With the exception of a couple of pitchers every member of the team has played baseball for at least five years and knows what to do with a baseball—except at times.

With the veteran and peppery Kid Elberfeld managing the squad and with a team of old heads to do what he wants done Chattanooga is headed surely for the first division.

Rockne To Conduct Three Coaching Schools

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame grid coach, will conduct only three coaching schools for football teachers this year. Last year he carried on work in seven schools in various parts of the country, but the work proved too severe and brought about a nervous breakdown. His first school this year will be open on June 20 at Oregon Agricultural college, Corvallis, Oregon, continuing ten days. The second will open on July 10 at Superior, Wis., and will continue for two weeks. The third school will open at Notre Dame on August 9 and continue for two weeks.

Born With One Arm, Girl Is Star Athlete

The fact that she was born with only one arm, and that the left, has not proved an insurmountable handicap to Hilda Hays, 16 years old, star of the girls' basketball team of Dougherty (Okla.) High school. Hilda is playing her third year on the basketball team. Her regular position is center, although she plays every position on the court well, L. L. Cromer, Dougherty coach, avers. Nor is the girl's athletic prowess confined to the basketball court. She is an excellent swimmer, solo dancer and equestrienne.

AUBURN BEATS TECH RUNNERS IN DUAL MEET

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.

Auburn, Ala., April 17.—(Special.) The Auburn cinder artists took the honors here Saturday afternoon in a duel meet with the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets when they totaled 69 points while the Jackets were accumulating 43.

"Weemie" Baskin, Auburn speed merchant, headed the list of point getters with 21. Baskin entered six of the events, placing in five and failing only in the shot-put. In the high hurdles, low hurdles and javelin he came through with first place, but was held to second in the high jump and discus.

Snyder, first year varsity man, featured the day's happenings by pulling in first in the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard jaunt. Snyder broke the tape in 10 flat in the century and recording the 220 in 22 8-10.

Featuring the Tech performers was the two-mile run by Perkins, who headed the chase in fine shape. Perkins' six-foot leap to win the high jump was another brilliant achievement for the visiting Jackets.

Summary.

100-yard dash: Won by Snyder, Auburn; second, Green, Auburn; time, 10 seconds.

220-yard dash: Won by Snyder, Auburn; second Green, Auburn; time, 22.8 seconds.

440-yard run: Won by Crowder, Georgia Tech; second, Saks, Georgia Tech; time, 53.2 seconds.

Half-mile run: Won by Jamieson, Georgia Tech; second, West, Georgia Tech; time, 2 minute, 7.4 seconds.

Mile run: Won by C. Morrow, Auburn; second, Wright, Georgia Tech; time, 4 minutes, 41.8 seconds.

Two-mile run: Won by Robert, Georgia Tech; second, W. Morrow, Auburn; time, 10 minutes, 14.8 seconds.

120-yard high hurdles: Won by Baskin, Auburn; second, Green, Auburn; time, 15.8 seconds.

220-yard low hurdles: Won by Baskin, Auburn; second, Green, Auburn; time, 26.2 seconds.

Shot-put: Won by Hood, Georgia Tech; second, Lovelace, Auburn; distance, 41 feet, 4 inches.

Discus throw: Won by Ivy, Georgia Tech; second, Baskin, Auburn; distance, 121 feet, 3 inches.

Javelin throw: Won by Baskin, Auburn; second, Pearce, Auburn, distance, 155 feet, 5 inches.

Pole vault: Tie between Meadors, of Auburn, and Conley, of Georgia Tech; height, 11 feet, 6 inches.

High jump: Won by Perkins, Georgia Tech; second, Baskin, Auburn; height, 5 feet, 11 inches.

Broad jump: Won by Greene, Auburn; second, Snyder, Auburn; distance, 21 feet, 9 inches.

All Pick Red Sox To Finish in Eighth

About the only thing the baseball experts are agreed on is that the Boston Red Sox will finish the season in the cellar. In the majority of the other places there's a difference of opinion. But the Foblites get the last place nomination with nary an opposing voice.

Sarge Bagby Holds Lookouts to 4 Hits As Mates Pound Ball

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

The fine-looking, hard-hitting, smart-playing Chattanooga baseball club, which has been whanging the Crackers around since it came to town, was taken to pieces Saturday afternoon at Spiller park and given an 8-to-1 thrashing by Bert Niehoff's athletes. In one of the most ludicrous pastimes it would be possible to imagine the Crackers hit hard, ran the bases well and supported a finely-pitched game by Jim Bagby to such good purpose that the Lookouts were made to look like amateurs.

It is an axiom of baseball that when a team is winning it looks good, and it certainly was proven Saturday. Only one error was registered by the Crackers and that an excusable one by Durocher on a hard-hit ground ball. On the other hand the visitors contributed no fewer than five misplays with their hands and so many with their heads that the crowd was kept laughing uproariously. Catcher Hinkle put on a one-man comedy act that was a scream—not because he is a bad ball player, for he is not. He became rattled and twice let runners advance a base while the ball was either in his hand or lying on the ground. He also dropped a foul fly and threw over Bogart's head in left field for a couple of errors.

Hinkle was not alone in his ridiculous plays. Don Anderson, who started behind the plate, held the ball to argue over a decision at the plate while Roy Luebbe took an extra base.

Start in First.

The Crackers, short on runs for the entire season, tied into Pitcher Horan, who started, in the first inning, ripping off a couple of runs by hard hitting. To start with, Sumpter Clarke drew a base on balls. Rod Murphy shot a single to right field, Clarke advancing to third. Mule Haas then uncorked a double to the right center field bank, scoring both runners.

Wilbur Good hit the right field bank for a triple to start the third inning. Haas popped out, but Smith got a Texas leaguer over short to score Good.

The circus began in the fifth inning. With two gone Smith hit one to Hartford, who booted the ball. Manager Niehoff got a base on balls, placing Smith on second. Luebbe hit a long single to left field, scoring Smith and placing Niehoff of third. The young catcher, who made a splendid showing for the day, and Niehoff worked a double steal, Niehoff scoring with a long slide while Don Anderson was trying to find him with the ball. He did not tag the boss until after Niehoff had hit the plate, but he turned to Umpire Clark with a vehement protest—still holding the ball in his hand—and as he did so Luebbe calmly trotted along to third. Durocher popped to Bogart to end the inning.

Hinkle Stages Show

Don Anderson surrendered the catching outfit to Hinkle as the Crackers opened their half of the sixth inning unprepared for the series of events which followed. The spectators were interested in the fact that they were watching a Cracker victory, but they were absolutely ignorant of the fact that the Chattanooga team was about to put on an uproarious vaudeville entertainment with poor Mr. Hinkle taking the role of clown.

McHenry, a left-hander of erratic tendencies, assumed the pitching burden at the same time Hinkle entered the pastime, and he was wilder even than an ordinary left-hander as he started to work on Jim Bagby, first man to face him. He passed Bagby, tossing in a wild pitch for the fourth ball, and Jim sauntered down to first. Hinkle, thinking perhaps of the folks at home, made no effort to retrieve the ball, but held out his hand for another from Umpire Clark. When he did so Bagby promptly went to second while Hinkle, Kid Elberfeld and the rest of the visiting firemen roared and stamped about the place. It did no good. Jim stayed put.

Then Mr. McHenry and Bogart entered into the proceedings. Sumpter Clarke laid down a bunt, attempting to die for the sake of the Crackers at first base, so Bagby could go to third, but the Lookouts would ont have it that way. Generous and entertaining to a fault, they wanted the Crackers to have plenty to talk about after the game. McHenry scooped up the ball and fired to Bogart as Bagby went pounding along to third base. Bogart seized the ball and stuck it where Jim was supposed to slide. But Jim Bagby is a big man. Hitting the dirt is no trifling matter for him, and, although obliging as can be he declined to slide. Instead he ran up to third base and stepped over the ball and onto the bag. Bogart didn't tag him. Bill Brennan was umpiring there. He turned his back and began to cry, apparently, for his shoulders were moving up and down. Bogart leaped to his feet, rushed around to Bill and started to raise sand about it. Clarke, seizing upon the situation, went to second as Bogart waved the ball about while talking to Brennan. The crowd whooped as Bogart saw Clarke and tried to catch him. Brennan began to sob harder than ever.

Enter Rod Murphy.

Rod Murphy now enters the proceedings, bat and fast legs along with him. He steps to the plate, determined to do or to die. He socks one down to third base, and, while Bogart is busy trying to hold the other runners to the bases, he delays the throw so late that Murphy is safe. The bases are full.

Up steps the noble Red Smith. He whacks one to left field for a single, which bounds off Bruce Hartford's hands. Bruce races into short left and throws madly to Catcher Hinkle, who, missing Bagby at the plate, shot to third to head off Clarke. Like the mighty throw John Brock committed the day previous, this one sailed on into left field and Clarke scored. Murphy scored also, Smith landing on third, from where he counted on a sacrifice fly by Good.

The crowd wound up and whooped again. It sure is different when you are winning. And so is the crowd.

That was the last of the Cracker scoring. They, as well as the crowd, were too tired from laughing to score any more and, anyway, the game was called after the visitors had played their half of the eighth inning. The Crackers have an engagement to meet the Mobile Bears in the first of a four-game series this afternoon and had to catch the train.

The lone Chattanooga run was scored by means of two of the four hits Jim Bagby allowed in the fourth inning. With two down Bigelow shot to the right field bank for one of two doubles he crashed during the contest, and counted on a single by Bandrimer, who has been very bothersome during his first visit here this year.

The Lookouts filled the bases in the sixth with two out, but Durocher got the last man with a forceout.

The Crackers left Saturday night for Mobile to make a four-day stand. From there they will go to New Orleans, returning to the home grounds on April 27 for a little visit.

S. S. A. A. TEAMS HARD AT WORK FOR BIG YEAR

The Sunday School Athletic association will open its 1926 baseball season Saturday afternoon, May 1. The 14 teams which have entered the association are getting down to hard practice in preparation for the coming season.

The Gordon Street Presbyterians, last year's S. S. A. A. champions, have added quite a bit of strength to their lineup and they will take the field well-fortified to defend their laurels. The new teams which have shown up well in practice and which are figured on giving the champions a hard fight are Pryor Street Presbyterians, St. Marks Methodist, Central Presbyterians, Edgewood Baptists and St. Paul Methodist. The other two teams, Locust Grove Baptist and Log Cabin Sunday school, have been keeping under cover but it is known that both teams will have strong entries. Little is known about Druid Hills Presbyterians, Loyalty class, Epworth workers, Westminster Presbyterians, Jackson Hill Baptists and Underwood Methodists, but they will all be in there fighting with the usual S. S. A. A. spirit.

Two leagues will be formed, the American and the National. Teams elected to enter the American league are Gordon Street Presbyterians, Epworth workers, Westminster Presbyterians, Jackson Hill Baptists, Central Presbyterians and St. Marks Methodists. Teams which will make up the National circuit are Log Cabin S. S., Edgewood Baptists, Druid Hills Presbyterians, St. Paul Methodists, Anchor class, Loyalty class, Pryor Street Presbyterians and Locust Grove Baptists. The American league will play three rounds while the National circuit will play a two-round quota.

Beautiful trophies will be given to the winners in each league and a gold baseball will be given to the leading hitter, leading pitcher and the leading home run hitter in each loop. These will be given by the Parks-Chambers-Hardwick Co. After the close of the regular season there will be a post-season series between the two pennant winners to determine the S. S. A. A. champions. Sam Glassman, official umpire of the S. S. A. A., will give a loving cup to the winner of this series. The Wilson Aero official league baseball has been adopted by the S. S. A. A. and will be used in all of the regular games.

Illinois Five Has Odd Record for Seven Tilts

Illinois hung up a most unusual record in its first seven Big Ten basketball games. Though winning five of the tilts, the Orange and Blue cagers didn't outscore the opponents in combined totals. In fact, each counted 165 points. The Illini simply managed to get their ounters where they did the most good. Four of the victories were by less than 5-point margins. In the Ohio State defeat Illinois trailed by 12 points.

Derby Candidates Start Real Training This Week

Carlaris Is Among Lexington Favorites Already Working Out

Louisville, Ky., April 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—Training of Derby prospects has begun in earnest on Kentucky tracks.

The rain, the slop, and the cold which have had trainers here "pawing the ground" while their charges loafed have rapidly disappeared under the warming influence of an April sun and many of the candidates have been given "openers" this week.

This time last year horses were stepping a mile in around 1:40, but until a few days ago not a single Derby eligible in training here had done three-quarters in better than 1:17—and Derby day, May 15, is only four weeks off.

Improved weather and track conditions at Lexington, however, enabled trainers to put their charges through stiff workouts at the Kentucky Association course. Although no starting time records were hung up, several of the eligibles performed satisfactorily and the coming week is expected to see some real running.

The arrival here of Carlaris, W. T. Anderson's imported colt, from Tia Juana, where he won the Tia Juana derby and the Coffroth handicap, enriching his owner something like $100,000, added considerable interest to the coming classic. Carlaris is the favorite right now, partly because of his sterling performances on the Lower California track, and partly because of his tranquil disposition.

The number of hopefuls in training is the largest that has ever been conditioned at local tracks at this season, and with the horses due from the east and Lexington at the termination of the meeting there, it appears likely that the record of 21 starters in 1923, will be equalled or bettered this year.

Two of the nominees at Lexington have been eliminated, trainers announced this week. Chicago, owned by Fred W. Grabner, who named his colt for his home town, went wrong in training. He was one of the most highly regarded of the Chicago owned candidates, having finished in the money in 19 of his 29 starts as a two-year-old.

Prince Charles, owned by J. S. Taylor, was the first of the more than 30 eligibles quartered at Lexington to go the derby distance of a mile and a quarter. The colt responded readily and clockers got him in the fractional time of 25 2-5; 51 2-5; 1:19; 1:46 2-5 and 2:14 2-5, not race winning time, but a highly creditable performance.

Bagenbaggage, Boot-to-Boot, and Blue Pencil arrived at Idle Hour Stable today from New Orleans. They will be trained there along with the five other three-year-olds E. R. Bradley named for the derby.

Spring racing gets under way in Kentucky next Saturday with the opening of a 10-day meet at Lexington.

PELS SWAMP BEARS.

New Orleans, April 17.—The Pelicans slugged their way to victory over the Mobile Bears here today, knocking Fuhr from the box in the 5th inning. The hitting attack was led by Tucker, Deal and Hendrick. The Bears started with a vicious bombardment of Austin, scoring 4 runs in the first two innings, but Hilton held the visitors to one tally for the remainder of the contest. New Orleans has won four out of five games played against Mobile since the season opened.

BARONS SWAMP VOLS.

Birmingham, Ala., April 17.—Birmingham bombarded three Nashville pitchers this afternoon and took an 11-to-4 decision to capture the opening home series of 1926. The Barons rattled 16 safe blows against Bickwood fences, including a home run by West, his third in the series.

[illegible], who recently returned to Birmingham, was rarely in trouble, and kept Nashville's 11 hits scattered well.

6,000 SCHOOLS ARE INVITED TO RELAY MEET

Chicago, April 17.—(AP)—Five thousand high schools and 1,000 academies will be invited to compete in the twenty-second national interscholastic track and field champions, to be held by the University of Chicago, June 4 and 5. Invitations were sent today to 48 states, Canada and Mexico. Last year 194 schools competed, from 31 states and Canada.

Emory Net Stars Win Over 'Bama

By SANDY CLOWER

Emory University, Ga., April 17—(Special)—While the Emory tracksters were defeating the Birmingham-Southern runners in the dual meet held at Emory today, the team of Emory netmen, composed of Captain Mosely and Dr. Oh, Korean racket wielder, were trouncing the Alabama colleges' tennis team of racqueteers made up of Branscomb and Lake.

Emory was winner in the doubles by a score of 7-9, 6-1, and 6-4. In the singles match between Dr. Oh, of Emory, and Lake of Birmingham-Southern, Oh was victorious by the following score in sets: 1-6, 6-3, and 6-4. Oh is an excellent player, having won honors as champion tennis player of the University of Chicago's summer school.

In the second singles match, Mosely, captain for two years of the Emory netmen, sat down Branscomb from the visiting school in the following order: 6-2, 7-5.

This was the first meet engaged in by Emory on the courts this season. Matches are being planned with the University of Georgia, Tech, and other southern colleges.

Ohio Fencers Win Championship

Five Ohio State varsity teams during the winter campaign recently ended won one Big Ten championship, were runners-up in two other intercollegiate sports and wound up with 27 victories and 14 defeats in 41 contests.

The Buckeyes' undefeated fencing squad was the only contingent to go clear through to a conference title, but the Ohio wrestlers won the championship of the eastern half of the Big Ten and came within an eyelash of the conference crown, losing, 8 to 6, to Illinois in the final match of the year.

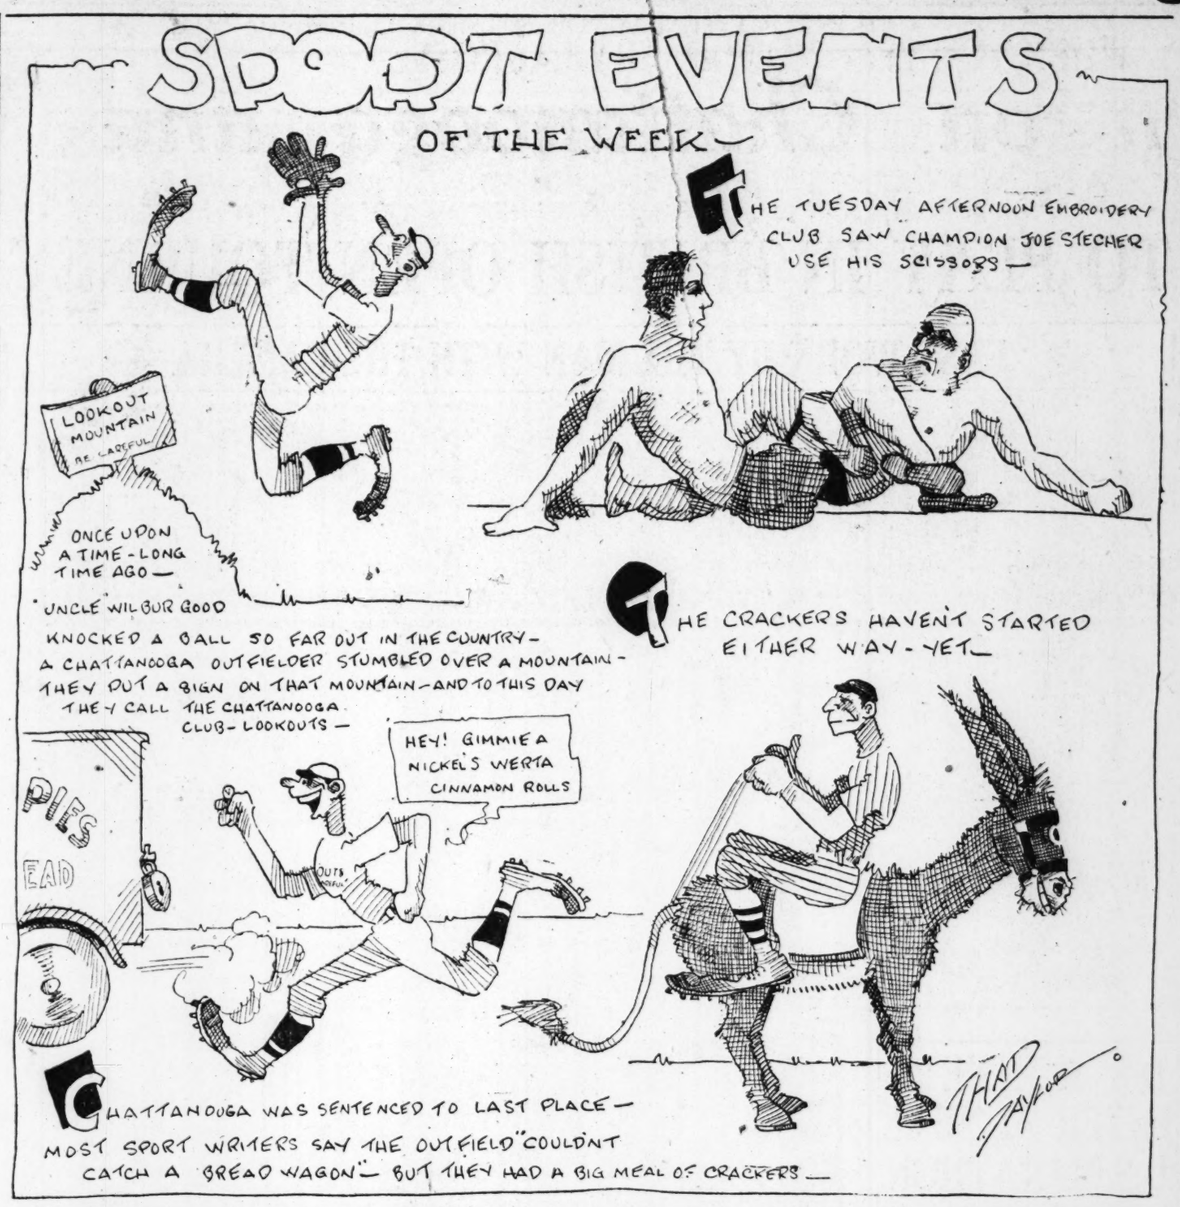

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

COAST CLUBS REAP HARVEST WITH PLAYERS

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

When the present owners of the San Francisco club of the Coast league walked into baseball they must have had at least part of a horse-shoeing establishment concealed about their respective persons, and, whatever the part may have been, it has done its work well, because the quartet of Golden Gate magnates in a few years has set a money getting record that has some of the other minors moaning to the heavens about the luck of some people.

It was in 1918 that the Frisco club was turned over to its present owners, or maybe financiers would be more appropriate. Without any waste of time or energy these dealers in ivory set about the business of crying their wares. Their first cry got them a resopnse and they've been crying aloud ever since with the result that in seven years they have taken approximately $400,000 in purchase money from the major leaguers.

Drain Purses of Majors.

Taking money from the pockets of a major magnate is no easy task unless a gun is employed, but these fellows made an art of the process. As soon as a worthy prospect appeared the owners talked the home town scribes into boosting him. But the boasting wouldn't be confined to one day or a week. It would continue for an entire season or longer, and sooner or later some big league owner would be convinced and the prospect would be on his way to the big tent. What has happened to most of these phenoms is something else again.

The strange feature of this entire business is that the players who drew large sums from higher up were obtained for practically nothing. Four youngsters who eventually brought around $800,000 merely walked into the park and put on a uniform. The investment in the four of them wasn't in excess of one hundred dollars railroad fare. This may seem like pure, unadulterated luck, but the owners at least deserve credit for not ignoring the "tips" sent in on the lads by friends of the club.

The first sale under the present regime was to the Cubs in 1918. The player was Charley Pick and $5,000 was the price. He didn't last long. Then Bert Cole, a hurler who was grabbed off the semi-pro lease, was shipped to Detroit for $15,000. He never caused a ripple in the league and now he's back where he started.

Reds Buy Two.

Next in line was Johnny Couch, a pitcher, who went to the Reds for $15,000, which was exactly ten times what he cost the Frisco club. He didn't last long. Undaunted by that failure, the Cincinnati club then purchased Jim Caveney, who cost 'Frisco the large sum of $500. He cost Cincinnati $65,000 and now he's back in the coast league.

The fall of 1921 was the juiciest year of all for the lucky owners. First they turned over Outfielder Jimmy O'Connell to the Giants for $75,000 and a few weeks later received a $100,000 check and three players from the White Sox for the services of Willie Kamm. Those three players were subsequently disposed of for $22,500. Neither Kamm or O'Connell cost Frisco a cent.

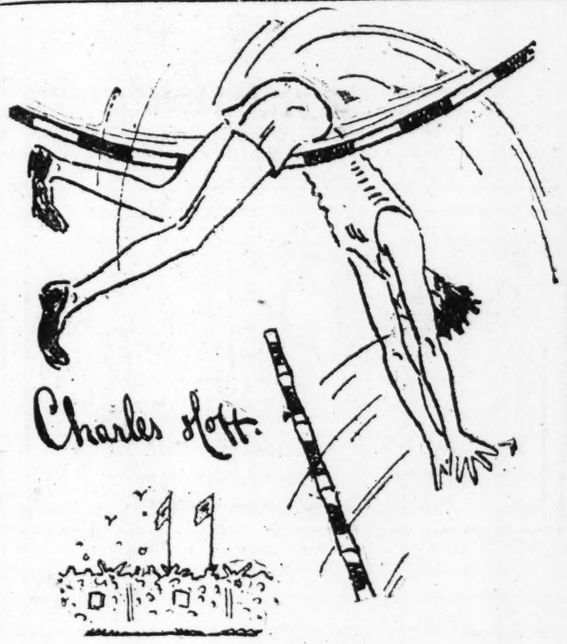

O'Connell is gone now because he foolishly played messenger boy for Cozy Dolan in an alleged attempt to bribe Heinie Sands, of the Phils, but even had he remained he wouldn't have made the grade, because the stuff wasn't in him. Kamm, of course, proved all that was said of him in advance and is the only one who really made good.

Frisco's last deal was the sale of Outfielder Waner and Infielder Rhyne to the Pirates for $100,000. Three years ago somebody saw Waner pitching a game at Ada, Okla. A friend advised the Frisco owners to get the player. They mailed him a contract and he accepted. He was converted into an outfielder because of his batting. Rhyne was picked off a merchants' team at San Jose at the large cost of nothing. But what they'll do in the majors remains to be seen.

MY LIFE IN SPORTS

BY CHARLES HOFF

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

FIFTH CHAPTER.

My first competition in Norway after having won my two English championships was on the day of my return, after a very stormy trip over the North sea. I felt rotten. The sea hadn't treated me very kindly! I did not even have time to see my parents first, I had to take a taxi directly to the meet.

While I was measuring the distance for the pole-vault, I got the surprise of my life—my 16-year-old sister appeared on the track in athletic costume. I was angry—I didn't know that she could run at all. She had never tried it in my presence. My anger gave way to surprise when I saw her win the 60-yard dash for women, smilingly and easily, beating the well-trained competitors by four yards. I was so happy that I jumped the next highest I had reached up to then, 12 feet 7 inches.

Given No Vacation.

My trainer was well satisfied, but don't believe he gave me any vacation; I had to go on harder than ever for the triangle match against Sweden and Denmark in Copenhagen the same year. I was now training on the broad jump, and hop-step-and-jump besides the pole-vault, sprint and middle distances. I was allowed massage every day now, so I could stand the hard training much better.

In the Norwegian championships the same year I jumped 13 feet 2 1-2 inches, establishing a new Scandinavian record, and people now, for the first time, thought I might have a chance to beat Denmark's great vaulter, Henry Petersen. Petersen had also learned his stuff from my coach, Kreigsman, who had been coach in Denmark before he came to Norway.

The day for the international competition in Copenhagen came with rain and heavy tracks, but a full house.

My first competition was the broad jump which I won easily. The next was pole-vault, and here came the sensation; no Dane believed I could beat Henry Petersen after having broad-jumped, but they were surprised. Both the Swede Rydberg and I beat their big star. I was the only one to clear the bar at 13 feet 1 inch.

I wanted to leave the track for a rest before the hop-step-and-jump in which I was to compete, also, but the public insisted upon my attempting a world's record. I answered, "all right, but I will only try once."

The record was then 13 feet 5 1-2 inches, held by Frank Foss, who made it in the Olympics in Antwerp in 1920. The bar was placed on 13 feet 6 1-2 inches. I made myself ready for the start.

Surprised at Success.

It was raining, the pole was slippery and uncomfortable and the earth stuck to my shoes. I started, slipped, turned in the middle of my run to see if I had hit my start mark all right, and continued at a terrific speed, only to get through and be able to get into my dressing room.

When I had collected my bones and got up from the sand heap, I was very much surprised at seeing the bar untouched.

That is how I made my first world record in pole-vault. In the next event, hop-step-and-jump, I was second.

That evening my coach and I went out celebrating alone! We had much to think back upon, and still more to look forward to. But we were now tied together in a friendship which nobody can ever break. I owed him thanks for all the good results so far, and he was thankful to me for having worked so hard and faithfully.

(TOMORROW: Hoff clears a record height but loses the Swedish king's cup.)

Holland Athlete Enters Penn Relays

Adrian Paulen, Holland's middle distance star, will remain in this country until the latter part of next month, it was announced recently at A. A. U. headquarters, following receipt of a cablegram from the Netherland Athletic union. The extension will permit Paulen to compete in the Penn relays to be held in Philadelphia April 23 and 24.

Paulen's original permit expired March 27, with his participation in the Rice institute relays at Houston, Texas.

Dogs Chase Rabbit; Collide and Die

During a rabbit hunt two hounds were killed by running together. The hounds were chasing the animal, approaching it from opposite directions. The rabbit suddenly changed its course, the dogs collided and both died as a result of their injuries.

PHILADELPHIA PLANS WORLD SPORTS MEET

The millions of visitors to the Sesqui-Centennial International exposition in Philadelphia June 1 to December 1, will find no greater world exhibit than that which will take place in the new municipal stadium and nearby sport fields in the gigantic program arranged by Dr. George W. Orton, sport director of the Sesqui-Centennial.

Dr. Orton has completed a sports program which will rival in importance and standards the best Olympic games. The varied schedule includes nearly every known sport in this country and abroad, so that visitors from foreign countries will see their favorite athletics as well as those of this country.

It is expected that almost all the leading athletes of this country will compete in one or more of the events arranged for the Sesqui-Centennial. In addition many of the foreign countries will be represented. Canada has promised to send competitors to all the major events.

Big Track Events.

Track and field athletics will occupy a leading spot in the program. Among the important events to be decided on the cinder path are the men's national A. A. U. championships, the women's national A. A. U. championships, the men's national decathlon championship, a full course marathon race from Valley Forge to the stadium, and the national railroad and national industrial championships.

Ten of the best track and field athletes now in Europe, including Paavo Nurmi, of Finland, have been invited to take part in the national men's championships. The many foreign stars now in this country, including Stenroos of Finland, the Olympic marathon winner; Charley Hoff, of Norway, holder of world pole vault records; Myyra, of Finland, the Olympic javelin champion; Paulen, the Belgium half-mile champion, and Arne Borg, the Norwegian swimming wonder, also will compete.

Davis Cup Tennis Matches.

The track champions, however, will be only a small part of the famous array of athletes to perform. The challenge round of the Davis cup tennis matches will bring Bill Tilden, world champion; Billy Johnston and Vincent Richards, all of the United States, and most likely Rene Lacoste, the United States indoor champion, and his French teammate, Jean Borotra, the 1925 indoor title holder. An international world court tennis championship also is on the program. So is the intercollegiate championship.

Rivaling tennis and track will be golf. Dr. Orton has obtained a number of the feature events of the golf season, including the women's national championship tournament, the women's eastern championship, the intercollegiate tournament, the interstate matches for the Leslie cup, and the army, navy and marine corps events.

Fencing, polo, cricket, soccer, boxing, rowing, canoeing, bicycle riding, archery, swimming, gymnastics, rifle shooting, fresh water and surf casting, billiards, baseball and football are having an important place on the six months' program—a program that will surpass anything ever held in this country.

Spends $100 To Change Name of His Horse

"What's in a name"—of a horse?

E. R. Thomas has just paid the registrar of the Jockey club $100 for the privilege of changing the name of the horse Swope to that of Morning Telegraph.

Thomas bought the 4-year-old son of Fair Play—Albrun at the sale of Bud Fisher's horses last fall for $19,000, but he has not started as yet in the well known "gray and scarlet."

Morning Telegraph (formerly Swope) was well thought of as a 2-year-old, although he won only one stake, and at one time Harry Sinclair offered a fancy price for him.

Tennis Stars Start American Invasion Of European Courts

New York, April 17.—The vanguard of the invasion of European sport fields by Americans left here today.

Miss Mary K. Browne, captain of the American woman's tennis team, and Miss Glenna Collett, American national woman's golf champion, sailed today to carry the banner of American sportdom through France and England.

Simultaneously with the departure of Misses Browne and Collett, the United States Lawn Tennis association announced that Vinnie Richards and Howard Kinsey had been selected to bear the brunt of the international tennis battles across the seas.

A special invitation had been extended to Bill Tilden and Bill Johnston to compete in a special tournament being arranged by the British tennis association to celebrate the golden anniversary of Wimbledon. The invitation also included the acceptance of a prize from King George as former Wimbledon champions.

Tilden Not To Go

Conflicting business engagements forced Tilden andl Johnston, the first and second ranking American players, to decline the British invitation and Richards and Kinsey accepted.

The American association explained that there was no priority considered in the selection of the team and that their original plans had been made to send Tilden, Johnston, Richards, Kinsey and Frank Hunter. Only Richards and Kinsey found it convenient to accept the invitation.

"We feel that Richards and Kinsey will be a good team to represent the United States because they are good singles and good doubles players and they are of the type that we like to hold up as young American sportsmen," Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the committee that selected the teams, said today.

Will Join Helen

Richards and Kinsey are scheduled to arrive in Paris about May 23 where they will join the American woman's team consisting of Miss Helen Wills, national champion; Miss Mary K. Browne, captain of the team; Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup.

All the players are scheduled to compete in special team matches against French teams, in the French national championships and the British national championships at Wimbledon.

In the team matches against France Richards and Kinsey will have to play against Jean Borotra and Rene Lacoste and the American girls may have to oppose Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis queen, and Mlls. Did Vlasto and Henrietta Contoslavos.

CINCINNATI WINS CLOSE ONE.

Cincinnati, April 17.—Cincinnati took the first game of the season's series with Pittsburgh today, 4 to 3. Donohue held the Pirates in check until the ninth, when they staged a brave but unsuccessful rally. Jakie May relieved Donohue with two on bases and two out in the last frame and disposed of McInnis, a substitute batter, with a meek foul.

BENNING TEAM DEFEATS TECH AT LACROSSE

BY CARTER BARRON.

Fort Benning Saturday afternoon evened the count with Georgia Tech's lacrosse team by taking the second match by a 2 to 1 score after Tech had won Friday, 2-0. The game was a thriller throughout, and although the score was low, both teams threatened all the way.

The Benning officers scored first when Schaefer, playing in home, sent one through the bars a few minutes before the end of play in the first period.

The second period started fast and furious, but with the visitors forcing the attack. About five minutes after the period started a beautiful play gave Carraway a chance to score Benning's final marker.

Tech's lone score came in the last few minutes when Becknell put one through.

Tech's first intercollegiate competition of the season will come next Friday and Saturday, when the Jackets tangle with Georgia in Athens.

WHEN YOU FEEL ROUGH, TRY LACROSSE

Photos by Kenneth Rogers.

GEORGIA WINS TRACK MEET FROM CLEMSON

Athens, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Ten first places and the loss of only one entire event gave the University of Georgia track team a 62 to 50 victory over Clemson here today.

Each of the fourteen events were closely contested.

The performance of Odell and Roy were outstanding features of the meet. Roy tied the southern conference record when he made the 440 yard wash in 50 seconds, crossing the tape ten yards ahead of Kilpatrick, second place man. Odell won fourteen points for his team, capturing one first place and three second places.

Newman for Clemson made the 880 yard run with little difficulty.

One of the prettiest races of the meet, was the 100-yard dash won by Mitchell of Clemson, with Turner, also of Clemson, second. Two Georgia men were close on their heels, but a last minute burst of speed sent them across the tape for the victory.

The summaries:

100 yard dash, Mitchell, Clemson, first; Turner, Clemson, second. Time 10 1-5 seconds.

220-yard dash, Boland, Georgia, first; Mitchell, Clemson, second. Time 23 4-5 seconds.

440-yard dash, Roy, Clemson, first; Kilpatrick, Georgia, second. Time 50 seconds.

880-yard dash, Newman, Clemson, first; Orr, Georgia, second. Time, two minutes, one second.

Mile event, Tate, Georgia, first; McLeod, Clemson, second. Time 4:31 1-2.

Two mile event, Marks, Georgia, first; Cannon, Clemson, second. Time 10:26.

Pole vault, Turner, Georgia, first; Odell, Clemson, second. Height twelve feet.

High jump, Odell, Clemson, first; Kelly, Georgia, second. Height 5 feet, 8 inches.

Broad jump, Curran, Georgia, first; Odell, Clemson second. Distance 19 feet, 10 1-2 inches.

Shot put, Hand, Georgia, first; Odell, Clemson, second. Distance 39 feet.

Javelin throw, Kelly, Georgia, first; Dupre, Clemson, second. Distance, 155 feet, 11 inches.

Discus throw, Huff, Georgia, first; Hand, Georgia, second. Distance 115 feet, 9 1-2 inches.

High hurdles, Morton, Georgia, first; Blakeney, Clemson, second. Time 16 3-5.

Low hurdles, Morton, Georgia, first; Marchbanks, Clemson, second. Time 18 2-5.

KID JOCKEYS WILL BATTLE FOR TURF TITLE

BY FRENCH LANE.

Youthful jockey stars, a group of a half dozen youngsters still in their teens, are going to figure more prominently in American racing this season than ever before.

Two of them, Arthur Mortensen, who led American riders in 1925, and Willie Munden, the leader for 1926, may stage the most exciting battle for the championship the turf in this country has ever known.

Willie Garner, Sam Steele, B. Thompson, and Dickie Johnson are other members of the all-star kid riding cast which is expected to make Sande, Fater, McAtee, Turner, Maiben, Barnes and the other headliners among the veterans take notice before the season ends.

With Powerful Stables.

Mortensen and Munden will figure in the thick of the fight for the championship because they are attached to powerful racing establishments. The former is under contract to W. R. Coe, the New York millionaire sportsman, while Munden's contract is held by Commander J. K. L. Ross, one of the most extensive owners in Canadian racing.

Johnson also will have a royal chance of finishing near the top, because he will be one of the contract riders for the Edward R. Bradley Idle Hour Farm stable. Steele is under contract to G. Frank Croissant, the Chicago turfman, while Garner will ride for Pete Coyne and other owners in Kentucky. Thompson's activities will be confined for the most part to Maryland and New York tracks.

May Clash in Preakness.

The battle between Mortensen and Munden likely will get under way before the Maryland spring season ends. Their first clash may come in the Preakness stakes, in which Munden probably will have a leg up on the Canadian turfman's good 3-year-old Penstick, while Mortensen may be aboard Pompey.

From the Preakness their battle may shift to Kentucky, for should Penstick and Pompey figure conspicuously in the Preakness, both colts will be sent to Churchill Downs for the Derby.

Should they come to the historic race at the Downs they likely will meet up with Johnson, who will be riding the great Bradley 3-year-old, Bubbling Over, or one of his stablemates, and Steele may be found on Roycrofter, which finished second to Carlaris in the Coffroth handicap at Tia Juana.

Risko Looks Good As Heavy Champ

New York, April 17.—The woods are full of folks looking for heavyweight championship possibilities. Jimmie DeForest has one in Johnny Risko, the baker's boy from Cleveland.

Risko has not yet arrived by any means, but he is headed in the right direction and as he is only 22 years of age he has made an excellent start.

Just a plump overgrown baker's boy at present, Johnny has the following assets in his favor:

Shock absorbing ability to withstand punishment.

No imagination but plenty of what are somewhat vulgarly but most appropriately known as "guts."

Abnormal recuperative ability.

Risko has gone the route with Gene Tunney, Jack Delaney, Young Stribling, Paul Berlenbach, Jack Renault, Jack Sharkey, Sully Montgomery and Quintin Romero.

Not that he is the kind of fighter who goes in there to stay the limit. On the contrary, Johnny is a big, awkward boy with a wallop in both hands who keeps things humming, give and take, all the time he is in the ring.

Risko's recent victory over Paul Berlenbach was impressive. He met the slugging light heavyweight champion at his own game and hammered his way to a well-deserved victory, absorbing all the punishment Paul packs in his left fist and knocking the Astoria Assassin down three times in the process.

Max Carey Still Sticks To Old Style Stance

Max Carey, outfielder of the world champion Pittsburgh team, is about the only real choke-hitter left in the major leagues. Now the demand is for bats with small handles and large ends to permit of greater leverage.

Malignant Maguire

BY WILLARD COPE

MALIGNANT strode toward the roped ring like a battery of steam calliopes. The very crunch of his feet was reminiscent of an alleyful, or nearly full, of cobblestones.

Terrible O'Rourke, known far and wide among the boys as the Leaping Muskellonge of the Western Prairie, awaited McGuire's coming as calmly as if he had a boatload of barbed wire liberally commingled with followers of Abd-el-Krim safely installed as a first line of defense.

They met at Dawn . . .

On and on the battle raged. The screaming spectators, the lights, the passage of time, all were forgot in the muffled thud of leathered iron on ironed leather (for each carried a horseshoe for luck), the rasp of resined shoe soles on canvas, the darting figure of the referee and his hoarse commands . . .

And now it was 10 minutes of 12. The noon whistles were the agreed signal for the end of the bout. Ten minutes to go . . .

Malignant's smile of confidence started forth, only to meet the confident smile of the Leaper.

"Checkmated!" he growled.

The crowd howled anew at the subtlety of it all.

And now—now with seven minutes left, Malignant felt misgiving, the foreboding of failure which ever assailed him when success seemed at hand.

"I shall be careful, most careful," he assured himself.

He lunged forward. His mighty right, though skillfully directed, struck the warding glove of the Muskellonge (also known to the trade, and not without reason, as Old Musky) and was deflected, coming to rest lightly upon O'Rourke's protruding jaw.

The light of victory gleamed on the instant in Musky's eyes. He turned, aggrieved, to the referee and stated his case.

"He struck me," he announced plaintively and presented the now slightly glowing jaw for inspection.

The referee, with ominous mien, nodded and sought the eyes of Malignant with a chiding glance.

"Shame! Oh, shame!" cried the indignant onlookers. "We saw him do it."

Several left the hall in protest.

Malignant hung his head in bitter failure.

His boast that he could fight 40 rounds without touching his opponent (hitherto apparently credible) had proved empty.

TEX RICKARD GETS MILLION FOR 16 SHOWS

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, April 17.—Tex Rickard sank $5,000,000 of investors' money in the mammoth structure which he somewhat incongruously calls Madison Square Garden, and the public paid $1,000,000 right back into the box office to see 16 prize fights between December 11 and March 25.

Now the circus, odoriferous and resplendent, is using the arena, and the indoor fight season is in the throes of a temporary hiatus. A six weeks' rest for some of our leading young financiers.

Only one title changed hands during the winter season at Madison Square Garden. That was when Harry Greb was scorched trying to burn a candle at both ends and dropped the middleweight championship to Deacon "Tiger" Flowers, of Georgia, in a most unsatisfactory bout.

Jimmy Goodrich, of Buffalo, who won a decidedly synthetic lightweight title after a so-called "elimination tournament" last year, passed on the crown to his tough little fellow-townsman, Rocky Kansas. Tod Morgan welcomed Mike Ballerino to California with a shower of left hooks and took the Bayonne Italian's junior lightweight championship in a decision bout.

Other champions successfully defended their titles, some by fighting and Dempsey by not fighting. Paul Berlenbach licked Jack Delaney in the new garden curtain-raiser in a mill that was a hair-raiser as well. Then Jack licked Johnny Risko and Risko whipped Berlenbach, so that many fans are predicting that the light-heavyweight championship will change hands next spring.

The best fight of the winter in New York was between Phil McGraw and Stanislaus Loayza, won by the Chilean, and the worst was a toss-up between the Sharkey-Huffman and Terris-Vinez affairs.

The worst decision was when Mike McTigue was declared winner over Tiger Flowers, and the best was when Patsy Haley stopped the Delaney-McTigue fight in the fourth round.

JACK DELANEY MOST POPULAR ATTRACTION

New York, April 17.—Jack Delaney of Bridgeport enjoys two distinctions. The flashing-eyed French-Canadian not only is the most popular boxer of the year with the fans, but thus far is the biggest money maker.

Since he came so close to taking the world's light heavyweight championship away from Paul Berlenbach, the Bridgeport boxer has been busily at work tuning up on heavyweights and others for his next meeting with the title-holder. And while Delaney tunes, he passes the hat, and promoters shower down.

Jack was beaten by a hairline decision when he fought Berlenbach in Madison Square Garden last November. He was promised a return go with the champion in another outdoor arena next spring, it being admitted by all concerned that the Garden was much too small to accommodate all the folks who will want to see the next Delaney-Berlenbach fight.

In the meantime, however, the New York State Athletic Commission promised the winner of the "Tiger" Flowers-Mike McTigue match a title bout with Berlenbach. This made two promises for only one bout, so Delaney and McTigue were matched to see which was the better. It will be recalled that Bridgeport Jack knocked out Mike for the first time in the canny Celt's career.

This constituted Delaney's fourth appearance in the new Madison Square Garden and he has received a total of $65,000 for his bouts there. He also stepped out and beat Romero-Rojas and Joe Lohman in smaller clubs, in which he was the main attraction and for purses which added appreciably to the income tax which Jack will have to pay for 1926.

In addition to the Berlenbach and McTigue fights in the Garden, Delaney met and defeated Young Bob Fitzsimmons and Johnny Risko.

He went down to Philadelphia and picked up more than $4,500 for a brief workout against Maxie Rosenbloom.

It is likely that Delaney's earnings for the year, irrespective of whether he wins the light heavyweight championship from Berlenbach in the spring, will exceed $200,000.

Mutt McGrath Awarded 1925 Veterans' Trophy

Matt McGrath, veteran athlete of the New York A. C., has been awarded the veterans' trophy for 1925 for his achievement in winning two titles in the National A. A. U. track and field meet last July. It is presented by the Veterans' association of the New York A. C. It was won by Jackson V. Scholz in 1924 and Orville Wanzer in 1923. It is awarded for athletic progress during the year.

Jackets Take Final By 12-10 Count; Slam Three Hurlers Hard

Montgomery, Ala., April 17.—(Special.)—Georgia Tech this afternoon killed all hopes for a second successive baseball title which might be nurtured by the University of Alabama when they rambled over the prostrate Crimson warriors to a 12-10 tune.

The game was the fourth and last of the series, in which the Jackets have won three and tied in the other. Tech won the opener in Atlanta on Wednesday and on Thursday Tech errors let the Capstoners come from behind to get an underserved tie. The Jackets continued their victorious march here Friday, and today's affair completed the massacre.

The Jacket maulers hopped on three 'Bama hulers—Hutto, Tubbs and Moore—for 17 bingles. The Crimson stickmen also continued their heavy hitting, finding Florid, Jackson and Snead for a dozen safe ones. Alabama's seven miscues also played a big part in the Tech victory.

Tech started proceedings with two counters in the first frame, and broke loose for four more in the third. Two each in the fourth, sixth, and seventh, completed the damage.

Alabama scored once in the second, twice in the third, three times in the fifth, and four times in the sixth.

Doug Wycoff continued his terrific hitting, getting four hits, while Reeves picked off three, and Moreland, Angley and Crowley two apiece. Barnes headed Alabama's attack with three hits.

MEMBER OF FIRST REDS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Liberty, Ind., April 17.—(AP)—David Smith, 83 years old, who was a member of the first Cincinnati Reds baseball team, died yesterday at his home here. He played with the Reds in 1868, 1869 and 1870, according to family records. His funeral will be held at the residence here Sunday and burial will be at Bevis, Ohio, cemetery.

COLLEGE STARS BREAK WORLD TRACK RECORD

Memorial Stadium, Lawrence, Kan., April 17.—(AP)—One world's record was broken and another tied in a flood of brilliant performances at the Kansas relays here today.

The University of Nebraska's half-mile relay team established a new world mark of 1 26.6 seconds, clipping four-tenths of a second off the former record made by the University of Illinois last year.

Roland Locke, of Nebraska, tied the world's record of 9.6 seconds in the finals of the 100-yard dash, beating Keane, of Creighton university, by little more than a yard. Locke then ran as anchor on the record-breaking Cornhusker relay team.

Charles Hoff, of Norway, world's pole-vault champion, failed in an attempt to break his outdoor record of 13 feet 11 13-16 inches. His best effort was 13 feet 4 inches. The bar was raised to 13 feet 9 inches, but the Norwegian star failed to clear it in three Hoff refused to permit motion picture camera men to record his performance, and it was only after officials of the relays prevailed upon the movie men to take down their machines that he touched his bamboo.

J. LANG WINS TENNIS TITLE AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, N. C., April 17.—(AP)—Jerry Lang, of New York, today won the united north and south men's singles tennis championship here by defeating A. H. Chapin, Jr., Springfield, Mass., 3-6, 2-6, 10-8, 6-4, 6-4.

The new champion made a spectacular fight after losing the first two sets of the five to be played. Lang during the early play appeared slow, allowing many shots to get by without any attempt to return them. In the third set he braced considerably and evened the score at 4 all when he won the game at love.

Chapin and S. Howard Voshell, New York, won the men's doubles honors by downing R. B. Bidwell, Boston, and T. Harada, Japanese star, 6-0, 6-1.

The Japanese player had been unable to compete in the singles because of an injured finger.

Mrs. A. H. Chapin, Jr., Springfield, Mass., won the north and south women's singles championship by defeating Miss Martin Bayard, Short Hills, N. J., 6-3, 7-5.

Miss Bayard, however, paired with Miss Penelope Anderson, of Richmond, Va., won the women's doubles title, 11-9, 6-4, from Mrs. Chapin and Mrs. B. F. Briggs, Pelham, N. Y.

Harvard U. Adopts New Baseball Uniforms

Although the Harvard university baseball uniforms have undergone many minor changes since the start of baseball at the Cambridge institution, the 1926 uniform will carry for the first time in Crimson history the full spelling of Harvard across the breast of the jacket. The previous procedure of allowing some of the players the privilege of wearing the H, others the H 2d, and others their freshmen numerals, will be discontinued.

Georgia Sweeps Series by Beating Michigan, 11 to 1

Waller, in Fine Form, Allows Only 4 Hits; Flowers Hits Homers

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., April 17.—Masterly twirling on the part of Jack Waller, coupled with heavy and timely hitting, enabled the Bulldogs to defeat the Michigan Wolverines here this afternoon, 11-1, giving them a clean sweep of the two-game series.

Waller was in perfect form and on only one occasion was he in danger, and then after the Bulldogs had a safe lead. Nine Michigan batters took three swings and went back to the bench and only one was given a pass to first. Only four scattered hits were registered off his delivery in nine innings and he was a complete puzzle to the Wolverine sluggers.

Jablonowski, twirling ace of the Wolverines took the mound and was greeted by a barrage of hits by the Bulldogs, giving way to Miller in the sixth after he had surrendered ten hits. Miller fared better in his turn, and held the Georgians hitless for the rest of the game.

Georgia started with a rush and scored three runs in the second. After Moore walked and Tully singled, Flowers connected for a circuit and put the Bulldogs three runs to the good.

The Wolverines were the next to score. Their lone score came in the fourth on a base on balls followed by two singles.

Georgia retaliated in their half of the fourth when Tully's single, followed by an infield error and Johnson's double accounted for two runs.

Four runs were added in the fifth when successive singles by Sherlock Moore, and Tully, followed by Flowers' second homer of the game accounted for the scores. Waller also contributed a triple in the same frame, but was left on third.

A base on balls, followed by an error and some excellent base running gave the Bulldogs their final scores in the sixth.

Georgia's hitting improved appreciably over the first game. Tully connected safely three times out of four times to the plate. Flowers got two circuit drives in his four times up and alone accounted for six of the Bulldog runs, scoring three of them himself. Waller connected safely twice out of four attempts, both hits going for three bases.

The next games for the Bulldogs are against the Vanderbilt Commodores here Wednesday and Thursday, after which Georgia will travel to Macon for two games with the Mercer Bears on Friday and Saturday.

EMORY TAKES FIRST HONORS IN TRACK MEET

BY SANDY CLOWER.

Emory University, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Emory's supremacy in the field events outweighed Birmingham-Southern's excellence on the cinder path, and the Gold and Blue walked away with first honors in the dual meet held at Emory Saturday, the final score being 68-49. Emory won only two first places in the track events, the 120 high and the 220 low hurdles, taken by Cliff Hendryx and Milton Stockman, respectively. In the meantime the Alabamans were piling up seven first places, taking the century, the 440, the 220 yard dashes, and the 2 mile, the mile, the half mile runs, as well as the mile relay.

In the field events Emory took a monopoly on first and second places, yielding only one first and one second place to her opponents, the first in the discus, won by Hall with 119 feet, and the second in the shot-put, conceded to Bowden.

Gordon Logan, all-star athlete of Emory, was the outstanding entrant in the contests. He took first place in the broad jump and javelin and second place in high jump and pole vault. His brother, Allen Logan, only 17 years old, ran his family relation a close second by taking one first and one second place, beating his brother out for first in the pole vault and his brother defeating him in the javelin.

For Birmingham-Southern, McCarthy and Wilson were the outstanding point-gainers, the former taking the 100-yard dash in 10.8 seconds, and the 220 in 23.7 seconds, and the latter finishing first in both the mile and two mile.

The running of Wilson drew much comment from the spectators, due to his seeming inexhaustible endurance. At the beginning of the last lap of the two mile, after having been led by Rigdon, of Emory, throughout the race, Wilson came from behind and spurted by his rival and finished with enough wind left to start a cyclone.

The results of the various events are as follows:

110-yard dash: McCarthy (B.-S.), Bell (E). Time, 10.8 seconds.

220-yard dash: McCarthy (B.-S.), Stockman (E). Time, 23.7 seconds.

440-yard dash: Sudderth (B.-S.), Harper (E.). Time, 53.6.

Half-mile run: Tate (B.-S.), Crowe (E.). Time, 2 minutes, 7 seconds.

Mile run: Wilson (B.-S.), Smith (E.). Time, 4 minutes, 56 seconds.

Two-mile run: Wilson (B.-S.), Rigdon (E.). Time, 10 minutes, 58 seconds.

One-mile relay: Birmingham-Southern. Time, 3 minutes, 38 seconds.

Discuss: Hall (B.-S.), 119 feet; Hamrick (E.), 110 feet.

Shot-put: Paulk (E.), 40 feet, 6 inches; Bowden (B.-S.), 39 feet, 4 1-2 inches.

Javelin: G. Logan (E.), 186 feet, 5 inches; A. Logan (E.), 164 feet, 2 inches.

Pole vault: A. Logan (E.), G. Logan. Distance, 10 feet, 6 inches.

High jump: Newsome (E.), G. Logan. Height, 5 feet, 10 inches.

Broad jump: G. Logan (E.), Allen (E.). Distance, 20 feet, 7 inches.

This was the first inter-collegiate meet engaged in by Emory tracksters this season, while the Alabama team had tied with University of Alabama April 3. Coach Harold Drew was in charge of the visiting team and Coach T. S. Arms was the mentor of the Gold and Blue team.

Birmingham-Southern's next meet will be University of Chattanooga at Chattanooga.

INT. WOMEN'S TENNIS MEET IS PLANNED

A women's international team match between the leading French and United States players looms for the stadium courts of the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hills, Long Island, in August, probably just prior to the women's national championships, in which the visiting French women players also would be invited to compete.

Negotiations looking toward such a series of matches are in the hands of the Davis cup committee of the U. S. Lawn Tennis association. During the recent visit of the French men's team, the matter was discussed with Jean Borotra, Rene Lacoste and Jacques Brugnon, and appeared to strike a responsive chord among the famous French stars, who are expected to return to the United States next August as winners of the European zone Davis cup play and prospective challengers for the international team trophy.

Final decision, however, will rest with the French Lawn Tennis federation, and it is possible that a decision will not be made until the American team of men and women players reach Paris late in May for the international team match and the French national championships.

Tech Rats Beat Monroe Aggies

After battling nine frames with the score tied, 7 and 7, the Georgia Tech Rats deefated the Monroe Aggies, 8 to 7, Saturday afternoon at Techwood field. The winning run was chalked up in the tenth inning when the small Yellow Jackets connected with a few fast ones and put one over. Seven errors on the Aggies part helped them lose the game.

The hitting honors were copped by Wilson and Stephens. Each marked up two clean hits each for the day. By winning this game the freshmen made a clean sweep of the two-game series with Red Barron's diamond outfit.

Gun Club Holds Regular Shoot

H. J. Foster and H. McKenzie ran tie for the first place honors in the Atlanta Gun club shoot Saturday afternoon, each turned in a total of 46. Dr. H. N. Alford ran a close second. He turned in a 45, just one point lower than the leaders.

In the doubles McKenzie copped the honors with a 43x50, and Dr. Alford, who ran second in the singles meet, copped the 21-yard handicap shoot with a 24 for his total.

The Atlanta Gun club will hold its annual meeting in room 400, Metropolitan building April 26, at 8 o'clock.

TIGERS BEAT BROWNS, 5-4.

Detroit, April 17.—A whirlwind finish in which the Tigers fell upon Zachary gave Detroit a 5-4 victory over St. Louis in the first game of their series today. The Browns, after trailing three runs behind for six innings, got their eyes on Holloway's twisters and scored two runs in the seventh and eighth innings to threaten hits.

VanGilder, after a bad first inning in which the Tigers scored three runs from as many hits, bore down and allowed only one more hit until he was relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning.

INDIANS BLANK WHITE SOX.

Chicago, April 17.—The Chicago White Sox took their first defeat of the season today when "Lefty" Miller, of the Cleveland Indians shut them out, 2 to 0. The game was a brilliant pitching duel between Miller and Thomas, former Baltimore player, who made his major debut for the Sox.

Miller allowed but three hits and only once did a Chicago player gets as far as third. Thomas also pitched a good game.

Woods and Waters

By BOB BECKER

WITHIN a short time the lakes and streams of the north country will have broken free of the icy hold which winter has successfully maintained for a long period. Then a lot of young mice and muskrats will start swimming around near their aquatic homes, and while on their voyages of discovery a number of them are going to be eaten by hungry fish.

This clash of representatives of the fish and mammal kingdoms is of more than passing interest to the fisherman, as it is another bit of evidence that trout, bass, pike, muskellonge and other fish subsist on a varied diet which includes so many creatures, ranging from unknown larvae of flies to small mammals, that the poor fisherman has his hands full trying to carry around imitations of them in his tackle outfit.

One experienced trout fisherman tells me that he has taken a young mouse in fresh condition from the stomach of a brown trout, which would be evidence that our aristocratic trouts swat the swimming little mammals and find them good eating. We have never seen any trout showing this trend toward a carnivorous diet. But we have caught several large mouth black bass that had lately dined on mice. At the time we were fishing some bass lakes east of the town of Haugen in northern Wisconsin.

Beyond Long lake we had found several small bass in holes in which the large mouths were abundant. One afternoon, just before train time, we sailed forth to catch a few fish to take home. It wasn't much of a trick to snag six or eight fair sized fish in one of the weedy lakes near camp. Upon cleaning the bass we found that two of them had lunched on short-tailed meadow mice of the genus microtus. Those dark gray little fellows, widely distributed throughout the United States and usually abundant wherever they are found, make just a nice mouthful for a bass.

But we are still waiting to pin this kind of evidence on some big, brown, rainbow or brook trout. Strictly speaking, a swimming mouse would be a more natural food for trout than night walkers or garden worms which have been mentioned for centuries as trout baits. The worms are found most abundant away from water, whereas the mouse (microtus) is an inhabitant of moist marshy places and quite at home in the water. However, to date we haven't gotten the goods on Mr. Trout and his mouse appetite (if he has one), but maybe this year we'll have better luck.

BUICK TEAM DEFEATED.

Citizens and Southern bank opened the season by winning from the fast Buick Motor company team. The outstanding feature of the game was the pitching of Bankston for the winners, striking out 16 men and giving up only 4 hits while his teammates were pounding out 8 hits and pushing over as many runs.

PERRIN LEAGUE.

Oakland City won from the Red Seal Shoe Co., 9 to 3, in a game of baseball that was close until the seventh inning Saturday. Oakland led by scoring two runs in the first and one in the second but the shoesters caught them in the sixth. Three runs in the seventh gave the winners a comfortable lead and they were never headed after that. Crider and Pentecost knocked triples, and Pentecost starred with the bat for Red Seal by getting three hits out of four times up. D. Morris, of Oakland, got four out of four, and H. Morris made it two out of two. Oakland made only one error, which is fine for this time of year. Crider and McElroy both pitched well, the latter allowing only one hit in three innings.

ATLANTA LEAGUE

The Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills opened the season by winning a game, 19 to 3, from the Post Office. They were playing jam-up ball at the start and scored 9 runs in the first two innings. The pitching of Wood for Fulton Bag was the feature of the game. He sent 16 back to the bench by the strikeout route and scored three runs in seven innings. In the seventh Shaw relieved him on the mound.

A crowd of about 2,000 fans saw the opening game, and they saw what ought to be a strikeout record for the season established. Sixteen whiffs in 7 innings will not soon be equaled.

The fielding of the Post Office team was poor. Ten errors were made by the losers, and the winners made three, which is more than they will make when they get to playing together better.

PERRIN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The hard slugging of the Orchard Knob team won an easy game from the Calvary Methodist team at the Orchard Knob diamond Saturday, 19-3. Every man but one on the winning team got hit and Brown and Appling led with 4 and 3 respectively. Moore, Milton and McRae each scored three runs. Parker knocked a home run for the longest hit of the day, and Melton knocked two three-baggers. The Orchard Knob team looks good to cop the Perrin Sunday school pennant if some other team doesn't subdue their string of agate murderers.

WATSON DEVICE ESSENTIAL NOW

How the Watson stabilator, a device originally designed to control the recoil of automobile springs, came to be recognized by some of the leading automobile manufacturers as an indispensable adjunct to comfortable riding and has been adopted by a lengthy list of fine motor cars, is told by F. L. Brandes, manager of Battery Sales company of Atlanta, distributors for the John Warren Watson company, manufacturers of the device.

Although the Watson stabilator has been on the market only four years, the company's sales for 1925 were five times those for 1924, Brandes declared, and during the last year it was adopted as standard equipment of the following cars: Chrysler six, Willys-Knight six, Jordan Great Line eight, Stutz and Cadillac. For some time it also has been standard on the Franklin, Packard straight eight, Dussonberg straight eight, Isotta Fraschini straight eight and Dupont cars.

At the New York automobile salon, November, 1925, 98 per cent of the cars exhibited were equipped with recoil control, and 36 per cent of them with Watson stabilators, according to Brandes.

Recognized Year Ago.

Realization of the full value of the discovery came only a year ago, or three years after it had been designed.

"The inventor's attention was called to the fact that invalids, nervous persons and even persons of normal health who, while easily fatigued by riding in an ordinary car, could travel long distances in cars equipped with his stabilator without feeling ill effects," Brandes said.

"At first this was taken by him as a matter of course, and was thought to be due to the decreased jostling and tossing of these riders. Subsequent investigation, however, revealed a psychological factor as potent as the mechanical.

"Watson discovered that the majority of motorists who went out for a ride, supposedly to relax their muscles and ease their nerves, sat in their cars in a high state of tension. They were unable to relax, because their whole experience in motor cars had taught them to be on guard against the sudden movements of the car seat.

Recoil Checked.

"Unlike a chair at home, it was not stable, but always had a certain up-and-down movement, which, at times became violent. This caused the passengers unconsciously to hold their muscles tense, to brace their feet, perhaps to hold on with their hands, and to keep in a state of tenseness even the muscles of the body not directly concerned with their organs of locomotion.

"Watson then concluded that it was this muscular tenseness produced by the jostling and tossing of the car that was the fundamental cause of passengers' fatigue. By checking the recoil action of the springs, Watson not only effected a considerable saving in the mechanism of the automobile, but a far greater saving on the health and comfort of the passengers."

Martin-Nash Maintains Huge Organization For Service to Nash-Ajax Owners

It is an axiom with the Martin-Nash organization that the Nash-Ajax owner must be satisfied. For this reason an organization of about 60 people is maintained by Martin-Nash for service purposes only. This organization is grouped under three main heads. The service department, the spare parts department, the shop department.

At the head of this little army which serves Nash-Ajax owners is H. D. Melvin, its manager. Eddie Thompson is in charge of the detail service department. W. P. Wilkins is in charge of the spare parts department, of which a stock valued at more than $77,000 is maintained, and Howard Thompson is shop foreman in charge of a corps of trouble shooters.

Nash-Ajax owners will see from the picture that there is plenty of help available when its needed.

Make What the Public Wants Says Thomas Edison

Thomas Edison, the inventor and manufacturer, once gave the following rule on how to give best value in business.

"If I were a manufacturer, I should go over my lines to discover what the public most wanted out of what I was already making.

"If I were making five styles and found that 75 per cent of my business was done in one style (and this is usually the case), then I should manufacture two styles, certainly not more than three, and should turn my attention to making my selling price the other fellow's cost."

To which is added by Aaron DeRoy, Hudson-Essex distributor:

"Hudson-Essex adopted and acted on this policy long before Edison phrased it. Efforts are concentrated on the fewest number of body types in the industry. The public has followed with great interest the wonderful economies which this specialization (combined with big volume) has brought about."

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW SELECTS PIERCE-ARROW

The Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, statesman, financier and world-renowned after-dinner speaker, has just taken delivery of his second Pierce-Arrow car, which was sold to him by the Harrolds Motor Car company, Pierce-Arrow's New York distributors. Mr. Depew's car is a series 33, Pierce-Arrow's larger car, with an inclosed drive limousine body. He formerly owned another series 33 inclosed drive limousine which was turned in after years of service.

The engine in Mr. Depew's car is the famous Pierce-Arrow dual valve, developing more than 100 horsepower. The body is so constructed that it serves as either a formal chauffeur-driven limousine or a companionable sedan. A full width glass partition between the front and rear seats converts this car from one type to the other with a few turns of a handle.

The inclosed drive limousine purchased by Mr. Depew is finished in carriage part lake, a rich and dignified shade of red, with maroon broadcloth upholstery. The lights on the step, tonneau and rear quarter are illuminated when the tonneau doors are opened.

CHAMPIONS HANG UP 12 WORLD RECORDS

The fastest pace ever traveled by human beings on land climaxed the final performance of 122 cubic inch racing cars on the country's speedways at Culver City, Calif., March 21. Twelve world records for the various calculated distances from 5 to 250 miles were officially broken. Race observers of the American Automobile association declared it the most remarkable race yet conducted.

"We naturally take particular pride in the fact that Champion spark plugs were in each of the thre cars that broke all existing records," says R. A. Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug company. "Though Champions have held practically every world record for the last four years, and now hold them all, their performance in this final event for the 122 cubic inch cars affords us extreme pleasure."

World records were broken by Leon Duray, Dave Lewis and Bennett Hill, each driving Miller Specials. Hill was the eventual winner, averaging the tremendous speed of 131.295 miles an hour, according to rechecks, breaking the previous 250-mile world record of 129.531, established by Peter de Paolo at Miami, February 22. Every car to finish save one used Champions and went through the entire race without change, as usual. Hill broke the first record, covering the original five miles at 137.931 miles an hour. Duray, passing him, averaged 136.054 in the first 10 miles—another new mark.

Aside from eclipsing every world figure from 5 to 250 miles, the race's outstanding feature was the performance of Lewis' front drive Miller. It made 40 consecutive miles at an average of 136 miles an hour, another world record. Lewis' car was forced out at the end of the 117th mile with a broken valve spring, after he had driven one of the most masterful races, and the fastest, yet recorded.

Among congratulatory telegrams received by the Champion company because of the performance of its spark plugs was one from Hill himself, in which he declared that "it is almost unnecessary to say that Champion plugs did their stuff, as usual, as only Champions can." Another was from Harry Miller, veteran designer of race cars, whose Miller Specials have practically ruled the nation's speedways for four consecutive years. Reciting the list of 12 world records broken by his cars, all of them powered by Champions, Miller wired that "Champion spark plugs were used in establishing all these records, which verifies our utmost confidence in your product."

The race marked the return to the roaring speedway ovals of Eddie Hearne, former A. A. A. champion, and the first absence of Tommy Milton, another veteran, who recently announced his retirement. Hearne piloted hi scar into third place.

Other previous and new world records now are:

Old.

Miles.	Speed.
25 De Paolo	135
50 Hartz	135.23
100 Cooper	131.54
150 Devore	131.008
200 Devore	131.408
250 De Paolo	129.531

New.

Miles.	Speed.
25 Duray	136.157
50 Lewis	135.798
100 Lewis	133.709
150 Hill	131.54
200 Hill	131.646
250 Hill	131.295

Because of the advent of the little 91 1-2 cubic inch cars at Indianapolis, Memorial day, the records established at Culver City are expected by race drivers to withstand all onslaughts for some time.

Studebaker Coach for New Albany Hotel

This new 12-passenger Studebaker coach has just been delivered to the New Albany hotel through the Albany agency of the Yarbrough Motor company. The above shows Rush Moore, manager Yarbrough's branch completing this delivery with E. B. Young, Sr., president of the New Albany hotel.

HALF MILLION PUT IN F. B. STEARNS PLANT

An announcement just released by the management of the F. B. Stearns company of Cleveland, which forecasts a material increase in production for 1926, indicates that more than $500,000 has been expended in factory improvements since the new management took charge three months ago.

This improvement program includes the installations of many thousands of dollars' worth of the most modern production machinery within the factory, in addition to the remodelling of many factory offices while several important additions have been made to the executive personnel of the factory.

It is likewise definitely established by this announcement that the F. B. Stearns company will continue to manufacture only passenger automobiles of highest quality upon the basis established in the new Stearns policy of "Quality First—Price Last."

The announcement of increased mechanical efficiency in the F. B. Stearns factory follows closely on the heels of a statement by President H. J. Leonard of an extensive expansion of Stearns' dealer representation throughout the United States. Officials indicate that this large expenditure is but part of a comprehensive program to increase Stearns' activities in this country, which, together with the new executives recently added, will make Stearns a competitor in its particular field of high quality cars.

In the new appointments, John T. Trumble, former General Motors executive, is named chief engineer and designer for the F. B. Stearns company. F. T. Larson, formerly with the Hudson and Chrysler Motor Car companies in a sales executive position, is general sales manager of the Cleveland company. O. T. Lawson, well-known in the production end of the automotive industry, is the new manager of the production and purchasing division of the F. B. Stearns company.

That the F. B. Stearns company's sales activities are constantly mounting is indicated in the announcement dealing with sales and production figures of the company. It is understood that a large number of unfilled orders are on hand at the factory, which represent more than a month's normal production capacity. With the Stearns distributor at Boston reporting the greatest number of sales at the recent automobile show in that city, and like reports of stimulated business coming into the factory from all sections of the country, Stearns officials point out that 1926 will doubtlessly be the geratest year in the company's history. It is reported that the business of the first three months of 1926 represents an increase of more than 80 per cent over the same period of 1925.

Why have OAKLAND Sales Doubled ?

All America has bestowed upon the Oakland Six the one sure mark of preference—ever-growing demand. State after state has favored the car so strongly that sales have doubled in the past six months.

The reasons for this unprecedented favor will be readily apparent to anyone who tests Oakland Six abilities.

The car has power for any hill you will encounter—more speed than you will care to use—acceleration that excites envy—smoothness of performance unmatched in its field—and, better still, a rugged endurance that assures years of service.

Moreover, Oakland's amazing prices—$70 to $350 lower—single out the Oakland Six as the unequalled motor car investment of the year.

Women who have been frightened

WOMEN who have been frightened while driving a car with bulky wooden corner posts that hide an approaching car only two seconds away, may feel perfectly safe in the new Jordan Observation Sedan.

The new all-steel body makes you feel as if you were riding in an observation car. That's vision.

Besides, it is quiet just as a steel Pullman is more quiet than the old wooden kind. And it's safe.

New style—new comfort—new economy—great simplicity—the first quality light eight in the market—a new leader among motor cars.

People once thought eights were complicated—but not the Line Eight. There is nothing complicated, nothing extravagant about it. It is just as simple, but much smoother and more powerful than the six.

Vision—safety—a wonderful feeling of security—smooth flowing power with a great reserve. Those are the things that experienced motorists demand.

BRAKES AND BREAKS

BY H. M'COY VAN DEVENDER,
Automobile Editor.

March saw a new high delivery record set by the Buick Motor company for the current series. In this month 25,304 cars went into the hands of owners. This is the largest month in deliveries since the present models were introduced last August, and closely parallels shipments for the same period.

March shipments of 25,304 cars broke all previous records, according to factory announcement. It is pointed out also that deliveries and shipments for April are almost the same. This bears out Sales Manager E. T. Strong's recent statement that Buick dealers throughout the country have been unable to stock many cars for the usual spring demand.

One of the problems of automobile manufacturers has been a cooling system that permits a motor to operate as near maximum efficiency as possible under all driving conditions.

Motors overheat from excessive carbon. Cylinders that overheat cause piston and cylinder wear that results in oil pumping and foul spark plugs, missing and leaky valves. Loss of power and impaired operating efficiency are the immediate results and the life of the motor is much shortened.

Because temperatures, resulting from combustion, increase toward the rear of the motor, due to less cool air coming in contact with that part of the motor, the last cylinder in the block gets hottest and makes it difficult to maintain uniform cylinder heat.

Most manufacturers realizi : this obstacle are now building their motors with the water pump located in the rear of the motor, instead of in front. Thus cool water from the radiator is delivered, when coldest, direct to the hottest cylinder. The result is more nearly uniform cylinder temperature.

With the month over half gone, the sales organization of F. E. Maffett, Inc., Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers at 167 West Peachtree, bid fair to eclipse the record achieved in March. Particularly is this fact evidenced in the sale of used cars for in no past period of this company's history has there been such a turnover in this vital department. This condition has in turn reflected itself in appraisal figures and the result of these combined is a sales figure which will command attention in any section of the country.

Bob Martin is certainly putting Martin Nash all over the map in this section.

So far this year their delivery of Nash automobiles is 100 per cent gain over the same period of 1925. This is a record, of course, but that's the fine thing about it, for if memory serves me right, his first three months of 1925 were also record-breakers over any year in the past.

We want to welcome to automobile row the new Paige-Jewett sales company, who recently purchased the franchise of T. D. Southworth, who has been local distributor here for several years.

J. L. Morrison, president, and his son, T. V. Morrison, vice president, while new in the automobile business are well-known business men of Atlanta.

They have wisely surrounded themselves with men of long automobile experience and past proven ability in both sales and service departments.

The Darnall Motor company, another new distributor in this section, have made for themselves a place among the leaders.

Under the direction of George M. Darnall, this company has grown in leaps and bounds until it has been found necessary to open a branch house in Macon, Ga., to help meet the ever-increasing demand for the sturdy Oakland and Pontiac cars they represent.

Last week many people saw Buick's "Round the World" automobile while on its two-day visit to Atlanta. This car actually circled the globe and in so doing hung up a record for other motor-driven vehicles to shoot at.

This feat was accomplished without a permanent driver, Buick dealers in every locality delivering it to one another.

This car is now on its way to the Smithsonian institute, to be placed there as the first car to make a complete "Round the World" trip. It was my pleasure to ride in this car with the speedometer over the 51,000-mile mark, having been driven by 350 different drivers and still running like a top.

When Maffett gives a party he gives it right.

F. E. Maffett, Inc., went to the opening baseball game. This outing given his employees was one way Mr. Maffett showed his appreciation for the biggest month his company has ever had. His party of 250 people, not counting the jazz band for their special entertainment, was an outstanding group in Atlanta's big "Fan day."

Some time ago the Goldsmith-Becker company, discontinued floor days. Of course, we don't doubt that Mr. Goldsmith and Mr. Becker are always right in everything they see fit to do for the betterment of the business; but it's been a source of considerable worry to us ever since. We simply must get it off our chest. In so doing what provisions have they made for Walter Dunn and his sardine can?

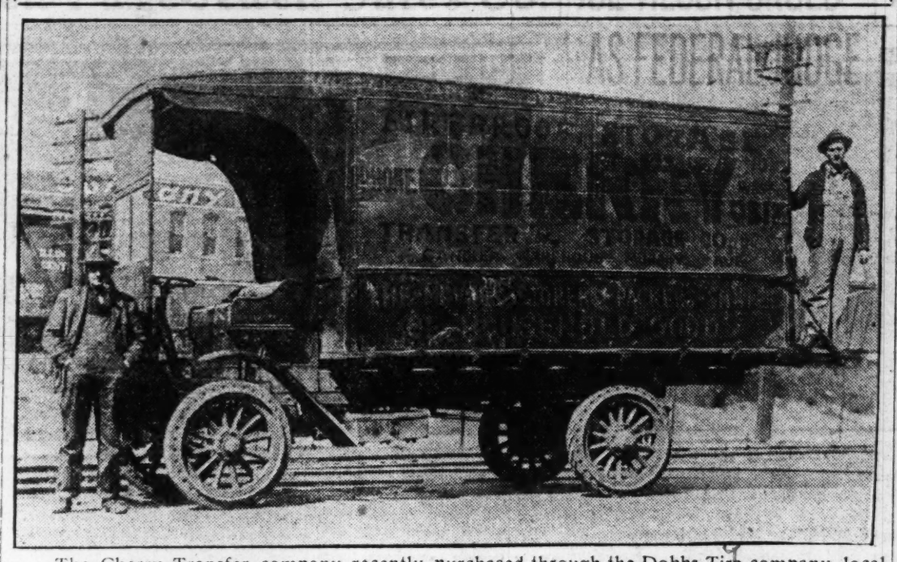

NEGRO BUSINESS LEADERS CONVENE HERE ON TUESDAY

A negro business convention convenes in this city Tuesday night and will continue each night through Friday night, closing at the Congregational church Sunday night. "The story of what the negro has done and is now doing along business lines by his own strenuous efforts and the encouragement of his friends," will be the keynote of of the sessions. Men in charge of this program are Dr. J. W. E. Linder, John S. Allen, Rev. J. A. Stroud, Dr. S. A. Peters and Professor Lucious Smith.

Dr. Alvin Locke, of Washington, D. C., regarded as a conservative leader of his race, speaks on "The Present and Future of the Negro." Colonel Arthur W. Mitchell, a negro lawyer of Washington, will speak at the Colored Congregational church on "The Relation of the Church and Negro Business."

"Large congregations are expected, for the reason that the negroes of the south realize the wonderful improvement that is being made among them," an announcement of the meeting said.

REGISTRATION BOOKS WILL CLOSE ON MAY 3

State and county registration books for the general election on November 3 are open in the office of W. S. Richardson, Fulton county registrar, and will close on May 3, according to an announcement Saturday.

Under the law, registration books shall close six months before the general election. The state primary will be held on September 8, and everyone desiring to vote in this election must register by May 3. After this date those who have not paid their 1925 state and county taxes will be stricken from the registration list, according to Mr. Richardson.

THOMASVILLE PLANS FOR FORESTRY MEET

Thomasville, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Much interest among those identified with forestry in Georgia is anticipated in the annual convention of the Georgia Forestry association which is to be held at Thomasville for two days, April 28-29. H. L. Kayton, of Savannah, president of the association, will preside at the sessions.

Among officials in forestry in Georgia who will attend the convention, besides President Kayton, are Bonnell H. Stone, of Blairsville, secretary; Frank Reynolds, of Atlanta, treasurer; C. B. Harmon, vice president, of Atlanta, and State Forester B. F. Luffburrow.

Among the chief topics to be discussed will be forestry in the state generally; continuous production of naval stores; pine for pulpwood; research and pine institute; woods burning in relation to grazing; birds and wild animals in relation to forestry; Georgia trees; woman's part in forestry; reforestation in Georgia; use of lumber in buildings; futility of wood burning as a pest destroyer, and various other questions.

Student Government Association Elects Miss Bruce President

Macon, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Miss Mildred Bruce, of the Florida State College for Women, was elected president of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government at the closing session here today. The next meeing will be held in April at Montevallo, Ala.

Other officers elected are Miss Mary Ellen Spinks, Alabama college, vice president; Miss Virginia Vincent, State Teachers' college, Farmville, Va., secretary; Miss Jocelyn Watson, of Sweetbriar, treasurer; Miss Virginia Smith, William and Mary, graduate adviser.

Fifty-one colleges were represented at the meeting.

R. E. HARVEY IS HEAD OF FINANCE OFFICERS

Lieutenant Colonel R. E. Harvey, vice president of the Atlanta Trust company, was elected president of the newly organized finance chapter of the Reserve Officers' association, according to an announcement made public Saturday by the headquarters of the fourth corps area of the army.

Other officers named were Major M. G. Johnston, vice president; Captain George P. Teisler, secretary, and Captain William L. Bates, treasurer.

Formation of the finance chapter came following a meeting of the reserve officers of the finance department held Friday at which Major Kenzie L. Walker, chief of finance of the army, and Colonel P. L. Smith, his executive officer, were guests of honor. Addresses were delivered by General Walker and Lieutenant Colonel Harvey.

VOLUNTEER LEADER TO ARRIVE TODAY ON LECTURE TOUR

General Ballington Booth, commander of the Volunteers of America, with headquarters in New York, N. Y., will arrive in Atlanta early today to deliver a series of addresses. He is the husband of Mrs. Maude Booth, who founded the Volunteers of America Prison league, and is known as the "little mother" to more than 100,000 prisoners. Mrs. Booth is under care of physicians and did not accompany her husband.

General Booth will speak to prisoners at federal prison today at 9 o'clock and tonight at 7:30 o'clock he will speak at St. Paul Methodist church. The public is invited.

As an evangelist he is considered one of the foremost religious leaders in the country. He is also a Masonic leader.

Together with Colonel A. C. Wright of the southern regimental officers' council, he will speak at a meeting Monday at the Y. M. C. A. on Luckie street. Officers from Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Texas will attend.

POPE PIUS PRAISES MEXICAN CATHOLIC CLERGY AND LAITY

Mexico City, April 17.—(AP)—The Mexican archbishopric today published an apostolic letter from Pope Pius to the Mexican Catholics, in which the pontiff expresses regret over the situation in Mexico and praises the people and clergy for their fidelity to the church.

The letter instructs the clergy and Catholic society diligently to avoid political participation, and expresses hope for a peaceful and harmonious settlement of the Mexican problems through religious and spiritual activities.

FORBES IS SUED FOR $10,000 FINE IMPOSED BY U. S.

Chicago, April 17.—(AP)—Colonel Charles R. Forbes and his bondsmen were sued in federal circuit court today for a $10,000 fine, which the government alleges that Forbes, serving a two years' term at Leavenworth penitentiary, has refused to pay.

The suit was brought by Assistant United States District Attorney John Elliott Byrne, who names the Hartford Accident and Indemnity company as a co-defendant with the former head of the veterans' bureau, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the government.

The suit sia civil action, and one not often resorted to by the government.

OAKLAND BUILDING NEW FACTORY UNIT

Rapid progress is being made by the Oakland Motor Car company in the construction of the new factory addition which is to house the sheet metal stamping and rear axle housing departments.

This new factory addition, with machinery, will cost three-quarters of a million dollars, according to A. J. Brandt, vice president and works manager, and will be in operation the first week in June. Already the steel frame is up and walls, roof and flooring are partially completed. Approximately 400 more men will be employed in the new departments.

Due to the tremendous production required on both the Oakland and Pontiac Sixes, it was decided to take over the making of all sheet metal stampings, such as fenders, running board aprons, running board shields, hoods, gas tanks, oil pans, radiator shells, etc., for greater economy, greater flexibility in the control of production. All rear axle housings for the Oakland Six will also be turned out in the new building.

The new addition is of steel and brick construction, part of it one story and part of it two-story and will give an increased floor area of approximately 55,000 square feet.

The building will be divided into three sections, a 326 by 70 feet one larger presses, a 326 by 20 feet one story sheet metal storage section, and a two story 220 by 80 foot section for light presses and stamping assembly.

'RUSHING' THEATER COSTS LAFAYETTE STUDENTS FINES

Easton, Pa., April 17.—(AP)—Sixteen Lafayette college students today were fined $27.50 each and costs on a nuisance charge and held under $300 bail each for a hearing next Wednesday on a charge of inciting to riot. The charges arose from the "rushing" of the new State theater during a clash between two classes of the college. Dean Prentice, of the college faculty, entered bail for each of the students.

Sixty students crowded into a box built to accommodate ten persons and damaged the draperies that cost $4,000 when hung just a few weeks ago.

A conviction on the charge of inciting to riot would mean a maximum sentence of one year in jail, and a fine of $1,000, Magistrate Chidsly informed the sixteen arraigned.

Woman Explains Deleting Letter Sent by Walker

Quincy, Ill., April 17.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary McAdams, nominated last Tuesday for the legislature, today declared that she did not publish the paragraph of Governor Clifford Walker's letter relating to the reported Coggeshall-McClelland confession because "it was an injustice to the boys."

Speaking of the letter of Governor Walker regarding her omission of that particular paragraph, Mrs. McAdams said:

"I did not publish that paragraph in the governor's letter referring to the alleged confession because of boys, Coggeshall and McClelland, never confessed. Those boys were innocent. My only object in not publishing that part of the letter was because it was an injustice to the boys.

"I did not think it fair to use that statement after the boys were dead and could not defend themselves and also because the governor did not give the name of the social worker or the name of the defense lawyer whom the governor says knew of the confession."

Mrs. McAdams also asserted that in her telegram she did not say that one of the stars should be taken off the flag but suggested that the star be removed.

Referring to the request for an apology made by Governor Walker she said she wrote him April 9 that "first of all let me say that what I have said, I have said, and I have no apology to make or words to retract."

Ted Coggeshall, Clayton, Ill., and Floyd McClelland, Brocton, N. Y., were electrocuted March 25 at Milledgeville, Ga., for murder.

TO PLAN ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE OUTING

Special meeting of the board of directors of the Atlanta Automobile association will be held the coming Thursday, Capital City Club, noonday luncheon, to consider specially plans for the summer outing of the association that is scheduled for the early part of June. These summer outings are always one of the real events of the association, because all of the members and employees and their wives and children usually attend. One of the nearby country clubs will undoubtedly be chosen for the outing. The programs committee, having the matter in charge, have already outlined a number of interesting features for the program, including a long list of athletic and other events in the afternoon, during which a long list of prizes will be awarded the winners; also the annual golf tournament of the association in the afternoon, followed in the evening by a dinner, entertainment and dance.

The board will also devote special attention to organizing the automotive industry of the state to take a hand in the coming primary election in September, for senators and representatives in the Georgia legislature. Some very important bills will undoubtedly be introduced at the June, 1927, session of the Georgia legislature, having a direct bearing upon the interests of the automotive industry and users of motor cars. It is the purpose of the Atlanta Automobile association to take the lead in protecting the automotive industry and motor car users against dangerous, destructive and injurious legislation at the 1927 session.

BRITAIN AND ITALY REACH AGREEMENT OVER ABYSSINIA

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, April 17.—The British foreign office admitted today an agreement with Italy dividing Abyssinia into spheres of influence as reported exclusively by the Tribune Press Service a few days ago. The object of the agreement, from the British viewpoint, is to secure the right to use the water from Lake Tana for irrigation of the new cotton lands in the Soudan.

A Success from Coast to Coast!

Super-efficiency challenging all cars

Results achieved in actual competitive tests that prove the new "70" Willys-Knight Six outperforms anything ever built of its size or type or class!

Naturally, unparalleled enthusiasm has greeted it. Inevitably, tremendous sales totals have been registered whenever and wherever it has been shown!

Amazing Power Development

This new "70" Six applies the principles of high speed engine construction to the Knight Sleeve-Valve motor with startling results. With a 2 15/16-inch bore and a 4 3/8-inch stroke this new Sleeve-Valve Six engine delivers greater power per cubic inch of piston displacement throughout its complete range, than any stock American motor-car engine built today. Speed capacity is well in excess of 60 miles an hour; acceleration is positively startling, and its power on hills is a revelation.

Positive mechanical 4-wheel brakes—easiest steering

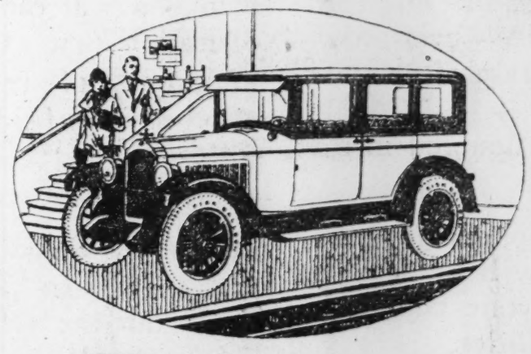

This new "70" Willys-Knight Six is equipped with absolutely positive mechanical four-wheel brakes—the perfected braking system of the finest, and most advanced cars of Europe. . . . The steering facility of this phenomenal car is literally amazing. Eight Timken bearings cradle its steering mechanism with the utmost absence of friction.

STEEL IN CADILLACS MUST REACH STANDARD

Cleanliness in steel is as necessary to the dependability of a motor car as sterilization is to surgery. To remove microscopic impurities from steel is just as important as to destroy invisible microbes on a surgeon's knife.

The comparison is made by L. A. Danse, metallurgist, of the Cadillac Motor Car company, who cites a number of striking examples of recent progress in the choice and improvement of metals used in highly-stressed parts of motor cars. New discoveries have both increased dependability and lowered costs.

By setting up a standard of microscopic purity in steel, Cadillac engineers were able to explode the theory of crystallization and breakage which was used in the earlier years of industry to explain the failure of parts. Laboratory studies with powerful microscopes and with microscopic photography proved that the trouble was not crystallization but "fatigue," usually due to some kind of impurity in the metal. The engineers believed that if the steel was made clean enough these failures would be eliminated. They established entirely new standards for clean steel. Steel men from the mills were invited. Many others came of their own accord and asked for reports and photographs of the Cadillac findings. Metal was followed back to the steel mills, where it was first poured into ingots, and changes were made in methods there.

Today in the Cadillac laboratories samples of steel for highly-stressed parts are most minutely examined under the microscope for inclusions of dirt. It takes at least 20 minutes to examine a sample of the size of a 5-cent piece.

Chromium molybdenum steel, now used in the connecting rods by Cadillac and some other manufacturers, has been a tremendous improvement. Former practice was to use high-grade electric furnace steel, which proved very satisfactory. The new steel, however, is generally considered five or six times as good as the former.

In the manufacture of studs and bolts Cadillac was formerly using two grades of steel. In a tensile, or pulling, test one of these metals showed minimum elastic limit of 90,000 pounds per square inch of cross-sectional area; the other 105,000 pounds per square inch. A new steel has been adopted which shows a minimum tensile strength of over 105,000 pounds. It is easier to get. It is more quickly available. It machines more easily. It is stronger and stands more fatigue. Withal it is lower in cost.

In highly-stressed parts in which the surface is subject to wear or abrasion, a special nickel steel is used which can be carburized. Carburizing is a process by which the surface, or skin, of the metal can be given an intense hardness to resist wear, while the body of the metal remains soft and ductile, so that it will resist shock and stresses of all kinds.

FREE LOVE CULT LEADER READING HIS BIBLE IN JAIL

Allentown, Pa., April 17.—Charles Garland, the wealthy advocate of free love, started his jail term by reading the Bible. He was sentenced yesterday to sever sixty days and pay a fine of $500 for commission of adultery.

"Of course, he has other books," said the warden today, "but I know he reads the Bible, because I saw him do so. He has other books but the Bible seems to come first."

JOE TILSON URGED AS FEDERAL JUDGE

BY THOMAS STOKES.

Washington, April 17.—(Special.) Appointment of Joe Tilson, Atlanta lawyer, as judge of the new federal judicial district sought for Georgia, is being urged upon Attorney General Sargent and other administration leaders by a delegation of Georgia republicans, now here headed by Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, new state chairman.

The request for the appointment of Tilson comes just on the eve of scheduled consideration by the house of the Larsen bill for creation of a new middle district in the state. The bill has a place on the unanimous consent calendar for Monday, though it may not be reached at that time. If it is not, members of the Georgia delegation will seek a special rule in an effort to have the measure brought up some time during next week.

The Georgia republicans are solidly behind Tilson's candidacy, according to members of the delegation here, which will have much weight toward securing his nomination for the post.

The fact that Tilson did not reside within the boundaries fixed for the proposed new middle district was said to be a factor in the attitude of the administration for a "floating judge" instead of a new district, which has recently been modified; however, Sargent now taking the position that he is agreeable to whatever the house judiciary committee decides. The judiciary committee has reported to the house the bill providing for creation of an additional district.

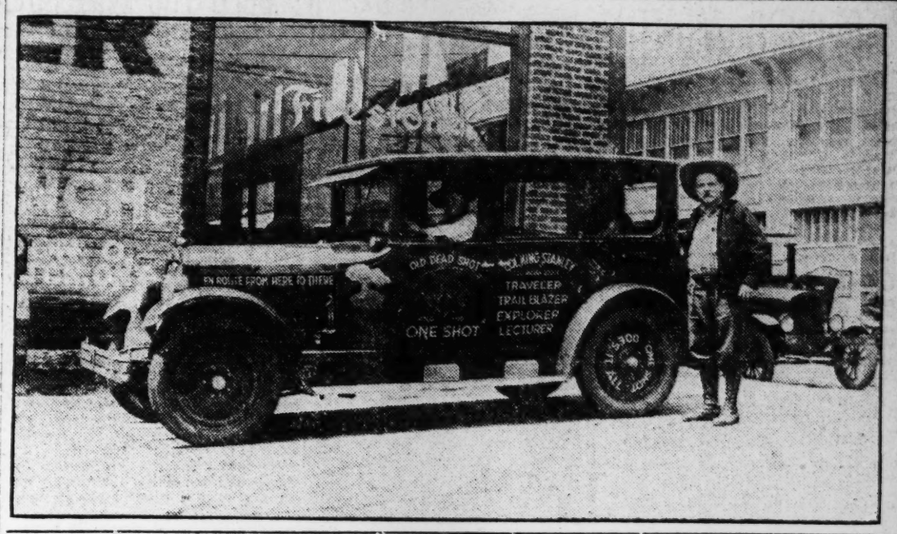

Representative Lankford, who has opposed the bill as it now stands, has announced that he will not carry his fight to the floor, but will seek the change he desires in the senate, or after the bill goes to conference. He favors inclusion of the Valdosta division in the new middle district. In the bill, it is placed in the southern district.

The delegation of Georgia republicans here which also included A. F. Anderson, of Millen, vice chairman of the state committee, and Ben Davis, negro republican national committeeman, said that the differences in the Georgia organization had now been straightened out.

After their arrival here, they called on Postmaster General New and the first postmaster nominations for several months were sent up Friday after their visit, indicating that the Georgia organization is on good terms with the administration.

They also called at other departments, including the department of justice.

World Tourer Uses Firestone Gum-Dipped Balloons

"American-made tires are far superior to those of other countries," according to Colonel King Stanley during his visit in Atlanta the past week. Colonel Stanley says the Firestone gum-dipped balloons seen on his car have now run 26,000 miles. Colonel Stanley is a famous Indian fighter, government scout and archeologist, and has visited practically every country on the globe.

Americus Chautauqua.

Americus, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—The annual session of Redpath chautauqua held in Americus will open Tuesday. Five days of educational attractions are scheduled, and much interest is being manifest in the programs.

The tent will be located on the Calloway lot on Jackson street.

CAR DEMAND TO BE GREATER, SAYS JORDAN

According to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company, five factors are going to make for good business in the automobile industry during the next 90 days.

1. The reaction which has taken place during the past few weeks in the stock market has apparently had a very healthy effect on manufacturers generally in all lines, with a result that inventories will be carefully watched, production kept in steady step with sales and the danger of overproduction avoided in all lines.

2. General business conditions, fundamentally, are very satisfactory, even more so than they were at this time last year.

3. Check up the sales of Dodge, General Motors and other leading automobile manufacturers against the same period of last year and it will be seen that the automobile industry is still a long way from the saturation point.

4. Retail sales of automobiles throughout the country are showing a steady increase each week and with spring weather just around the corner, it will soon become apparent that the demand for automobiles is greater than ever.

NEALS LANDING BRIDGE SOUGHT IN HOUSE BILL

NEW CHURCH BUILDING WILL BE DEDICATED

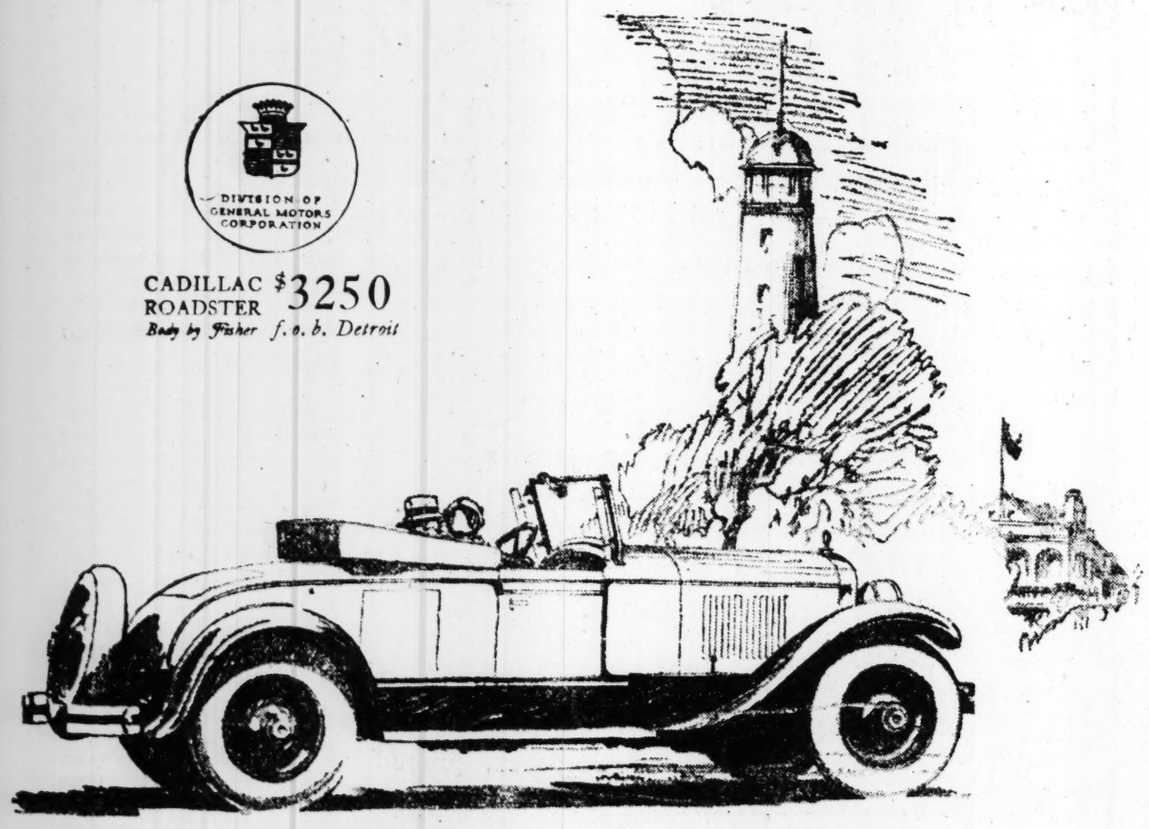

Services to be held at noon next Tuesday, when the first brick will be laid in the new building of the Haygood Memorial Methodist church, at Lanier and Highland avenue, will be largely attended and an elaborate program of entertainment and services is being planned.

The first brick will be laid by Mrs. Charles E. Boynton, Sr., the second by N. C. McPherson. The ceremonies will be opened by prayer followed by singing and an address by the pastor, Rev. Dr. T. R. Kendall.

Dr. Kndall is keenly enthusiastic over the progress being made toward increasing the congregation at Morningside. "It is particularly appropriate, also," he said, "that in the construction of this building we should memorialize two such lofty characters as Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, and his gifted sister, Miss Laura Haygood." Dr. Kendall stated.

NEW 90 DEGREE

CADILLAC

DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION

Public faith in Cadillac is as old as Cadillac, and as new as the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac itself.

This abiding sense that the Cadillac was a thing apart first came into being twenty-three years ago. Eleven years ago Cadillac added immeasurably to its prestige by developing the first eight-cylinder American car.

More than 200,000 of the world's most critical motorists have owned more than 225,000 eight-cylinder Cadillacs—the widest acceptance of the eight-cylinder principle in all the world.

Today's unexampled demand for the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac is making motor car history all over again. It is doubling Cadillac sales, which already exceeded that of any other car in its field.

The new Cadillac is years ahead of the times—and new thousands each month turn to it with deepest satisfaction.

MARCH IS HUPP RECORD MONTH

March was the largest month in the entire history of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, both in number of cars manufactured and in sales volume in dollars, the Hupmobile organization announced yesterday. It surpassed November, 1925, hitherto the record month, by 8 per cent in number of cars, and by a still higher margin in dollar sales volume.

Simultaneously, the company announced that its total shipments for the first three months of 1926 exceeded those for the similar period in 1925 by 45 per cent. Domestic shipments leaped 47 per cent ahead of those for the 1925 first quarter, while those for export ran 38 per cent larger. Total shipments for March, 1926, were 29 per cent higher than for March, 1925, which up to that time was one of the company's largest months. Export shipments for March were 63 per cent above those for the same month a year ago.

During the last week of March the company established four other new records. During that time it enjoyed the greatest single day's production in its entire history, the greatest week's production, the largest single day's shipments and the largest week's shipments.

Output in both its six and eight-cylinder divisions on March 31 was the largest it has ever attained in each.

Despite its record business, the company, on March 31, carried over unfilled orders for more than $1,300,000 worth of cars. Its orders received April 1 aggregated more than 1,000 additional cars, giving it more than $2,700,000 worth of unfilled orders as of April 1.

"Continued large growth in demand for both the Hupmobile six and eight contributed to this record," says O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager. "Outstanding success has greeted both cars throughout the country. Our shipments of eight-cylinder cars during March surpassed those for March, 1925, by 38 per cent. This is a remarkable showing, as the Hupmobile eight, even a year ago, was the largest selling car of its type in the world.

"Hupmobiles today are being sold by distributors and dealers at the fastest rate they have ever attained. As a consequence of this condition, we are planning still greater output for the coming months. April probably will surpass the March record, with May still larger. Both ourselves and our distributors see the greatest success for Hupmobile for 1926 that we have been enjoyed."

Indicative of the trend of the public toward closed cars, the company reports that 93 per cent of its March domestic shipments was in inclosed models.

WHITENTON IS NAMED WHITE MANAGER HERE

G. H. WHITENTON.

Announcement was made recently by officials of the White Motor Truck company of the appointment of Guy H. Whitenton as manager for the Atlanta district. Mr. Whitenton is well qualified for his new and important appointment, he having made an enviable record as assistant manager of the southeastern district, and also was active in handling some of the larger public utility accounts. He succeeds George W. Woodruff, resigned.

Church Encampment And School Ground Plans Being Pushed

Plans for developing the Golden Age Encampment for Young People near Chamblee is being sponsored by leading church people of this section, according to S. E. Davidson, chairman of publicity.

A feature of this progress is the information given out during the week through the favorable action of Fulton county grand jury on an appeal to change the county line of Milton county, which has been pending several weeks, the encampment virtually moved out of Milton into Fulton.

Promoters of the movement feel that this action by the grand jury assures the change, although it is yet to be passed on by the Milton grand jury.

INSURANCE AGENTS DISCUSS PREVENTION

Regular meeting of the Atlanta Association of Fire Insurance Agents, affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, will be held Wednesday, at luncheon, pine room, Ansley hotel.

The association has concerned itself with the matter of fire prevention in the city of Atlanta, says an announcement for the press. A special committee, appointed to look into this matter and cooperate with other civic and commercial agencies in Atlanta, will make definite recommendations for the consideration of the members at this meeting. Several other committees will make reports.

The membership of the association include 50 leading fire insurance agencies. An intensive membership campaign will be undertaken under the leadership of W. R. Heston, chairman of the membership committee, to bring into the association every fire insurance agency in the city.

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS KEEN FOR COMFORT

When it comes to buying and owning an automobile, it seems there is one thing that people will not sacrifice, and that is—riding comfort, says E. C. Andrews, president of the Southern Motor Equipment company, official Stromberg sales representative of this city.

Regardless of whether we own an expensive car or an inexpensive car, we insist upon "expensive car comfort." This isn't theorizing either, says Mr. Andrews, because the sales of shock absorbers bear this out, and that alone ought to be conclusive proof.

The Stromberg Motor Devices company, builders of the famous Stromberg carbureter, and logically familiar with the demands of car owners have met this demand for riding comfort by offering car owners a shock absorber that is designed on a new and better principle, and the last word in comfort-giving devices.

For years Stromberg engineers designed and redesigned their shock absorbers until it reached perfection.

Countless tests were made before satisfaction was attained. A fortune was expended in experiments. Now they claim they have perfected a shock absorber that is trouble proof.

Some of the features of the Stromberg shock absorber are: No greasing or oiling required; no adjustments are ever necessary; operates uniformly summer and winter; working parts protected against dirt, water and oil; they are built to measure for each make of car, and according to car weight.

This is indeed a super shock absorber, and car owners were quick to recognize it. Any comfort-giving device that needs no more attention than this is bound to be popular.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS ACTIVITIES EXPAND

The Atlanta Epworth League union this month closed one of the most successful years in the history of its organization, according to the annual report which showed the work of the union has reached into the surrounding towns and cities and enlisted new members and support. The Atlanta union is now the largest in southern Methodism, having 54 active chapters with 3,000 members.

There is an average attendance of 600 members at the regular monthly meetings. More than 2,000 attended the October rally and 600 leaguers went on the outing at Warm Springs last July.

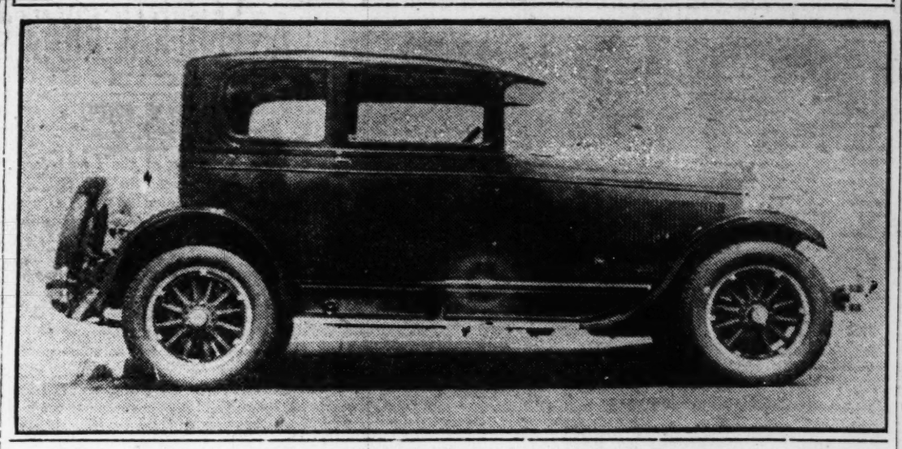

Other items of the report showed that more than $14,000 was raised for charity and missions during the year; two years' board paid by the union for leaguer in college; 1,568 leaguers enlisted in definite church service; 54 leagues represented on council in Atlanta Goodwill industries; 48 poor homes enjoyed real Christmas through efforts of the union; 50 leagues attended young people's convention at Memphis last January.

The Atlanta union endorsed plans for a "prohibition parade," which is to take place on May 2. This parade is being planned entirely by young people of the city and is sponsored by the Epworth league, B. Y. P. U., Christian Endeavor unions, various young people's classes of the Sunday schools, colleges, schools and universities.

Tests in Music In Initial Concert At Lakewood

Atlanta's preference in music, whether it be opera, light opera or jazz, will be tested before a large crowd in the grandstand at Lakewood Park today at 3 o'clock when the initial outdoor concert of the year is presented by the Elks Royal Purple band. John T. Lee will wield the baton.

JOHN T. LEE.

The program, as announced Saturday by William Ritter, manager, includes three types of music and a dash of military melody. The "Aida" march and overture from Ofefnbach's opera, "Orpheus of the Underworld" will be played along with selections from Luder's "King Dodo," representing light opera.

Other numbers will be "Seventeenth Regiment March," by Hall; "Brown Eyes, Why are You Blue," by Meyers; "Sleepy Time Gal," by Whiting; "Lo Paloma," by Yradier; "Miss Trombone," by Filmore; "Loveland Waltz," by Holzman; "Southern Melody," by Hays; "The Black Man," from Sousa's "Dwellers of the Western World" suite; "March Federation," by Hall, and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

A vocal solo by Miss Nora Allen-Volpi, former member of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will be "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling."

COLORED ART EXHIBIT HEAVILY ATTENDED

During last week more than a thousand colored school children and a great many adults attended the exhibition of oil paintings now in the Carnegie library of Atlanta university.

The exhibition will be open to the public three days this week, the 19th, 21st and 24th, beginning at 3 o'clock each afternoon. On the afternoon of Sunday, 25th, those previously in attendance will be admitted without charge for a final view.

The collection consists of more than thirty canvasses from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, representing as many of the leading artists of America and Europe. It is being shown here under the auspices of the Kappa Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha, a colored sorority.

TRINITY CHOIR OFFERS SACRED MUSICAL

A sacred music concert will be given at Trinity church Sunday night at 8 o'clock by the vested choir of 40 voices. Solos, duets and other numbers will feature. The choir's soloists are Mrs. Nellie Edwards, Mrs. Josephine Bridwell, John Clotworthy and R. L. Bradford.

ACCOUNTANTS MEET HERE WEDNESDAY

Accountants from southeastern states will gather here Wednesday at a two-day session of the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants, under auspices of the Atlanta chapter, it was announced Saturday by Joel Hunter, temporary chairman of the Atlanta chapter. The meetings will be in the Ansley hotel.

Walter Mucklow, of Jacksonville, Fla., George S. Harris, president of the Exposition Cotton Mills, Atlanta; J. E. Wilson, of Asheville, N. C., and J. L. Respess, of Atlanta, will be principal speakers at the sessions. Mr. Mucklow will speak on the 1926 federal income tax law.

Mr. Harris will speak on cotton mill costs. Mr. Wilson will talk on essentials of the common audit while Mr. Respess will talk on the proper time to close books after a season's business.

Talks will be made by members of the association on various phases of accounting. A banquet will be given to visiting accountants Thursday night by members of the local chapter. Joel Hunter will be toastmaster.

Interesting entertainment features have been planned in connection with the sessions. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to sightseeing at Stone Mountain and other points.

C. R. Dawson is president of the Southern Accountants' association, and W. H. James is president of the Georgia society, C. P. A. Members of the reception committee are: Joel Hunter, R. H. Eaton, W. H. Barnes, W. H. James, J. R. Robison and J. L. Respess, from Georgia; Walter Mucklow, Florida; D. H. McCullough, North Carolina; J. E. Wilson, North Carolina; W. C. Rion, South Carolina; George M. Clarke, Tennessee, and G. T. Rosson, Alabama. Members of the entertainment committee are: H. T. Amason, C. R. Dawson, W. R. Osborn, M. F. Pixton and Edward Richardson, from Georgia, and D. H. McCullough, from North Carolina.

NEW LAW FIRM HERE ANNOUNCED SATURDAY

N. T. Anderson, Jr., and Richard J. Reynolds, Jr., have formed a partnership for the general practice of law, it was announced Saturday. The name of the firm will be Anderson & Reynolds. Officers will be in the Palmer building.

Mr. Anderson was graduated in the first class of Oglethorpe university, and later from the Atlanta Law school. He has been prominently associated for several years with the firm of Bryan & Middlebrooks.

Mr. Reynolds was graduated from Marist college and later from the Lamar School of Law of Emory university, where he received his L.L. B. degree. Mr. Reynolds has been practicing for some time as a member of the Atlanta bar.

PINK AND CHUM FISH RECOMMENDED AS FOOD

In 1925 American canners packed nearly 289,000,000 pounds of salmon, nearly 65 per cent of which was pink and chum salmon. These grades are packed in the same manner and they are just as wholesome as red or king salmon. Unfortunately for a great many years the only salmon were red-meated, and the public has come so intimately to associate the color with the product that pink or pale-fleshed fish have been regarded with disfavor or suspicion. Even light-meated chinook, common in some localities, have not found a ready market. Color is a matter of appearance only, but prejudice and custom have caused the public to pass by the cheaper and equally wholesome pink and chum principally because they are not red when canned.

Pink and chums usualyl contain less fat but are equal to the redder varieties in protein, tissue-building material. They are low priced because of their abundance and the use of labor-saving machinery in handling and canning them. Canned salmon will keep indefinitely, if unopened. Moreover, it is ready for immediate use, or it may be cooked in a variety of ways if desired. Chum and pink salmon contain more than ten times as much iodine as meat, milk, eggs, cheese, fresh-water fish, or most of our fruits and vegetables. The more liberal replacement of pink and chum salmon for the higher-priced red-meated fish will help to conserve the supply of the latter.

Many other facts regarding pink and chum salmon, together with 44 recipes for serving them are set forth in a seven-page publication by the commissioner of fisheries, Washington, D. C., which is free upon request.

SUTTON ADVISES PUPILS TO STUDY WORLD'S OPERAS

Advising every school student in the Atlanta system to avail himself or herself of the opportunity to hear the great stories and tragedies and comedies of the world when the world's greatest musical artists perform here this week at grand opera, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, in his weekly letter to pupils of the schools Saturday, declared that music and its appreciation means much in the development of character.

He urged pupils to study operas they are going to see before they attend, in order that they may appreciate to the fullest the artistic rendition of the musical masterpieces as sung by the world's greatest interpreters.

Luxurious Motor Cars

A pledge to the Public

For over a quarter of a century the F. B. Stearns Company has been one of the few organizations building "America's finest motor cars." The newly associated interests are determined to adhere to and extend the company's proved policies of building motor cars for excellence alone. Large production and price are last considerations.

Two six-cylinder Knight-motored models, one of 121-inch wheelbase and one of 130-inch wheelbase, lead this line of luxurious motor cars.

OVERLAND SIX LARGEST IN LIGHT SIX FIELD

An examination of the general dimensions of the cars now being offered in the light six field show that the Overland Six has the longest wheelbase, the greatest amount of room in the body and a greater usable amount of horsepower from the motor than is found in any other car in its price class.

It most nearly meets the dimensional requirements of the full five-passenger sedan and on this basis has found a general public acceptance which has outrivaled anything else in the field.

In its first year it stepped to second place in sales volume among all light sixes and the percentage increase being registered this year is greater than that being shown by any other light six on the market.

With a compact power plant assembly, the additional wheelbase of this car has been employed to give a surprising amount of leg room both for the driver and for the occupants of the rear seat.

This has naturally increased the amount of room inside the body and occupants find it convenient and comfortable to carry baggage inside the car when going on long trips rather than to expose it to the dust and dirt which are certain if it is carried on the outside.

The usable horsepower is the result of the low swung motor which gives the closest approximation to a straight line drive yet achieved in any light six.

Chrysler's Theft Precaution System Proves Effective

That there has at last been devised a system of automobile theft prevention and detection which proves the basis for the development of an organized attack on automobile thieves is the belief of W. Sherman Burns, of the William J. Burns International Detective agency.

The Burns agency has recently completed an investigation of the influence on Chrysler cars of the Fedco system of theft prevention and detection adopted in July, 1925, and has found a marked decrease in the number of cars stolen and an increase in the percentage of recoveries compared with the previous experience on Chrysler cars. In connection with its report Mr. Burns says: "Our investigation of the actual workout of the system on Chrysler cars during the latter part of 1925 has confirmed our judgment of its practical value. We are convinced that the Fedco system provides the basis for the development of an organized attack on automobile thieves."

Mr. Burns states that this favorable showing is remarkable when it is considered that the system was new and comparatively unknown during the period under survey. Furthermore, the nation-wide field service now provided by the Burns organization was not then in operation.

"When the full effect of the organization of the field service has been developed," continued Mr. Burns, "and as adoption of the system by other manufacturers brings a general understanding of the operation of the system, it is believed that the thieves will find it decidedly unprofitable to steal cars protected by the system.

"Under the system, every car owner receives with his new car instructions in the use of the system, directing him, if his car is stolen, to communicate not only with the police and insurance company, but also with the nearest office of the Burns agency. As soon as this is done, an alarm is broadcast to the municipal police departments, state troopers, and federal operators, as well as to an extensive list of filling stations, garages and service stations. A reward is also offered to bring out further information."

Mr. Burns continued: "Our men know that they have located a stolen Chrysler if they find a car bearing a Fedco plate with one of the numbers bulletined as stolen; a car bearing a plate mutilated in an attempt to change the number; a car bearing an imitation of such a plate, or a car from which the plate has been removed."

Heretofore, the detection, and especially the identification, of stolen cars has been an exceedingly difficult thing because of the ease with which a thief can change a car's identity. This is shown by the estimate that cars valued at $150,000,000 are stolen every year from $3,000,000,000 worth of cars left unguarded each working day on the public streets of the nation. It was to meet this situation that the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Society of Automotive Engineers, and others, called upon the inventive genius of the country to produce a car-numbering system which would be difficult, if not impossible, to defeat.

Walter P. Chrysler and the Chrysler corporation, following out their policy of reaching beyond the salesroom door to serve car owners every possible way, recognized the Fedco system as protective measure of fundamental value to the industry by pioneering this feature.

JOINS HARVESTER CO. SALES STAFF

J. H. LEWIS.

Announcement has just been made by officials of the International Harvester company of the appointment of J. H. Lewis as retail truck salesman to work in Atlanta.

Mr. Lewis has been a resident of Atlanta for a number of years, being identified in the truck business, which experience makes him well qualified for his new appointment.

MAFFETT EMPLOYEES SEE OPENING GAME

Every employee of F. E. Maffett, Inc., Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers at 167 West Peachtree street, attended the opening game of the baseball season at Spiller field last Thursday. This was in the nature of a reward for the sales record achieved in March and constituted a definite contribution in civic spirit on the part of this organization. The various departments of the company and the invited guests of the organization took a block of almost 200 tickets and the appearance of this body made an inspiring sight, even in an audience of the proportions reached at the 1926 premiere.

Loaded in Graham Brothers trucks and Dodge Brothers sedans the parade extended for over a block in length and provided an opening day feature which was recognized as comparing with the spirit existing in the Maffett organization.

The sales record achieved in March in Atlanta parallels that of the entire country, making a total of record proportions. Since the first of the year, 70,599 Dodge Brothers motor cars and Graham Brothers trucks have been delivered to users—a record which marks the greatest sales ever in the history of the company and a feat which stands without equal in motor vehicles in this price class.

This record—both in Atlanta and in the country at large—is an accurate index of preference. By the same token sales are increasing and popularity is growing. It cannot be argued that such a phenomenal break towards Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers products is seasonal, because the peak of the selling season has not yet arrived.

It does show, however, that Atlanta is a mortor-wise market with a range of choice which is unequaled in any city of its size in the south. And that the response to the service and products merchandised by the Maffett organization has been so pronounced is indicative of the greatest year's business in the history of this company.

SOUTHERN'S NEW DIRECTORY SHOWS TEXTILE GROWTH

Washington, D. C., April 17.—Continued growth of the textile industry in the territory served by the Southern railway is shown by the 1926 edition of the Southern's textile directory which has just been issued.

On January 1, 1926, there were in the territory 1,043 textile plants, operating 13,178,395 spindles, 260,241 looms, and 47,736 knitting machines. Including projects under construction at the end of the year, 140 additions were made to existing plants during 1925.

The growth of the cotton textile industry and the consumption of cotton in the south as compared with other parts of the country are graphically shown by diagrams. The south now has 46.86 per cent of all the cotton spindles in the United States and during 1925 consumed 65.09 per cent of the cotton used in American mills.

The rate at which the textile industry is moving south is shown by the fact that since 1922 there has been a net increase of 1,786,995 spindles in the south as compared with a net decrease of 847,061 spindles in other parts of the country.

An interesting feature of the directory is a map showing the geographical distribution of spindles in the territory served by the Southern's lines, the electric power transmission lines and the coal fields in this territory, showing at a glance its advantages for the textile industry in respect to both electric power and coal.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR NEWSPAPERS ASKED IN HEARING

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—Establishment of a special bundle service for newspapers was urged today before the joint congressional subcommittee on postal rates by Elisha Hanson, representing the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

He said present second class rates and restrictions had forced publishers to use baggage, automobile bus and truck and other facilities in preference to the mails. He suggested a rate of 30 cents a hundred pounds for the first zone, a 50-mile radius, and 40 cents for the second zone, a 150-mile radius, for the bundle service.

PECAN TREES BLOOM AT THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—The pecan trees are in full bloom now and growers are looking forward hopefully to a fine crop of nuts.

The crop last year was large, but in many cases the nuts were defective, owing, it was said, to the very dry weather of the early spring.

CHEVROLET ADDS OVER THOUSAND DEALERS

During the last seven months the Chevrolet Motor company added 1,619 direct and associate dealers to its selling force, making a total of almost 7,500 dealers in all parts of the country, an increase of more than 27 per cent.

The continued and steady growth of industrial development in the south and the expansion of its good roads system is reflected by the greater increase in dealer representation in southern territories.

Almost the total selling force of the average motor car company is represented alone in the number of new dealers added to the Chevrolet organization. Demand for sales franchises demonstrates the decided favor accorded the new improved Chevrolet by the buying public throughout the country.

Smaller communities, with the augmented sales force afforded by the additional associate dealers, will be assured of adequate service close at hand, while the direct dealers, generally located at county seats, will be assured of a more thorough coverage of their outlying territory.

Typical of the increased buying power of the south are reports on new dealers from four of the larger representative branch offices. Atlanta, Ga., zone headquarters, reported 107 new dealers handling Chevrolet cars; Memphis, Tenn., 100 new dealers; Charlotte, N. C., 68 and New Orleans, 52 new dealers.

Minneapolis and Des Moines showed the largest number of new dealers acquired in the northern areas.

LOUIS RAVENNEL DIES IN CAROLINA

News of the death of Louis Ravennel, of Charleston, S. C., and Cleveland, Ohio, Friday in Summerville, S. C., was received in Atlanta Saturday. Mr. Ravennel is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Marion S. Battle, of Roanoke, Va.; and a sister, Mrs. R. M. Walker, of Atlanta. The body will be taken to Charleston.

5,000 Pleasure Seekers At Lakewood Park Opening

All opening day attendance records at Lakewood Amusement park were shattered Saturday when a throng of more than 5,000 people streamed through the four gates after the formal launching of the 1926 season at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

With perfect weather encouraging the quest of outdoor recreation and a variety of new attractions to stimulate interest in the pleasure resort, the crowds swarmed the rides and shows all afternoon and untill midnight brought the signal for extinguishing the newly installed battery of 5,000 electric light bulbs which made the rest a place of brilliance after sundown.

"The size of the crowd at Lakewood today is the most striking evidence of prosperity in Atlanta that I have seen in months," Oscar Mills, who recently retired from real estate interests to manage the park as secretary of the Southeastern Fair association, declared Saturday night.

"People come to Lakewood when they are feeling good," he said, "and the number of thousands that felt good Saturday indicates a healthy state of mind in Atlanta that augurs well for every interest and enterprise concerned in it."

CENTRAL HI CLUB PLANS BENEFIT SHOW ON FRIDAY

Members of the Dramatic club of the Central high school will give a benefit show Friday night at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Commercial high school on South Pryor street.

Proceeds will go to the Roosevelt auxiliary, Spanish-American War veterans. The title of the show is "A Night in a Cabaret" and Charleston dancers and music will be featured.

Mayor Sims, city schools heads and members of council were invited as honor guests.

PEACE DELEGATES OPEN CONFERENCE

Oudja, French Morocco, April 17.—(AP)—The French, Spanish and Riffian peace delegates will meet tomorrow morning at a spot on the fighting front, the location of which is being kept secret, to discuss the preliminary terms of an armistice.

This gathering is preparatory to the first official meeting of the peace delegates to be held here Monday.

The French will demand military guarantees of the Riffians, the good faith of which would be accomplished by allowing French troops to advance unmolested to a depth of five miles on a front of eight miles north of El-Kifane.

This would bring the French troops within 30 miles of Targuist, headquarters of Abd-el-Krim, the Rififan chief. The demand is likely to be refused by the Riffians, and the peace situation does not appear to be as bright as yesterday.

Revival at Sylvester.

Sylvester, Ga., April 15.—(Special)—The revival services that have been conducted by Rev. W. A. Kelly of Adel, Ga., for the past 10 days, closed Wednesday night. There were something over 30 accessions to the church, and considerable good has resulted from the meeting.

Ford

Highest in Quality Lowest in Price

The finest steels available are used in the manufacture of Ford cars. The plate glass for windshields and windows is as perfect as can be made. Upholstery material contains a larger percentage of wool than is ordinarily specified—even for much higher priced cars. The basic features of Ford design have never been improved upon by any manufacturer.

No other car offers greater dependability. The Ford car has won the favor of millions of users, under every conceivable motoring condition. Its convenience is known and appreciated the world over; its performance is taken for granted.

Such quality is possible at Ford prices because every operation, from mining of ore to final assembly, is under direct control of the Ford Motor Company.

Iron is taken from Ford mines in Michigan; coal from the Company's mines in Kentucky and West Virginia. Glass comes from Ford glass plants; wood from the Ford timber tracts in the North. Raw materials and finished products are carried over the Company's own transportation routes; coke ovens, blast furnaces, a steel mill, foundries and saw mills—all are part of this complete organization. There are even salvage plants, paper mill, cement plant, etc., to transform waste materials into useful by-products.

In this way every possible economy is effected. Under no other circumstances could Ford quality be had at Ford prices.

Features That Maintain Ford Leadership

Multiple Disc-in-Oil Clutch
Generally conceded to be the best, the smoothest and the most reliable for any car. The Ford clutch operates in a bath of oil. This assures smooth, silent action and long life.

Planetary Transmission
The Ford planetary transmission is the ideal speed control for a light car. Costs more to build than the conventional sliding gear type, but is used because of its superiority.

Torque Tube Drive
Henry Ford originated the Torque Tube in 1903. By use of this construction the rear spring does not take any of the driving thrust and is free to act solely as a flexible support for the car body.

Dual Ignition System
(1) The Ford magneto and (2) the generator and storage battery. Elimination of the magneto would reduce production costs—but Ford standards specify the additional value.

Thermo-Syphon Cooling
Circulation of water is entirely governed by engine temperature. There is no water pump requiring frequent need for packing

All-Steel Bodies
Built entirely of steel to provide maximum safety and service, the bodies of Ford cars are as carefully manufactured as the Ford engine and chassis.

Simple, Dependable Lubrication
The Ford lubricating system is simple and efficient. Practically all of the parts of the engine and transmission are oiled from one oil reservoir in the crankcase. No pump is required.

Three Point Motor Suspension
First used by Henry Ford in 1908 and a feature of the Model T power plant for eighteen years.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS OF LEADERSHIP

What good is a dollar on a desert island?

Advertising in The Constitution Pays the Advertiser and Saves the Buyer

On a deserted isle your dollar would be practically worthless, because of your inability to exchange it for the things you want and need. Of course you are not on a desert isle, but the same principal of "dollar value" holds true, nevertheless. No matter where you happen to be, the value of your dollar depends on the value, to you, of the commodity you can get in exchange for it.

The value of the commodities you get in this exchange depends largely on just how familiar you are with the constantly changing prices and the varying qualities of these commodities. Your knowledge of TODAY'S values depends on just how thoroughly and consistently you read the ads in this newspaper.

HIGH'S, MAIN FLOOR

Every girl knows in her heart that the all important event of opera is dressing. It's a thrill from the very first moment when you step into clingy lingerie and tuck ten pink toes away in delicate chiffon. Almost you catch your breath as you slip into a slip of mere loveliness. But then comes the climax of the evening. That shimmering dress—a woven dream! What a pity to cover it! But, oh, such a heavenly shawl! Swish, and the soft fringe falls in folds as you gather it about you.

You reach for your fan... B-rr-ring! He has come... and you're off for the opera.

the DRESS CIRCLE of Opera

A Composition of sheer chiffon changing from low to high key in color with each movement. Lace trimmed, $16.50. Other negligees in satin and crepe, $9.98 to $19.85.

D These dainty satin girdles and form fitting brassieres give the grace note to one's figure. Girdles, $5 up; brassieres, $1.50 up. And, this slip is no minor detail — soft, scalloped pink crepe, $6.98.

E Just in time, the bouffant taffetas. Sketched — Alice blue toned with shell pink, finished with a tiny bar of silver braid and lovely French flowers. Satin lined, $97.50.

F To complete the rest, a beautiful embroidered shawl... all colors and pure white, $29.75 to $49.75. Or an evening wrap of romaine or crepe brocade, $35 to $135.

OPERA

Accessories

* * * *

Rare Perfumes

Elusive and alluring perfumes that express one's personality so charmingly. Caron's, Coty's, Guerlain's, D'Orsay, Scherk, Ciro and others... names associated with the finest French and American odors. In bulk, $2.50 to $6 an ounce.

* * * *

Long Gloves

Correctly dressed to the finger-tips is the woman who wears gloves of long white kid. 12 and 16-button lengths of soft, pliant quality, at $3.95 and $4.95 pair. Trig little kid gauntlets in a variety of colors and styles, $2.95 and $3.95.

* * * *

Beaded Bags

Because white may be carried with any light color, many are choosing them for the opera. We have lovely ones, pure white or with touches of color, at $2.95 to $10.95. Others in exquisite new designs, many capacious enough for opera glasses, $8.95 to $49.50.

* * * *

Crown Jewels

She may wear a jeweled comb in her sleek bob, or fasten her braid with a glittering ornament, but no matter how she arranges her coiffeur, its beauty will be enhanced with a lovely hair ornament. Brilliantly studded ones, all colors, $1 to $4.95.

* * * *

Handkerchiefs

Of course, the occasion demands the daintiest of handkerchiefs, and here are filmy bits of lace and Georgette that you'll tuck into your glove with the assurance of their perfect accord with your costume, priced from $1 up. Others of Princess lace, hand-embroidered linen and voile, at moderate prices.

WELCOME, Opera Visitors! You who have come from afar . . . from the towns and hamlets of Georgia, from Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, from Virginia, the Carolinas—from all over Dixie—we welcome you most heartily, and extend to you the courtesies of our store. May you find time between the operas and the social functions attendant upon opera to visit us, to shop here, and to make yourself thoroughly at home.

Silk Coats and Capes
$35 to $187.50

New coats of supple black satin and crepe have just arrived for the opera. Richly embroidered or trimmed with gold they're dressy enough for evening, yet not too formal for afternoon wear. One charming model has a fringed stole of gold cloth. Many others trimmed with soft, summer fur. Priced from $49.50 up. Capes are of crepes de chine and embossed chiffons in pastel or vivid shades, sometimes trimmed with ostrich. As little as $35, as high at $97.50.

Matinee Dresses
$35 to $69.50

These frocks are in a variety of materials from the simple little Georgette of French drawn work to the most sumptuous creation of lace and net. Then between are the newest fashions in crepe romaine, flat crepe, taffeta and prints in simple or elaborate style, pleated, flared, in straight line or two-piece silhouettes. The group at $35 will win your immediate attention because of its versatility and very unusual value. All sizes from 16 to 46.

Dresses for the Evening

New Business Concerns Indicate Prosperous Era

A tour of the business district of Atlanta within the past week, and a close observation and comparison of the former vacant stores and business houses, discloses the fact that many of these unoccupied places are being taken at a most satisfying rate, and if the present seeming demand keeps up it will not be a great while until there will not be a vacant business building in the down town part of the city. On Marietta street alone, there are a number of new business concerns opening up, according to announcements on the windows and doors, and in other portions of the city the same condition seems to prevail.

Out on Whitehall street, where Madison avenue extension will soon increase the number of vehicles traversing that thoroughfare, a number of new business buildings and commercial plants have recently been built. There are also a number of others projected, according to announcements, including several more of the fine packing and refrigerating plants that have gone up out in that section within the last six months.

Down Edgewood avenue there are many new establishments, with others contemplated, and this street promises to become one of the busiest in the entire city. Since the widening and repaving of this thoroughfare it has "blossomed" out into one of the most important streets in the city, recalling the days just after its opening, when it rapidly became to be one of the most popular streets in Atlanta.

Peters street, with its improvements, widening to the extent of ten feet on each side, and a new pavement for its entire length, between the viaduct and its junction with Walker street, and which will also be another popular avenue for traffic between the center and the south and west ends of the city, promises also to become popular both as a business thoroughfare and a carrier of traffic. This street, with its bad pavement and its unseemly condition that prevailed for several years, lost "cast" to a certain extent because of a general "rundown" condition, tub with its new surface and its wide expanse of roadway ,it bids fair to become one of the most popular driveways in the city. It will pick up much traffic from Madison avenue, and will be a valuable artery for traffic from the north side to East Point, College Park and Hapeville. It will become a rival again for many of Atlanta's most important streets.

Improvements On Spring.

Spring street contributes a great stream of traffic to the south side avenues and there are many improvements being made. There are a number of vacant business building on these streets being renovated for immediate occupancy. Cone street, and other thoroughfares in that section of the city, including Luckie, Walton and the lower portion of Marietta street, are showing signs of renewed life, and many new business concerns are announcing intention to locate at various points in this district.

Vacant stores on Peachtree and West Peachtree streets, where rents are at peak figures, are also being taken, and signs are being placed in windows indicating that business concerns will locate and open different kinds of establishments within a short time.

Vacancies are being filled despite the fact that a number of new stores and business buildings are constantly being constructed, and that others are projected for immediate erection, all of which is taken by the real estate men of the city to indicate that Atlanta is not only upon the threshold of a genuine boom, but that it is in the midst of perhaps the greatest wave of prosperity the city has ever known.

The same thing that is true with the stores and business buildings of the downtown section may said to be true of the office buildings, of which there are more than half a hundred of the "A" class. These buildings, which have made Atlanta and have also made the city famous as the southern headquarters for practically every nationally known business concern in the country, are almost completely filled, according to information gathered by the writer, and despite the fact that three years ago we heard the cry that "Atlanta is overbuilt" with reference to office buildings, incoming concerns have practically taken every office that was offered for rent.

There was also a cry that Atlanta was "sadly overbuilt" with reference to apartments. Today, real estate men as well as home-seekers make the statement that there are no desirable dwellings in these buildings to be had in the city. That means that when the present tide of people coming into the city take the presently available apartments, there will be a necessity for some one to begin building these structures to house the others who will be attracted to this city.

City of Opportunity.

"Atlanta is a city that will always attract men and women who wish to make their way, and who wish to live in a city that has an ideal climate; a splendid health record, and which shows a steadily growing population and business importance," said a prominent realty man recently. "We have only to call passengers' attention to the advantages that we have in order to attract them to Atlanta."

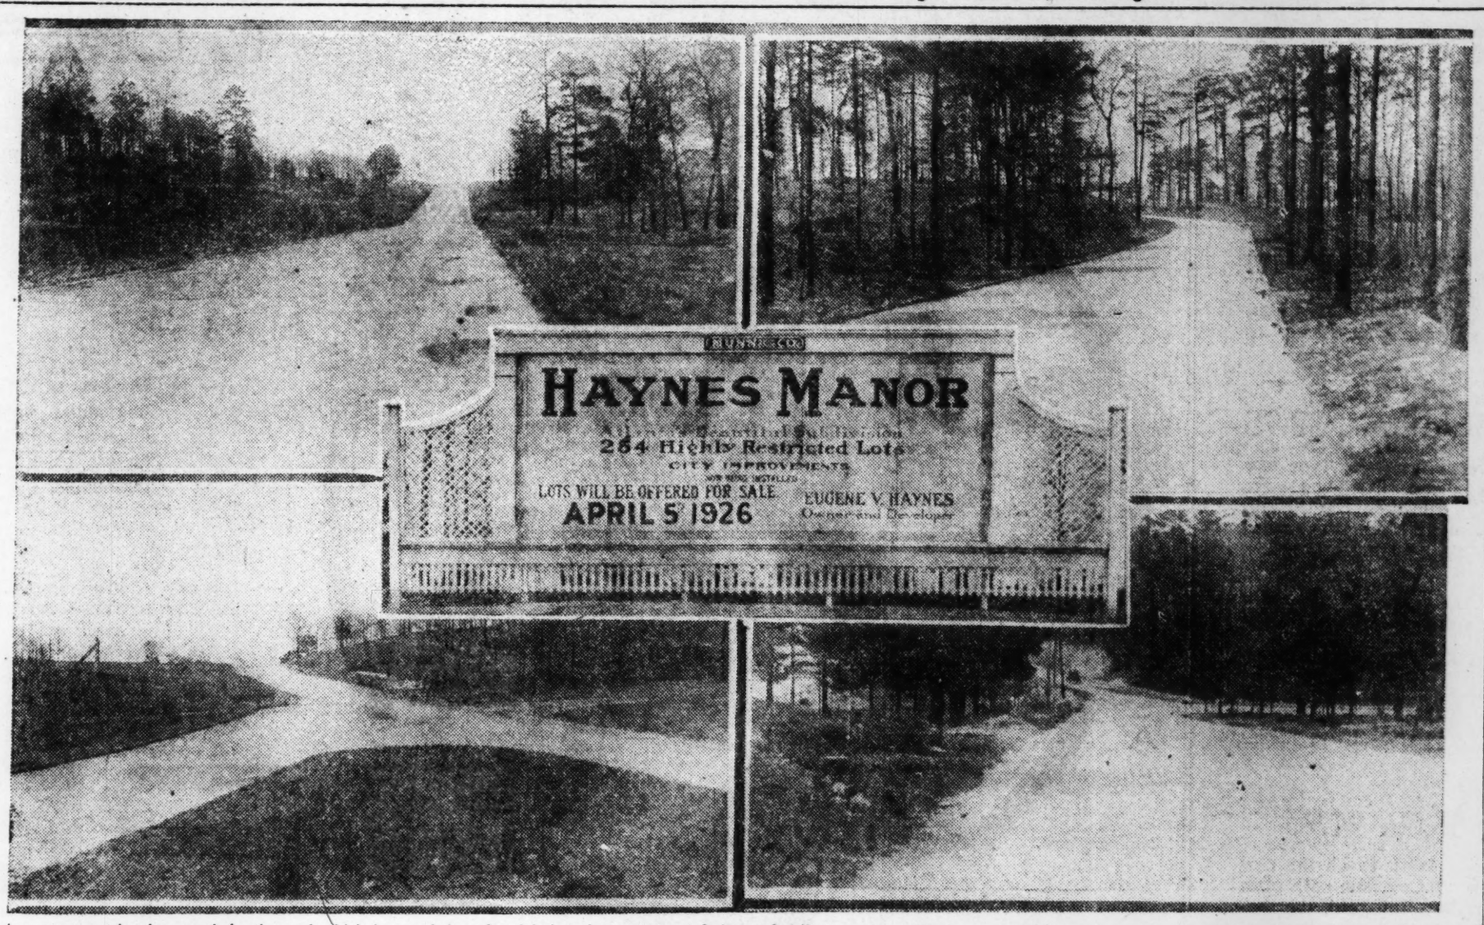

Atlanta has commercial and industrial advantages that cannot be matched by any other city in the south. New Orleans, Louisville and Baltimore not excepted, and there are observers of industrial and civic conditions who will venture the prediction that the capital of Dixie, the "Gate City of the South" and the chief city of Georgia, will within the next ten years match, if not eclipse any or all of the above named places. Atlanta has everything to stimulate her growth; she has everything to make a modern city; everything to contribute to her standing as the principal city of the southern states, and hundreds of things to add to her fame as the most interesting and important city, from an historical standpoint in the south.

With the business buildings practically filled, with all her desirable apartments practically taken, with her hotels filled every day from cellar to roof, and with office buildings almost completely taken, and with the industrial plants being erected in large numbers each month, it looks as though this city cannot avoid the splendid wave of prosperity that promises to sweep over her.

Thousands of people have returned to this city from Florida during the past spring and winter months, who will be attracted by Atlanta and its many pleasing features. There are others who are returning to states north of this city, who will be more than likely to stop here and find themselves fascinated with Atlanta's many pleasing points.

We have to get ready for these people and the fact that many new business concerns are opening up and that there are signs of increased business every day indicates that a big wave of new progress and prosperity is sweeping over the city, which will carry Atlanta into a new epoch of its commercial history.

Scenes in Atlanta's Latest Home Development, Haynes Manor

Announcement has been made by the Burdett Realty company of the opening of Haynes Manor, a new residential development in Atlanta's beautiful north side metropolitan district.

Announcement is also made of the appointment of John Gilmore as salesmanager for the estate.

Haynes Manor is 5 miles from Five Points and is located on Peachtree Battle avenue, one of Fulton county's historical highways. It was near the site of Haynes Manor that Captain Evan P. Howell, one of Atlanta's most gallant defenders, received the brunt of an attack by the federal forces, and while grading the streets and building sites in this development many relics of that memorable battle were found imbedded in the sail. There were minnie balls, swords, bridle bits and other military equipment that have laid hidden under the ground for more than sixty years, and in addition to the small relics found, solid cannon shot, shells, etc., were recovered in large numbers.

Haynes Manor, which has been under development for several months and which is now being placed before the public for the first time, is regarded by real estate men as one of the finest residential sections in the vicinity of Atlanta. It has a gently rolling surface, giving engineers and landscapers the groundwork for a most beautiful development. Many of the streets traversing the district have been paved. Others will be paved as rapidly as possible, according to Mr. Gilmore, who also stated that all civic improvements will be assured to purchasers of lots in Haynes Manor.

200 Acres in Tract.

Containing about 200 acres of beautifully wooded land, Hayes Manor will become one of the most attractive residential communities near Atlanta. It is the property of Eugene V. Haynes, one of the best known of Atlanta's capitalists and real estate operators, who proposes to make of it one of the outstanding residential developments in the south.

"Haynes Manor," said Mr. Gilmore, "is just one mile beyond the city limits. We have placed most of the modern improvements, while others have been contracted for and will be put down as rapidly as it is possible for them to be installed. Dellwood drive, Manor Ridge drive, Alton road and Alta Vista drive are some of the streets traversing the splendid development and the streets are being improved with all possible speed. We will have everything in readiness for home builders within a short time."

Mr. Gilmore pointed out the many attractive features of the home sites in Haynes Manor, and he expressed great faith that the 254 lots will be readily absorbed by the many people who are coming into the city at the present time, for whom homes must be provided.

"We have opened the sale on these lots," said Mr. Gilmore, "with all faith in the fact that Atlanta is a growing city; that we will be able to dispose of every home site we have within a comparatively short time. Our prospects are splendid, notwithstanding that we have not previously made public the fact that the lots are on sale."

Mr. Gilmore will be assisted in the sale of Haynes Manor home sites by an efficient staff of trained salesmen and from his office in the Candler building he will direct the campaign of selling that promises to become another of Atlanta's remarkable home developments.

Peachtree Battle avenue, which connects Haynes Manor with Peachtree road, runs through the entire length of the tract, forming a junction on the west with Mt. Perian road, another historic highway of Fulton county. The subdivision is located in the heart of Fulton county's most exclusive and attractive home district. Surrounding this property on every side are a number of splendid home developments and many of the handsomest and most expensive dwellings in the south are to be seen in the vicinity of this property. It is but a short distance from Peachtree road, Atlanta's most famous residential thoroughfare, and is just a convenient distance from the center of the city.

Realty Boards Seek To Improve Vacant Houses

J. R. Smith, president of the Atlanta real estate board, announces that the real estate boards throughout the country, combined in a membership of the Natonal Association of Real Estate boards, are making an effort to improve the general appearance of vacant property—this applying to property to be rented, leased, or sold.

The committee appointed to have charge of this activity is as follows: H. W. Dews, chairman; A. S. Crain, vice chairman; B. F. White, Solon Johnston, O. O. Hale, H. R. Brady, H. H. Hallman, A. J. McBride, W. B. Carlton, H. M. Ansley, Richard C. Shoup, Lawson Thompson, J. C. Burke, Paul C. Maddox, P. S. Barrett.

H. W. Dews, chairman of the property appearance committee, in holding a meeting of the members of his committee on April 14, decided that it would be best to divide the town into four sections and designate certain members of the committee to be repsonsible for these sections, to inspect and report back on methods and definite properties that can be improved by adjusting the general appearance of same.

H. W. Dews, chairman of this committee, and J. R. Smith, president of the real estate board, both agreed that this was a very important matter and should be corrected, as any property owner who had property to sell or lease would hurt his chances for the sale by allowing the property to be completely covered by "for sale" or "for rent" signs, as they would have a tendency to create a downward pressure as to the value of the property.

Mr. Dews and his committee will hold a future meeting at the office of the board at 9 a. m. Wednesday, April 21.

Many New Members Secured in 1926 By Realty Board

The directors and officers of the Atlanta real estate board held their regular monthly dinner-meeting at the Robert Fulton hotel Thursday, April 15, at 6:30 p. m.

J. R. Smith, president, presided. The following members were present: E. L. Barrett, A. S. Adams, Ward Wight, Frank C. Owens, John J. Thompson. H. H. Robinson, chairman of the advertising committee; Edward M. Chapman, chairman of the associate members' division, and M. C. Kiser, chairman of the membership committee, were also present.

Several important subjects pertaining to the real estate business were discussed, and reports from the fourteen committee chairmen were given, outlining the activities of the committees since the last directors' meeting, held March 10.

H. H. Robinson, chairman of the advertising committee, made a report outlining an advertising campaign that will be conducted in the interest of the board and its members, showing the advantages of dealing with realtors. An appropriation was made to meet this expense.

The chairman of the associate members' division committee made a report showing the activities of this committee, which consists of the salesmen of firm members of the board. This report showed that there are 85 salesmen members, and they are very active in the affairs of their committee.

M. C. Kiser, chairman of the membership committee, made a report showing that since the first of the year the membership committee had secured over 80 new members, including active class A, active class B, associate and affiliated. It further shows that the membership committee has held nine meetings since the first of the year, and at each meeting a quorum was present, which gives a total of 80 present and 22 absent.

At this meeting over 30 new members were elected to membership by the directors.

President Smith and the directors in discussing the activities of the real estate board this year were high in their prasie of the excellent work that is being carried on by the different committees and the individual members. Since the first of the year over 50 meetings have been held with a total attendance of something over 1,150.

Plans also were discussed whereby the Atlanta real estate board could be well represented at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards held at Tulsa in June and steps will be taken to secure as large an attendance as possible in this respect.

Wynne-Claughton Co. Announce New Building Leases

Among the leases reported last week by Wynne-Claughton, Inc., were ground floor locations in the Wynne-Claughton building to Wagar & Company and Personal Service corporation and a large area on the fifth floor of the Wynne-Claughton building to the Commercial Investment Trust company, of New York. With the closing of these leases all the ground floor space of the Wynne-Claughton building is now leased.

This firm announces that they have very little available office space left in the building. When it is remembered that the Wynne-Claughton building has been open for occupancy only one year, this is a most unusual record.

Wynne-Claughton, Inc. also announced that in order to take care of their increasing business and to better serve their clients they have added two new members to their organization. Ira Everett will have charge of their rent department and will handle the renting of houses and apartments. Mr. Everett is already well known in realty circles in Atlanta, having been connected with another large firm here in the same capacity for a number of years. C. Harris White has been added to their sales force. Mr. White is an Atlanta man and a graduate of Georgia Tech. However, for the past two years he has been connected with the D. P. Davis interests in Tampa and St. Augustine, Fla., where he has been unusually successful.

Chapman Talks on 'Saleable Listings' To Realty Board

Edward M. Chapman, Jr., of the Adair Realty & Trust Co., spoke to the associate members division of the Atlanta real estate board on last Thursday, discussing the important subject of "salable listings." The speaker, in what he said, demonstrated the fact that salable listings were a very important item in the successful selling of real estate.

This lecture was well attended, and everyone present expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the constructive ideas received.

The fifth lecture dealing with the selling of real estate will be held at the office of the board April 22. R. E. Fisk, Healey building, will be the speaker and his subject will be "Construction Costs." Mr. Fisk has had expert training and a great deal of experience in estimating construction costs. The members of the board should be interested in this subject as it is of vital importance to real estate salesmen. All members who have registered should be on time to hear Mr. Fisk.

The associate members are manifesting a great deal of interest in these lectures and the attendance is growing at each meeting.

Many New Homes Being Built In Brookwood Hills

Marked activity has been noted in Brookwood Hills, one of the most exclusive and beautiful residential communities of Atlanta, where an important building program is in progress. A big construction campaign is also projected for the coming summer, according to Lawrence Burdett, of the Burdett Realty company that will result in the erection of a large number of splendid new homes in that section.

"Seven new homes are now being brought to completion in Brookwood Hills," said Mr. Burdett, by the following owners: F. M. Craft, George T. Adams, Mrs. J. J. Thompson, Jr., C. W. Beilfuss, Franklin B. Davis, Earl Harris, and Stoney Drake. There are also two dwellings being erected by the Burdett Realty company in the same development.

"The building program for the immediate future, which includes a number of handsome and expensive homes, includes 15 houses to be erected on lots recently sold to various purchasers by the Burdett Realty company.'

Brookwood Hills is one of the handsomest residential communities within the northside metropolitan district. It includes the homes of some of the most prominent people in the city, and there are many of the most notable dwellings of Fulton county located in this pretty development.

"We are looking forward to a very active market during the coming spring and summer," said Mr. Burdett, "and we expect to dispose of a large number of the beautiful home sites in Brookwood Hills. We have a number of inquiries on hand, indicating the interest people are taking in Atlanta residential property, and we are selling lots all the time, showing Atlanta's steady growth and expansion."

Mr. Burdett, in accord with other real estate men, expressed the utmost confidence in the growth and progress of Atlanta, saying that he believes the city will continue to expand at a rapid rate because of its many advantages and its attractiveness as a place in which to live. He also has confidence in Brookwood Hills, which he describes as one of the finest residential sections in Fulton county.

SOLDIER GIVEN ARMY DISCHARGE IN HOUSE BILL

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—The house decided today that a buck private, sentenced to ten years imprisonment for cursing when his top sergeant read an order forbidding men to wear gloves or overcoats while grooming horses, was entitled to an honorable discharge from the army.

It passed and sent to the senate a bill making such provision for George Barrett, of Oakland, Calif., said to be dying of tuberculosis at the Livermore hospital.

Barrett saw action with the twelfth artillery of the second division in the St. Miehl and Argonne offensives. He was convicted in 1919 while his outfit was on the Rhine, the reviewing authority cutting the ten year sentence to one year.

PADGET RETURNS TO CITY.

Ben Padgett, one of the best-known members of the real estate fraternity in Atlanta, was welcomed back to the city during the past week by his many friends, after a stay of several months in Florida and south Georgia. Mr. Padgett has been active in the real estate world and in civic organizations for a number of years, making for himself a prominent place among the local business men. He has been connected with some of the largest concerns in the city, and has conducted an individual establishment for himself.

After a short journey to the southern part of the state Mr. Padgett purposes returning to Atlanta and making this city his home again, according to a statement made to the writer.

AUTOS MAKING THE NORTHWARD TREK.

Large numbers of foreign automobiles are passing through Atlanta showing tags from practically every state in the union, and it is also noticeable that a large majority of them are headed north and east. It is presumed that the occupants of these cars are tourists returning from Florida, where a lull is being experienced in the remarkable activity of a few months ago, when thousands of people were attracted to Miami and other cities on account of the big real estate boom on at that time. It was generally predicted that the feverish activity that was drawing thousands of people to Florida could not last and now that the inevitable reaction is beginning to take place there are many people ready to say "I told you so."

REALTY BOARD TO HAVE ACTIVE YEAR.

President J. R. Smith, of the Atlanta Real Estate board, and one of the leading figures in the local real estate and business world, has mapped out a decidedly active year for the organization over which he presides, and he is said to have given each member of the board a part in the big work he purposes doing this year.

Mr. Smith has been in the real estate field for many years, gaining for himself a position of esteem among the members of the fraternity. He has the interests of Atlanta at heart also, having taken a big part in the development of this city. He was a member of the group of citizens that put over the Madison avenue widening, the Spring Street viaduct, the development of the Forsyth and Spring street sections and Morningside and other notable residential district within the vicinity of Atlanta.

The real estate men of Atlanta and other parts of the state are interested in the operation of the recently enacted real estate license law, and it is expected that the enforcement of that act will be a part of the work assigned to members of the Atlanta Real Estate board by President Smith. In cities of a certain population real estate agents and brokers, as well as salesmen, are required to procure a state license showing that they are authorized and fitted for the business after submitting to an examination by the members of a real estate commission recently apointed by Governor Walker. This license must be secured by every man and woman entering the realty business. Penalties are provided for violation of the act.

VACANT STORES BEING RENTED.

Passengers on Marietta, Walton, Spring and other streets in that section of the city, as well as on Peachtree, West Peachtree, Whitehall, Forsyth and Mitchell streets, have observed the large number of vacant storerooms and business buildings that are being prepared for occupancy, and the many new signs that are going up announcing the fact that the places will be occupied by the first of May or June by different kinds of concerns.

In one block on Marietta street a half dozen big business places that have stood without tenants for several months, have been leased, it is stated, and signs are now up on them telling that they have been rented and announcing the kind of business that will occupy them.

Not only has there been a number of new buildings erected on Whitehall street during the past winter, including the expensive meat packing and cold storage plants of Swift, Armour and others, but many of the stores and other buildings that have been without occupants for some time are being taken. The same condition is true on West Peachtree, Peachtree, Edgewood avenue and many other streets of Atlanta, indicating that Atlanta's promised wave of prosperity is a fact.

Real estate people are in accord in the prediction that this is to be the banner year in the Atlanta home market, and it is believed that more residential property will be sold here during the coming summer than ever before. A number of subdivisions developed during the past few months are preparing for a selling campaign that is expected to eclipse anything ever experienced in Atlanta.

Hotel Property Sold by W. J. Folsom, Of George Ware Co.

W. J. Folsom, of the George W. Ware & Company announces that during the past week he consummated the sale of the Macon hotel, Macon, Ga., to J. D. Thomas, of Columbus, Ga., one of the leading hotelmen of the state.

This transaction amounted to approximately $25,000, and is only one of the many big hotel sales made by Mr. Folsom within the past few months.

Mr. Folsom has made a specialty of selling hotels, and due to his long experience and well known klowledge of this business, he is said to have been able to take front rank as a hotel salesman in the south.

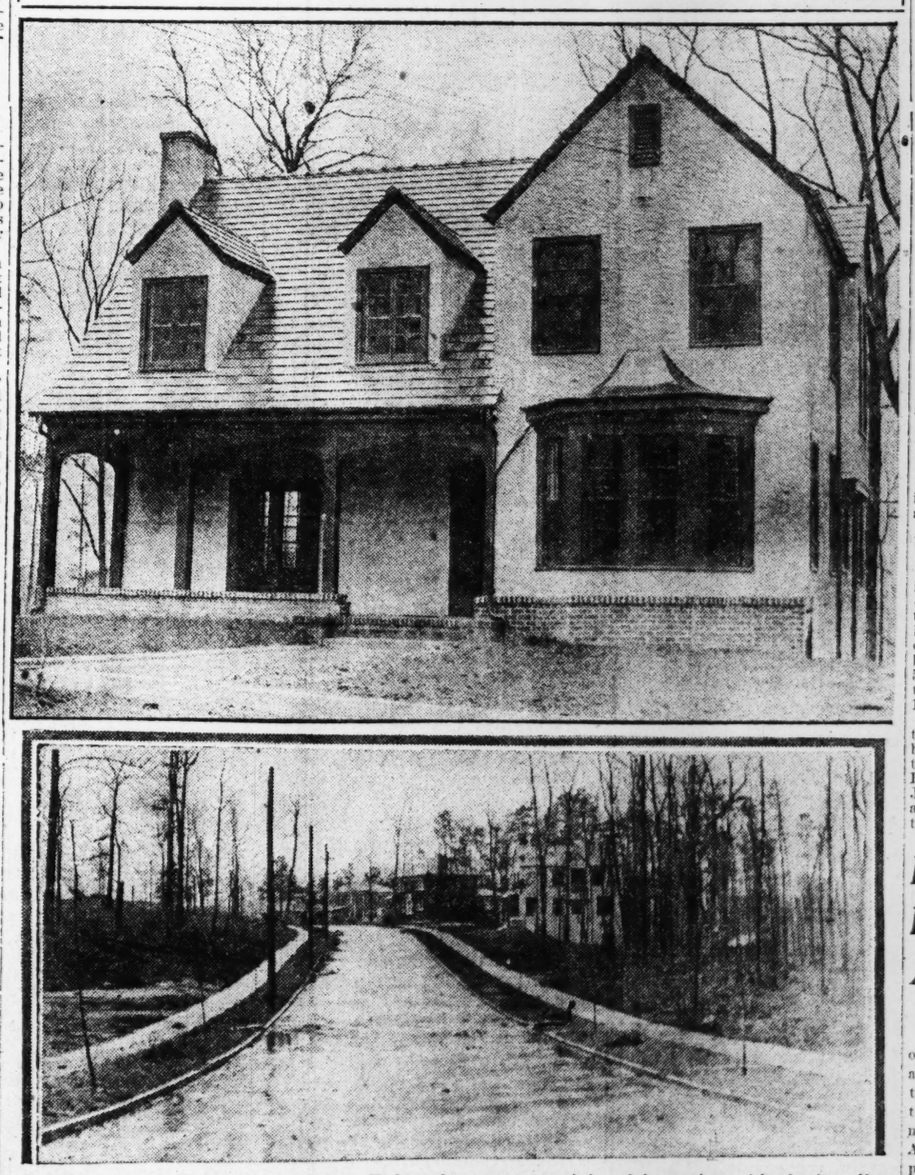

In addition Mr. Folsom has made several other large deals in Atlanta in other lines of business.

Greater Georgia Body Plans To Function As State Chamber

Macon, Ga., April 17.—(AP)—Tentative plans for Greater Georgia, Inc., an organization to function as a state chamber of comerce, have been made during the past week. Working under the direction of Dr. Harry R. McKeen, executive manager, it proposes to have five departments devoted to the general advertising of the state to the nation.

The difefrent departments of the organization will become a central collecting agency for facts concerning the state and will in turn disseminate this information to the country at large.

Home Beautiful Now Open In Handsome Collier Hills

Announcement has been made by the Columbia Trust and Realty company of the formal opening of "The House Beautiful" in Collier Hills, one of Atlanta's most beautiful and attractive residential sections. The home is designed after the Old English type of architecture, and the exterior walls are of modern stucco. The interior finish is also after the classic English type and it has been pronounced by authorities as most attractive. The interior is handsomely finished and appointed and every luxury and convenience has been included. The doors of the home will be opened for the inspection of the public at 9 o'clock this morning, it was announced.

The furniture and decorations for the Collier Hills' "home beautiful" were supplied by the Satterwhite furniture company, one of the best known firms in the city, and everything has been chosen with an eye to the harmony of the ensemble. The Satterwhite company is said to have demonstrated the value and extent of its resources in the furnishing of this splendid home. Eighteenth century period furniture has been used in the living room, and everything has been made to harmonize and heighthen the ornamental as well as the utilitarian effect.

In the period pieces chosen by Satterwhite company for this home it is shown how the great beauty of the old-time furniture may be used in modern days, none of the grace or beauty of the various pieces losing any of their beauty through the present day adaptation. The dining room, which is one of the most beautiful apartments in the house, is furnished in the Elizabeth period, being made of Spanish walnut. Beautiful high-back chairs of this romantic period are upholstered in freize, and are made to harmonize with the other pieces, as well as with the draperies, the tapestries and the coverings for the floor. An oblong dining table, with buffet and silver chest complete the furnishings of this room.

The three bedroom suites, and the draperies, as well as the decorations in the sleeping apartments, are said to be highly attractive. Each article blends and harmonizes with pleasing effect. One of the bedroom suites is a Huguenot walnut set of eight pieces, dresser, chest of drawers, twin beds of "bow-end" type, toilet tables, chairs and "love nest" seat.

A nursery of colonial design is another room that will appeal to those who love pretty dwelling places. The furniture in this room is of the conventional Dutch design. The pieces are decorated with the quaint litttle Dutch figures. This room, it is pointed out, would delight the heart of any child. The color tone in the nursery is gray, each piece being highly enameled and beautified. Nothing is left undone here that would contribute to the juvenile happiness.

Invitations have been cordially extended to the public to visit this model home by the Columbia Trust and Realty company, one of the leading firms in the Atlanta real estate world. The house is located on Wycklyff road, between 28th street and Collier road.

All electrical appliances were furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power company.

Big Demand for Ga. Farm Lands Seen by Auction Company

"We have had a splendid campaign of selling during the past few weeks, and our list of prospects indicates that there will be a continual activity in Georgia farm lands," said a member of the Pierce-Todd-Wordham Auction company, one of the most prominent real estate sales concerns in the state, whose offices are in the Candler building.

"Not only have we been able to sell numbers of Georgia farms, but we have been able to procure good prices. The demand for Georgia agricultural land is splendid, and there is no doubt that this state is attracting thousands of people to become citizens."

The Pierce-Todd-Worsham Auction company, with a staff of efficient salesmen, recently has closed a notable auction at Perry, Ga., where several hundred acres of agricultural land was sold at good prices. Sales are booked for Americus, one at Augusta, Moultrie, Brunswick, Tuskegee, Ala.; Talladega, Ala.; Atlanta, and Reynolds, Georgia.

During the past week sales were conducted by the above company at Ringgold, Ga.; Augusta, Piedmont, Ala., and Americus, Ga.

"We have a most active summer ahead of us," said a member of the firm, "and there is every prospect that we will have about as much business as we can handle with our present forces."

Rome, Ga., April 17.—(Special)—The week of April 19-24 has been designated as "Clean-up and Paint-up" week in Rome, by a proclamation signed by George P. Weathers, chairman of the city commission.

"Clean-up and Paint-up week" has been conducted by the Woman's club for many years in the city of Rome. Committees are to be named to work in each ward and citizens are urged to clean their yards and streets thoroughly.

Country Club Elects

Rome, Ga., April 17.—(Special)—Henry J. Arnold has been elected president of the Coosa Country club to succeed H. E. Jelley, who has been president-treasurer for the past year.

Other officers elected were R. M. Wyatt, vice president; D. B. Magruder, secretary, re-elected; H. E. Kelley, re-elected treasurer.

These officers with the following will compose the government board of the recreation center: Dean Owens, Albert Fahy, T. A. Lamar, Otis Daniel and Geston Garner.

The report for the past year of the president and secretary showed a number of improvements in the club building and grounds, and contained several important recommendations for the incoming administration.

FUR-TRADING POST NOW PLANNED IN ARCTIC REGION

Vancouver, B. C., April 17.—(AP)—Up on the shores of Boothia peninsula, as close as it is possible to get to the magnetic pole, the Hudson Bay Company's ship Baymaud, formerly the Maud, in which Roald Amundsen had hoped to drift across the North Pole a few years ago will establish a fur trading post this year to secure some of the famous iridescent tipped white fox furs, samples of which came out last year.

Several islands northwest of Boothia peninsula are reported to have these foxes, which are very valuable. It is the intention of the company to leave the Baymaud in the Arctic all next winter and she may end her days in the waters where Amundsen intended she should operate when he built her.

Definite planting of the British flag on all Canadian islands touched by the Baymaud also will be a feature of the trip.

AGED LIFE-SAVER, WHO RESCUED 1,000, DEAD IN LOUISVILLE

Louisville, Ky., April 17.—(AP)—John F. Gillooly, 70, veteran lifesaver, who is estimated to have saved more than a thousand lives, died here today. His two-score or more years' service at the falls of the Ohio river here was recognized by special acts of congress and the Kentucky assembly.

Heart disease brought death to the lifeguard, who, until he was retired in 1917, was in charge of the United States coast guard life saving station here.

His rescue workers were said to have been the first to cross the Miami river during the Dayton, Ohio, flood of 1913.

Counterfeit Auto Tags Cause Arrest Of Fitzgerald Men

Fitzgerald, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Making counterfeit auto tags was a lucrative side line pursued by William Day, one of the guards at the county convict camp, until he was placed under arrest and bound over to the grand jury in session this week.

The grand jury returned an indictment against him Tuesday and also against two of his recent customers, on whose cars two auto tags were found, converted from a 1924 to a 1926 tag. John Welch, a negro, and J. B. Lawson, white, were jointly indicted with Day for having the counterfeit tags and will be tried next Wednesday. Day sold the tags at $3 each, it is claimed.

ALLEGED BUCKET SHOP OWNER FOUND GUILTY

New York, April 17.—(AP)—Phillip Kastel, known as Dandy Phil, was found guilty in federal court today by the third jury which has tried him on charges of mail frauds and bucket shop operations in connection with the bankrupt brokerage house of Daniel Dillon & Company. After deliberating 23 hours the jury returned a verdict, recommending clemency. Two previous trials of Kastel ended in the juries disagreeing.

Judge Hand set Thursday for hearing motions to set aside the verdict. Bail for Kastel was continued at $10,000, to be increased to $20,000 Monday.

SIX BIDS RECEIVED FOR MOBILE STATION

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—Six bids were received for construction of the quarantine station building on Dauphin Island, Mobile, Ala., it was announced today by the treasury.

C. Samford, of Montgomery, submitted the lowest bid of $175,000. The next lowest bid of $189,000 by Algernon Blair, of Montgomery, was the only Mobile bidder and this bid was third, being $189,478.

GEORGIA CITIZENS READY TO OBSERVE FORESTRY WEEK

American Forest week will be observed in Atlanta and throughout America this week with appropriate exercises at the schools, civic clubs and other places, according to announcement of B. M. Lufburrow, state forester.

The idea of devoting seven days in the year to forestry education originated on the Pacific coast in 1920. President Harding in 1922 and 1923 issued proclamations which brought the government behind the idea. President Coolidge sanctioned the plan and issued subsequent proclamations.

Out of the many "weeks" this is the only one the government has given such recognition for five years. Many governors have issued proclamations and Governor Walker has joined hands with them.

Mr. Lufburrow stated a program has been arranged for an observance at the Chamber of Commerce at 8 o'clock Wednesday. The feature will be the address by County Commissioner Paul S. Etcheridge, whose subject is "A Recreational and Demonstration Forest for Fulton County."

C. D. Dudley, president of the Atlanta Hoo-Hoo Club of Lumbermen, will preside. Other speakers include C. B. Harman, member of the Georgia forestry commission; C. A. Cobb, editor Southern Ruralist, and Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, director; H. L. Wills, assistant to the vice president, Georgia Railway and Power company; Otto Katsenstein, W. B. Willingham and others. A woodcraft demonstration will be presented by the Edgewood troop of Boy Scouts with the aid of J. J. Foote, scoutmaster.

More Than a Printed Page

It takes more than columns of words set in type to build a service like that given, day in and day out, to the people of Atlanta by The Constitution's A-B-C Classified Advertising Page.

The real story back of the little ads that you see under the different headings lies in the service that these advertisers, as well as the hundreds of readers who watch the wants and offers, are getting every day.

It's service that works "both ways from the middle." The users of these little ads are looking for results. The many who consult the classified columns daily are on the lookout for opportunities.

And The Constitution gives both groups what they want. That's service!

Be sure that you read the A-B-C Classified ads —today and every day.

SALESMEN WANTED

AVONDALE ESTATES

WE wish to get in touch immediately with ten strictly high-class, high-powered salesmen. The commission checks of the kind of men we want, and the only kind we expect to employ, should run close to four figures a month. Certainly not less than from three to five hundred per week throughout the entire spring and fall seasons. Our present organization is wholly inadequate to handle the thousands of live prospects who are visiting Avondale daily. Many of our salesmen made over $2,000.00 per month during active season last year and on account of improved conditions in Atlanta we naturally expect much larger volume this year.

MEN with real estate training preferred but experience not essential. What we want are men with real sales ability—no matter what past experience, whether life insurance, automobile or specialty lines. If you are the type we want we can train you in few days time.

BIG selling campaign backed by dominating advertising schedules begins immediately. Elaborately equipped down town sales room located on Peachtree street opens in few days. All applicants must own cars. See John H. Byrley, general manager, between 10 and 12 a. m.

HAYNES MANOR

Are you planning to build your home this spring?
If so, the first and most important thing is to select a lot.
Where can you find a lot so exactly suited to your needs as in Haynes Manor; with city improvements, and yet with the fresh air and beautiful surroundings of the country?
The lots are elevated, with beautiful views in every direction.
They are restricted so that you will be protected in building the home you want, and will not be crowded out by business or other undesirable improvements.
Only fifteen minutes' ride in your car, and a short walk from the Peachtree street car line.
Beautiful Peachtree Battle Avenue with its concrete paving, extends entirely through the property.
No lot less than 100 feet in width, and from 200 to 350 feet in depth. Plenty of room and no danger of crowding.
THE BUILDING OF SEVERAL HANDSOME HOMES WILL BE STARTED IMMEDIATELY.
Let us show you these lots. You will enjoy a ride through Haynes Manor.

Is Here In NORTH BOULEVARD PARK!!!

Is There a Better Insurance for the Future of Your Family?

Here is a home development, the desirability of which has been proven by the greatest of all tests—that of TIME

NATIONAL BETTER HOMES COMMITTEE SELECT

North Boulevard Park for Better Home No. 1 Opening April 26th

NORTH BOULEVARD PARK is not—strictly speaking—a new subdivision. It has been developed far past its first stages. Streets have been paved, improvements have been installed; it is necessary to offer additional lots as all heretofore offered for sale have been sold and homes built thereon.

BOULEVARD PARK has for several years been an integral part of Atlanta—its beauty of streets and location advantages may now be favorably compared to any part of the city.

THIS NEW UNIT of Boulevard Park offers a double advantage—that of a time-tested section PLUS the profit made before prices are advanced along with the development.

BETTER HOMES SELECTION

The fact that the National Board of Better Homes has selected North Boulevard Park to build Better Home No. 1 is proof enough of its popularity in price and location. North Boulevard Park meets all requirements of the National Better Homes Committee; location, price, churches, schools, busses, street cars and general development of this beautiful property.

BUY A LOT HERE NOW—at the present low cost for desirable North Side property—and build a home of your own. It will mean Dividends in rent saved . . . Dividends in comfort . . . Dividends in actual cash should you wish to sell in the future.

HERE ARE A FEW ADVANTAGES OFFERED IN NORTH BOULEVARD PARK

The property is adjoining Piedmont Park, a beautiful recreation and play ground, affording such pleasures and privileges as:

A NEW SWIMMING POOL AND BATH HOUSE ACCOMMODATIONS NOW BEING BUILT AT A COST OF $50,000
TENNIS COURTS
BASEBALL GROUNDS
GOLF COURSE

North Boulevard Park is connected with the main traffic arteries of the city by wide, paved boulevards; convenient to the Boys' New High School and Virginia Avenue Grammar School; close to churches; is accessible to street car line.

Every Home Site in North Boulevard Park Faces the New City Park Now Being Developed by the City of Atlanta

WHO SAID

"THERE WAS NOTHING IN A NAME?" If you believe there ISN'T just drive out to Sylvan Hills and ask anybody who lives out there who builds the prettiest bungalows in Sylvan Hills, and see if the answer isn't the same from everybody—HOPKINS, HOPKINS—even those who bought from the other fellow will say "Oh they are the prettiest bungalows I ever saw. I just wish I could sell mine so I could get him to build me one," and it is just this kind of talk that is selling my bungalows as fast as completed. I was engaged in Sylvan Hills all last year, every bungalow I built was sold as fast as completed; I have three under construction now. Sold one of them last week for spot cash. This makes the second one I have sold in Sylvan Hills for cash. People with money are going to Sylvan Hills. Yes, there IS something in a NAME. My bungalows are different—entirely different from all others. Some have tried to duplicate them but they can't—so cozy, neat, attractive, homelike and so conveniently arranged. They sell in other sections for $9,000 to $10,000. My price, $6,500 to $7,000. Will take your vacant lot as part pay. P. B. Hopkins & Son, Owners and Builders, 310 Palmer Building. WAlnut 4270.

At the junction of Piedmont and Ivey Roads we have a beautiful tract fronting 275 feet on Piedmont and 270 feet on Ivey with depth of 450 feet on one side. With beautiful trees, good elevation and within one block of school and street car line. This property has unusual advantages. The price is most attractive and terms are good. Exclusive agents.

ADAIR HOMES
DRUID HILLS

WE have an especially attractive home to offer on one of the most prominent roads in Druid Hills. Located on a lovely lot, 100x300 feet, with several shade trees and shrubbery. This is an eight-room, two-story, red brick, with four bedrooms and two tile baths; also large sleeping porch; extra toilet and lavatory downstairs. There is a tile, screened-in porch, opening from the living room, while on the other side of the living room is a large sun parlor. Plenty of closet space, steam heat, cement basement, side drive, double garage with servants' quarters. Price $28,500.

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS SECTION

A MOST attractive two-story, hollow tile home, located on a level lot with lovely shade trees. There is a tile terrace across the front of the house; cement side drive and double garage with two servants' rooms and bath. The house contains eight rooms, with four bedrooms and two tile baths; hardwood floors throughout; steam heat; slate roof. Price $28,500.

SPRINGDALE ROAD

THIS place was built especially for the present owner, under the supervision of one of Atlanta's foremost architects, no money being spared to make it complete in every detail. It is located on a beautifully shaded lot and has a frontage of 100 feet. This house has eight rooms with four bedrooms and two tile baths; plenty of closet space. An attractive feature of this home is the extra large sun parlor with Italian tile flooring. The living room is also very spacious and has a lovely fireplace, which adds to its beauty and comfort. Needless to say, all the floors are hardwood. The house is heated by steam, has cement basement, side drive and garage for three cars. Price $27,500.

PALISADE ROAD

THIS is a lovely, two-story, red brick home with slate roof, elevated lot. Downstairs there is a living room, dining room, glassed-in sun parlor, breakfast room and kitchen; upstairs there are three bedrooms and a sleeping porch; also two tile baths. There is a cement side drive, double garage, servant's room and bath. Our price of $18,500 is extremely attractive for a home in this location.

FOREIGN TRADE CLUB WILL HEAR NOTABLES

A meeting of the Atlanta Foreign Trade club will be held Tuesday night in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

Dr. Irving R. Kaiser, who spent 1920 to 1924 in Germany conducting extensive scientific researches into the psychology, social attitude and customs of the German people, will speak on "The Post-War Psychology of the German People." His talk will have special reference to advertising and selling of American products in Germany.

I. H. Hermann, of the staff of "La Revista Mercantil," a leading textile journal in Spanish, who is just back from 11 month's residence in various South American countries, will present glimpses of conditions as he found them in the southern republics and business prospects in Latin America for Atlanta manufacturers.

F. C. Faucett, recently returned from Portuguese, Angola, and the Belgian Congo, will relate his interesting experiences in the Dark Continent.

Final preparations will be discussed for attending the annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council to be held in Charleston, April 28-30. It was announced that members of the Atlanta delegation will be taken to Charleston and return without cost by the Mack International Motor Truck corporation, in the company's large passenger buses, touring interesting points in Georgia and the Carolinas en route.

LAST RITES TODAY FOR N. M. DANIEL, LOCAL BUILDER

Funeral services for N. M. Daniel, well known Atlanta contractor and architect, who died at his home, 217 Central avenue, early Friday, will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from the chapel of Harry G. Poole.

Mr. Daniel moved to Atlanta in 1894 from Chattanooga and had been active in building operations in the city, devoting practically all of his time to the building of residences. He was a native of Virginia.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Cornelia F. Daniel; five sons, John Daniel, of San Antonio, Tex.; Otey Daniel, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Clyde Daniel, of Macon; Hal and Jack Daniel, of Atlanta; a daughter, Mrs. F. H. Theile, of Knoxville, Tenn.; and five grandchildren.

OSTEOPATHS MEET HERE THIS WEEK FOR 2-DAY SESSION

Dr. C. J. Gaddis, of Chicago, national secretary of the American Osteopathic association and editor of the American Osteopathic Journal, will deliver the principal address Friday afternoon at the opening session of the annual convention of the Georgia Osteopathic association, at the Biltmore hotel.

Dr. C. S. Brooks, of Columbus, Ga., president of the Georgia association, will have charge at the meetings which will be attended by leading osteopaths from all sections of the state.

Other prominent experts on osteopathic treatment will speak at the business sessions during Friday and Saturday.

FATE OF RADIO UP TO CONGRESS

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—The future of radio broadcasting regulation apparently rests with congress, in the opinion of Stephen B. Davis, acting secretary of commerce, after a telephone talk with officials in Chicago regarding the decision of Federal Judge Wilkerson, adverse to the government's contentions in the "air piracy" case against the Zenith Radio corporation.

The court of appeals of the District of Columbia has handed down a decision precisely opposite to the Chicago ruling, he said, so that "apparently we have two opinions which are in hopeless conflict." The government cannot appeal from the Chicago decision, because it was based on a criminal information.

"While I have not seen the text of the decision and therefore cannot have any final opinion on it," said Mr. Davis, "it seems from reports to be a definite holding that the 1912 radio act confers no authority upon anyone to assign either wave lengths or time to radio stations. If this is the view of the law, it means that neither broadcasting nor other forms of radio communication are subject to any federal regulation, but that station operators may select wave lengths and time at their wish.

"Secretary Hoover has always realized, and frequently expressed, the insufficiency of the 1912 law, and largely for that reason has dealt with the entire subject through annual conferences of all persons interested in radio communication, whether as transmitters or listeners. The conclusions of these conferences have almost universally been put into practice, so that radio has been largely a self-regulated industry.

"The future would seem to depend entirely upon the attitude of congress towards legislation and its determination as to whether or not federal control of the situation shall be continued."

I. O. O. F. of Sixteenth Division Meet Friday At Fulton Lodge, 32

The annual spring convention of the 16th division of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Atlanta will be held Friday night at Fulton lodge, No. 32, at the temple, corner Decatur and Moore streets, it is announced by Fletcher W. Laird, division deputy grand secretary.

The meeting will open with public exercises at 8 o'clock, featured by a special musical program. Following this the business session will be held with W. H. Johnson, division deputy grand master, presiding. Reading of reports and election of officers for the ensuing year will be features of this session. Several grand lodge officers are expected to attend.

The 16th division is composed of the membership of the 16 subordinate lodges in Atlanta and Fulton county, with a total membership of more than 2,500.

Among officers of the 16th division are: W. H. Johnson, division deputy grand master; Walter S. McNeal, Jr., division deputy grand warden; Fletcher W. Laird, division deputy grand secretary; J. A. Grady, division deputy grand treasurer; Dr. W. S. McNeal, Sr., division deputy grand chaplain; W. E. Davis, division deputy grand marshal; John Smith, division deputy grand conductor; J. T. Upchurch, division deputy grand guardian, and T. M. Speer, division deputy grand herald.

Problem of Kitchen Now Being Solved By Using Linoleum

BY CHRISTINE DAYE.

Women of today no longer want their kitchens to be glaring white laboratories that were thought ideal a few seasons back. They have learned that well-thought-out color effects are both more pleasing to one's esthetic sense and easier on the eyes.

These colorful new kitchens are receiving a great deal of attention in the editorial columns of the household magazines. Here, too, the practical side of the question is also being discussed, for it is of great importance to know how linoleum should be laid. As Gladys Beckett Jones says in The Modern Priscilla:

"If you could have exactly the kind of kitchen floor that you wanted, what would you choose? A beautiful floor! Yes, the kitchen floor can be beautiful, and we at the Priscilla proving plant are firm believers that the kitchen should be as attractive as any room in the house. If you could see our kitchen floors, I am sure you would say they are beautiful enough to grace even a front hall. But beauty is not enough. A floor must be practical, and as the kitchen is the working center of the house, the kitchen floor must be easy to clean, comfortable to stand on, and resistant to water and grease, for grease-spatters and water-spills, no matter how excellent our technique, are sometimes inevitable. This sets our standard for a satisfactory kitchen floor.

"From our point of view the floor finish that most nearly meets the standards that we have set for this ideal floor covering is linoleum. If we could have a free choice in the matter of a kitchen floor covering, regardless of price, we would select an inlaid linoleum. The pattern and color in this grade of linoleum goes right through to the burlap that forms the back. There can be no wearing off of the pattern, and until the linoleum is completely worn out you still have the same attractive colorings that you bought. If this grade of linoleum is properly laid and given the right kind of care, it will wear for an indefinite period. The director of a girls' school told me that the linoleum in the cookery laboratory of the school has been in constant use for over 20 years and that it showed no real signs of wear yet.

"One secret in getting long life from your linoleum is always to lay it on a level floor surface. Have the floor planed and smoothed, then put down a layer of felt lining and paste it firmly to the floor, using the paste that is especially made for the purpose. This makes a smooth foundation that will keep the linoleum from buckling or cracking. Over this lay the linoleum, taking particular care to plan out the placing of the seams with the man doing the work.

"In general, it is best not to have seams where there will be a great deal of walking, or around the sink or tubs where water might drip down on the floor. The linoleum is then cemented to the lining and rolled with a weighted roller. Waterproof cement (without nails or tacks) is used along the edges to hold down the seams of the linoleum. If this precaution is not taken the linoleum will open at the seams and you will have a wide crack, and if brads are used there will be a crack around each and every one, thus reducing the wearing qualities of the linoleum."

BILL TO LIGHTEN BANKRUPTCY LAWS PASSED BY HOUSE

Washington, April 17.—(AP)—The Michiner bill designed to lighten the bankruptcy laws was passed by the house today as a substitute for a similar senate bill. An adjustment of differences between the two proposals will be sought in conference.

The Michiner bill in the opinion of the house proposed a more complete and advisable revision on the bankruptcy laws than was contemplated by the senate measure, although both were drafted with the same purpose in view.

KAHN LUNCHEON WILL BE ATTENDED BY CITY'S LEADERS

Numerous responses have been received by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to invitations sent out to its members and other representative business men for the luncheon to be given next Friday to Otto H. Kahn, president of the Metropolitan Opera company, of New York, and a party of distinguished financiers who will come with him to attend grand opera in Atlanta.

Mrs. Peterson Closes Brilliant Four Years' Administration

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, who has just closed a brilliant and successful four-year administration as president of the Fifth District P.-T. A., issues the following message to the associations throughout the district:

"This is the last meeting at which I will serve you as your district leader. For four years it has been my joy and privilege to watch the fifth district work grow. Four years ago we were a small body of workers. As an illustration, in Atlanta only 17 associations were affiliated with the state and national organization. Today we have in Atlanta alone 76 associations. This includes the church associations and the Pre-School Age circles.

"I could not let this opportunity pass without paying a tribute to the presidents of the Atlanta council. Three presidents have served the Atlanta council since I have been fifth district leader. Mrs. Frank McCormack, Mrs. E. D. McDonald and Mrs. George Howsmon. To their spirit of cooperation and unselfish service is due the fact that Atlanta will stand 100 per cent affiliated with the state and national at the coming convention.

"From Miss Kathleen Mitchell, supervisor; and from the superintendents of the Fulton county schools, I have had consistent support. Miss Mitchell has been tireless in her efforts to further the parent-teacher work in the county. She has served as an organizer among the country schools, organizing wherever it seemed wise to do so.

Fulton Council.

"The Fulton county council is most active, as is also its Presidents' club. The Fulton county council is the only council in the fifth district getting out a year book. In DeKalb county we have made much progress. We now have 19 active affiliated associations, and a splendid DeKalb county council, and through this council the extension work in the county has been carried forward, and many associations in the rural districts have been formed. Some progress has been made in Campbell county. We now have associations in Fairburn and Palmetto. Other associations have been formed in Campbell county, but they have not yet affiliated with the state and national. Very little progress has been made in Rockdale county. This is largely a rural section, and much time and effort will be required to extend the work in this county. Through some error Douglas county was placed in the seventh district. I would recommend that the executive board be requested to place Douglas county in the fifth district. We have a very young but most thriving church Parent-Teacher council, the first of its kind formed in America. These church associations are being added to the state and national as rapidly as possible.

"Under the leadership of Mrs. J. C. Malone, fifth district chairman, the work of the Pre-School Age circles has had a marvelous growth. I would not attempt to itemize for you the detail work necessarily done by a district leader. But to give you some idea of the detail work involved, in one month I had 439 telephone calls, and held 42 conferences.

"During the past year I have held three district meetings and four executive board meetings; have attended the state executive board meeting and the seventh district meeting; attended meetings of the Atlanta council, Fulton county council, DeKalb county council, church council, Pre-School age groups, citizenship groups, Welfare association, Fifth District Federation of Women's clubs; meetings of Atlanta Parent-Teacher Presidents' club; have attended many Parent-Teacher meetings; spoke at four child welfare day celebrations, and spoke several times in the interest of bonds for schools. But the work has not been a burden but a joy, because every day I have seen progress.

Recommendations.

"There are a few recommendations which my observation has convinced me would be wise: 1. That the outgoing president be urged to show to the district and to the state a spirit of helpfulness, by sending to the district and to the state president the name of the incoming president. This would save much time, effort and material which now goes to waste. 2. That associations be requested that in making up budget for next year, an amount be put in for the endowment fund. In this way, associations will make their plans to take care of the fund in a systematic and business-like manner. 3. That we urge that the state executive board work out a plan whereby the time for closing all reports would be made the same date. We now have one time for the report of activities, another for standard of excellence, another for the local council, another for the district and the president is kept busy checking up records and making reports. 4. That we again call the attention of the executive board to the need of a different form of standard of excellence blank for high school, elementary schools, rural schools, church schools and Pre-School Age circles; also that we call attention to the need for state chairmen furnishing to district chairmen an outline of work during the summer. 5. That the date of the district meeting be changed from the first Friday to the first Wednesday, because of the difficulty of getting publicity to the newspapers after an all-day session on Friday.

"In closing, I can only wish for my successor in office that she have as coworkers as loyal and efficient officers as have served with me. Mrs. Arthur Tufts and Mrs. Baynard Willingham, vice presidents, have been most cooperative and helpful at all times. The treasurer, Mrs. W. F. Jackson, needs no words of praise from me. Her work shows for itself. In the person of Mrs. Stanton I have had the most efficient, the most loyal, the most enthusiastic secretary any chairman could have asked for. For four years she has served with me; the burden of much of the detail work of preparing for a district meeting has fallen on her shoulders, and she has at all times cheerfully assumed her responsibilities. My hat is off to her as the most efficient, the most loyal secretary any organization has ever had.

"My best wishes, my best endeavors will always be to help the district to continue to grow in numbers and in usefulness."

Lee Street P.-T. A. Features "Thrift" At Meeting

The Lee Street P.-T.A. featured a "Thrift" program at its regular meeting Thursday afternoon in the school auditorium at which D. M. Therrell, member of the board of education from the seventh ward, was speaker. Upon entering each member received a dainty souvenir, a miniature umbrella, carrying out the thrift idea. These were presented by Miss Carol Black, young daughter of Mrs. A. F. Black, the president, and were the handwork of Miss Jackson's class.

Delightful music was rendered by the Mandolin club of Joe Brown Junior High under the direction of Miss McLaughlin. A piano duet by Miss Evelyn Reynolds and Miss Ruby Lee Reynolds and a vocal solo by Miss Mary Alice Chapman, accompanied by Miss Laura Chapman were greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Black introduced Mr. Therrell, whose subject, "Thift," was presented in a most interesting manner. He particularly stressed having a worthwhile goal in like and the wise use of one's resources for the attainment of that goal. "The goal of every parent should be to see that their children are properly educated and trained for good citizenship," said Mr. Therrell.

Mrs. Black told of the last district meeting she attended and gave as outstanding achievements for the year the $2,582.15 made principally on paper sales and cafeteria and an increased membership of 150 paid members.

In giving $100 to the Alice M. Hilbun Endowment fund Miss Laura G. Wood, principal, was named as a "founder." To the same fund $5 in honor of Professor Sutton, superintendent of schools; $2 in honor of Mrs. George M. Howsmon, president of council, and $3 in honor of Mrs. Clifford Walker, founder of pre-school circle, have been contributed. The association has also contributed $25 to the educational convention fund.

Mrs. Black appointed a nominating committee composed of Mrs. L. F. Chapman, Mrs. W. M. Moncrief, Mrs. A. M. George, Miss Blanche Johnston and Miss Inez Durham to report at the May meeting of officers for the new year. Delegates to the state convention to be held at the Ansley hotel the week of May 3, are: Mrs. A. F. Black, Mrs. Bratton Davies, Mrs. A. P. Stewart, Mrs. W. M. Moncrief and Mrs. J. P. Hill.

Mrs. E. H. Burger announced that a meeting of the pre-school circle will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock with Mrs. Howe in charge. Registration date is April 27, beginning at 8 o'clock in the morning.

Press Breakfast Will Be Event Of Convention

One of the most delightful features of the state and national Parent-Teacher convention will be the press breakfast to be given on the morning of May 3 at the Henry Grady hotel. This breakfast has been planned by the fifth district council as a compliment to Mrs. George P. Ross, of Savannah, state chairman of publicity, and as an expression of appreciation for the splendid work she has done, and to give the press chairmen of the state an opportunity to meet the state publicity chairmen. The three Atlanta newspapers, The Constitution, Journal and Georgian, are cooperating with the Parent-Teacher associations in making the breakfast a success. Several unique features have been planned. The singing will be led by Mrs. E. R. Hines, of Milledgeville.

In addition to Mrs. Ross several publicity women of note will be present, among these being Mrs. Laura Underhill Kohn, national chairman of publicity; Mrs. H. A. Gibson, regional chairman of publicity, and the editors of the parent-teacher pages of many newspapers throughout the state.

Greetings from the district will be given by Mrs. W. J. Thebaut, district chairman of publicity. Mrs. H. A. Gibson, of Macon, will respond. Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, president of the fifth district council, will respond to the toast, "Our Visitors." She will then present Mrs. George Ross, who will be in charge of the rest of the program.

Other speakers will be Mrs. Laura Underhill Kohn, William Cole Jones, James B. Nevin and James A. Hollomon.

Invitations have been extended to the parent-teacher publicity chairmen throughout the state, to the representatives of the newspapers handling parent-teacher news, to the state and national officers, to district officers and chairmen, to representatives of the Associated Press, to all presidents of state organizations in America, and to many others interested in parent-teacher work.

Reservations for the breakfast must be made with Mrs. C. O. Estes, 120 Montgomery street, Decatur, Ga. Only 250 reservations can be taken, so those wishing to attend must make reservations promptly. Plate will be 75 cents.

Druid Hills P.-T. A. Activities Reported.

At the meeting of the P.-T. A. of the Druid Hills Presbyterian church, held at the church on Friday evening, the report of the playgrounds committee was of particular interest, showing the marked success of this work under the efficient management of Mrs. Fred Ragland

The president, Mrs. W. T. Asher, presided, and introduced Mrs. Charles Morris, who made an interesting talk on the work of the association.

A report from the membership committee showed that this committee is endeavoring to enlist the interest of every member of the church in the progressive activities of the association.

Reports were heard from Mrs. R. D. Hardy on the work of the Atlanta church council, and from Mrs. D. G. Cheatwood, chairman of social service. Harllee Branch, superintendent of the Sunday school, made an impressive talk on the spiritual life of the church and Sunday school.

Judge J. F. McClelland and F. C. Hyers, from the Men's Bible class, brought a word of greeting from the class and assured the association their hearty cooperation in all its undertakings.

Several vocal solos were rendered by Nora Allen, accompanied by Signor Volpi. R. L. Barrett led in prayer and the association was adjourned.

P.-T. A. Citizenship Luncheon Proves Wonderful Success

One of the most notable civic luncheons ever held in Atlanta was held at the Henry Grady last Thursday by the citizenship committee of the P.-T. A. council, assisted by the P.-T. A. Presidents' club. This was the fifth of the annual affairs, bringing together in closer union the home, the school and the church.

The spacious dining room of the Henry Grady was decorated with American flags, while the long tables were strewn with smilax interspersed with flags.

Two hundred were present, consisting of principal, P.-T. A. president and citizenship chairman, ministers and friends from each public school. It was a most impressive and enthusiastic meeting, Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, citizenship chairman of the P.-T. A. council, presiding. After prayer by Rev. R. A. Howland, of the Ormewood Park Presbyterian church, and the pledge to the flag by the entire gathering, Mrs. Mellichamp introduced Mrs. C. J. Foster, president of the Presidents' club.

The presidents of each P.-T. A. introduced the principal, minister and citizenship chairman and friends of the 49 public schools of Atlanta, Tech High having the largest number present. The Central Presbyterian church P.-T. A. was introduced, also representatives of a number of Fulton county schools.

Mrs. W. P. Davis of the Grant Park school was introduced and spoke for the grammar schools; S. M. Hastings, of O'Keefe Junior High for the junior highs and W. C. Lowe of Commercial High for the senior highs.

Mrs. George Howsmon, president of P.-T. A. council, was introduced, also Mrs. Frank M. Lichtenwalter, president of Fulton County P.-T. A. council, Mrs. C. H. Cushman of R. L. Hope, Mrs. D. B. Frisbee of Peachtree Heights and Miss Kathleen Mitchell of the county.

Dr. R. M. Eubanks represented the board of education. Dr. Willis A. Sutton stressed registering and voting, also running Christian men and then voting for them for office. Jere Wells, superintendent of the Fulton county schools, was impressed with the value of such enthusiastic meetings for good citizenship. He introduced Paul Donehoo, who in turn introduced Mrs. Winifred Hathaway, associate director of the Commission for the Prevention of Blindness in America, with headquarters in New York. Mrs. Hathaway told of the appalling need of attention to the eyes in the schools and homes of America.

Marvin Williams announced the formation of plans to stage a parade by the youth of Atlanta, in support of the cause of prohibition. The entire assembly joined in a toast to Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp as the torch bearer of citizenship in the public schools of Atlanta and were dismissed by Rev. A. W. Reaves, of the Grant Park Baptist church.

Mrs. Mellichamp said that her committee deserved credit for making this luncheon possible. They were Mrs. Frank Coursey, Mrs. M. Rich, Mrs. W. F. Mobley, Mrs. F. G. Cason, and Mrs. John D. Evans.

The following guests were present: Mrs. W. A. Vernoy, Mrs. J. B. Morgan, Mrs. W. F. Mobley, Mrs. J. E. Tippin, Miss Hannah B. Wilson, Dr. C. P. McLaughlin, Mrs. Frank S. Cowart, B. J. W. P.-T. A. Delegates To Be Honored At Social Affairs

Delightful and interesting social affairs have been planned for the delegates who will attend the national P.-T. A. convention to be held in Atlanta the week of May 3.

On Sunday afternoon, May 2, local sponsors for the delegates to the convention from the various states will escort their guests to visit points of interest throughout the city, such as the Cyclorama at Grant Park, the Wren's Nest, home of Joel Chandler Harris, and the parks.

On Monday evening, May 3, an elaborate banquet will be given on the roof garden of the Ansley hotel, with the Atlanta P.-T. A. council as hostess. All interested in Parent-Teacher work are invited. The Atlanta public schools will provide lovely favors for the banquet, the place cards for the speakers' table, and baskets for the flowers.

On Wednesday, May 5, a reception will be given at the executive mansion to which all in attendance at the convention will be invited. The Parent-Teacher council of Atlanta will be hostess on this occasion.

On Thursday, May 6, at 3:30 o'clock the impressive ceremonw of tree planting will take place at Piedmont park, in memory of Mrs. Theodore Burney, the founder of the Nation Convention of Parents and Teachers. The state presidents will participate in this, each bringing soil from her own state to be placed on the roots of the tree. A ride to Stone Mountain will follow the tree planting. Cars will be provided for all delegates, and the DeKalb council will act as hostess at the mountain side where tea will be served.

On Friday, May 7, at 12:30 o'clock the presidents' luncheon will be held at the Ansley hotel. This will be open to all delegates and visitors.

Program Announced For State P.-T. A. Convention in May

The following program is announced for the Georgia state P.-T. A. convention, which will meet in Atlanta Monday, May 3, for one day only with headquarters at the Henry Grady hotel:

Convention opens 9 a. m.—First Baptist church.

Registration at hotel, 2 to 7 p. m., May 2; 7 a. m., May 3.

Union service at First Baptist church Sunday evening for P.-T. A.

Convention theme: "Every School Room a Workshop."

Program.

Reports of officers.

Report of directors of departments (for committees).

Revision of constitution and by-laws.

Resolutions.

Election of officers.

Announcement of poster contest winners.

Awarding of cups and banner.

All resolutions for this convention must be handed Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine, Atlanta, before noon, May 3.

Delegates are asked to remember about the certificates which are to be secured when purchasing one-way ticket to Atlanta. Unless 250 of these certificates are presented to the chairman of transportation the first two days of the convention, reduced fares cannot be secured. Delegates are also requested to remember if they travel on a pass or come to Atlanta by automobile, it will be a thoughtful and considerate to stop far enough from Atlanta to buy a railroad ticket costing at least 70 cents and secure a reduced fare certificate. Those who come from Washington or California will appreciate such action. Georgia has guaranteed 250 reduced fare certificates!

National P.-T. A. President Calls Parents to Atlanta

Mrs. A. H. Reeve, of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, issues the following call to the nation's parents to attend the National P.-T. A. convention to be held in Atlanta the week of May 3:

"The three years which constitute an administration in the National Congress of Parents and Teachers have almost passed, and we are looking forward to another annual convention, one which is to complete the journey on which we set out in 1923, and to serve as a starting point for yet a new stage of our development.

"Just as the congress differs from other organiaztions in its constitution, so does it differ in its conventions. This gathering of men and women from every state in the Union, a gathering great, not in numbers, perhaps, but in its intensity of purpose, its community of interest, bears fruit to a degree incomprehensible to those accustomed to throngs of delegates. To "The National" comes back each year the leaders of those branches which have grown to such amazing strength, not only to tell the stirring tale of what has been accomplished, but to take again from the parent tree that which makes for their growth in the year to come. And with them come the active workers in associations great and small who are fitting themselves for leadership when the call shall come to them—all equally members of our "house of representatives," all qualified to legislate for the general welfare.

"In 1924 the program centered upon the home, its duties and desponsibilities; upon the need of 'training for parenthood;' the beginning of the true cooperation between home and school through the preparation of the scholar in the pre-school years.

"The following year brought the consideration of parents and teachers as common factors in the development of the child, their independence and the function of each; and also the placing properly, as parts of education, of such branches of instruction as citizenship, character, in the new curricula of both 'home and school in education.'

"And now, in 1926, this training having been carried on throughout our organization, this unity of purpose having been strengthened and deepened until home and school take counsel together as friends and fellow-teachers, we come to the thoughtful consideration of the results to be expected from such a cast, dynamic force, the 'educational significance of the Parent-Teacher movement.'

"No more important subject could engage the attention of the thoughtful public. We are asking the question: What should be the effect upon the childhood of the nation of the intelligent cooperation of parents and teachers? And some of the greatest experts and students of today will answer it, from the standpoint of the physical and of the mental hygienist, of the juvenile court and of the church, of the home and of the school and of the community. But the real answer must come from within ourselves, for, after all, this movement of a million men and women will be —what we will it to be. It is a question not only of how far we have promoted and supported education, but of how far we have educated ourselves. Here there can be no shifting of responsibility, no resting upon the accomplishment of our association. True, it may have raised large sums of money, may have built a model school or equipped a playground while we sat passively looking on, wrapping ourselves in a mantle of unearned glory. But the meaning of the congress goes so much deeper, so much further than that, and we cannot evade the insistent queries of our inner consciousness: Are our own children healthier and happier, our homes, better places in which to live, our children's teachers helped and encouraged? Therein lies the true significance of the Parent-Teacher movement, and if we have failed here, we have failed to make it mean anything at all.

"It is this thought, always borne in mind, which can make the smallest cog in our vast machinery as necessary to its perfect operation as the largest heel. If from every meeting of an association, be it of six or 60 or 600, each man and woman goes forth with a renewed or aroused conviction of his or her individual responsibility for the creation of better conditions for the children, in home, school, church or community in which he or she may be functioning as parent, as teacher os as citizen, then, and then only, is that association successful in performing the task with which it has been entrusted. One child better loved because better understood, one weary and discouraged teacher given sympathy and support, one little rural school made a center of life and light, one house which has become a home in the full meaning of that beautiful word, makes clear the meaning of the founder of the congress when she said:

"'It is the spirit in which we do our work which makes it a joy.'

—Home, School and Community.

Task for Methodist Women.

The North Carolina Advocate, Dr. A. W. Plyler, editor, recently carried in its editorial paragraphs this statement:

"A million this year for missions was the pledge the women of southern Methodism made through their representatives at Raleigh. And every dollar of it will be paid, for what a woman decides to do will be done."

Women have this reputation in many ways besides in raising money and now is a good time for us to "live up to our reputation."

During the past week in Washington, D. C., a body of women, under the leadership of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's natonal committee on law enforcement, have been protesting any change in the laws of our country that would weaken prohibition enforcement. They call to us, their sisters, to back them up in this plea that America may not go backward and, in going backward, bring backward with her other nations that have or are trying for prohibition.

In the words of Dr. Plyler, "what a woman decides to do will be done," and these women have decided that there MUST BE NO RETRENCHMENT.

Ridgecrest Y. W. A. Camp June 15-25.

All aboard for the Ridgecrest Y. W. A. camp at Ridgecrest, N. C., the southern Baptist assembly grounds, June 15 to June 25.

"Third time's the charm," says the old adage. Georgia girls are wondering if the third Ridgecrest Y. W. A. camp can be better than the preceding ones. "Good, better, best," is the right progression certainly and has proven true in 1924 and 1925; 1926 will be the best ever, if Georgia's young women help to make it so.

A new auditorium, a new dining room, a new lake will mean new attractiveness in equipment and additional comfort, with room for an increase in number present. Last year there were 188 young women from 17 southern Baptist states; this year many more are expected, and 18 states will be represented since a movement has been begun to help bring a girl all the way from New Mexico.

Mrs. R. L. Harris, president of the Tennesssee W. M. U., will be camp counselor this year. Mrs. W. J. Cox, president of W. M. U., will be there the full ten days.

Dr. T. B. Ray, of the foreign mission board, will speak every day just before noon on missions. Miss Kathleen Mallory, corresponding secretary of W. M. U., will be with the girls at least three days. Miss Mattie Vie Summer, of China and Newnan, will be among missionaries from many lands, and Miss Emma Leachman will represent the home mission board.

All the state young people's leaders of W. M. U. will be there, and Miss Juliette Mather.

Miss Julia Allen, state young people's leader for Georgia, 320 Palmer building, Atlanta, will chaperon a party of girls leaving Atlanta on June 14, lunching in Asheville, and arriving at Ridgecrest in time for supper Tuesday afternoon. Write to her at once if you wish enrollment blank and further information. The total expense is only $20 for the 10 days in addition to railroad fare from your home.

LaGrange Women Sew for Orphans.

Women of the Missionary society of the First Methodist church of LaGrange met Wednesday in the Sunday school annex to sew for the orphans' home at Decatur. About 20 ladies were present part or all of the day and enjoyed a delightful luncheon, to which each had contributed some dish. A generous donation of material from Dunson's mill and lesser gifts from other good friends of the cause made the day a profitable one. About 50 pillow cases, towels and dresses were finished. In addition to these new articles, a number of contributions of clothing already prepared were added to the box.

King's Daughters Will Hold Annual Meet in Savannah

The thirtieth annual convention of the Georgia branch of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held in Savannah, May 11, 12 and 13.

The international recording secretary, Mrs. T. S. Silcox, Charleston, S. C., and Mrs. Lillian Ascough, director woman's department, Near East relief, New York city, will be guests.

The forward step of this convention is plans for a state work. The committee appointed to present suggestions for the work are very enthusiastic and they feel that nothing is too big to undertake "In His Name." They hope that every Daughter of The King in the state will give this matter careful and prayerful thought, discuss it in their circles and come to the convention prepared to give it support.

Mrs. W. E. Hopper, acting publicity chairman.

Mountain School Trustees Meet.

The Mary P. Willingham School for Mountain Girls at Blue Ridge was the scene of a most interesting meeting of the board of trustees on Thursday, April 8, when they journeyed from all parts of the state for this annual event. This school is the property of the Baptist women of Georgia, and many prominent women in W. M. U., circles are members of the board. Among the trustees also are many of the Georgia Baptist pastors whose loyal cooperation at all times helps to make the school the great blessing it truly is to the girls of that section.

The report of the president showed remarkable progress along all lines, the spirit of the school has never been better, and the health of the girls has been remarkable.

The most enjoyable event during the visit of the trustees to the school was a luncheon prepared and served in their honor by the senior class in domestic science. Professor and Mrs. A. B. Greene, president and lady principal of the school, are doing a great work there, as they guide young girls into Christian womanhood.

Mrs. A. P. Jordan Honored by Associates.

At the last meeting of the St. Paul Methodist Missionary society, Mrs. A. P. Jordan was made a life member by her associates in the work. Mrs. Jordan has served this auxiliary as local treasurer for more than 10 years, and this life membership was an effort to express appreciation of her faithfulness and loyalty to her office and the work of the entire group.

Before coming to St. Paul church Mrs. Jordan was a member of old Walker Street church and served the missionary society of that church as treasurer for 15 years. She is the proud possessor of a beautiful loving cup given her at the time of her retirement from the office there.

Mrs. Jordan has been a member and regular attendant at the meetings of the city missions board since its organization and has watched the work develop with great interest and has made growth possible by throwing herself into the cooperation between members and officers of the board.

St. Mark's Society Makes Marked Progress.

The missionary society of St. Mark's Methodist church has made marked progress in the Bible and mission study department under the competent leadership of Mrs. George E. Knott. Mrs. Knott has appointed a chairman of Bible and mission study in each circle, who is responsible for Bible and mission study in her circle for the year. These chairmen meet with Mrs. Knott once a month to get instructions and to discuss ways and means of making the study more helpful.

To further stimulate interest, Mrs. Knott has a poster showing which circles have had Bible and mission study during the month. If at the end of the year, no one circle has neglected this important part of our work, the finished poster will be a complete circle of blue and gold.

Mrs. Pittman Announces Society Meeting Dates.

Mrs. H. W. Pittman, president of the South Georgia conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. Church, South, announces the following dates for district meetings of that conference:

Valdosta district at Adel, May 4 and 5; Americus district at Ellaville, May 5 and 6; Dublin district at Wadley, May 5 and 6; Waycross district at Homerville, May 6 and 7; Cordele district at Vienna, May 11 and 12; Thomasville district at Bainbridge, May 11 and 12; Savannah district at Girard, May 13 and 14; McRae district at Claxton, May 18 and 19; Macon district at Sandersville, May 20 and 21. The Columbus district held its meeting at Buena Vista on April 1 and 2.

Rutledge W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church of Rutledge met at the home of Mrs. Hollis at its last meeting. Mrs. Jim Davis led the devotional exercises and the Bible study.

A report of the annual meeting in Augusta was given by Mrs. Phillips, the social circle representative at the meeting.

This is one of the groups in Southern Methodism that has already pledged to meet the quota on the Bennett memorial 100 per cent.

After the luncheon the mission study program was taken up with a most interesting consideration of immigration laws.

The society, cooperating with the Sunday school, recently sent a splendid box of clothing to the orphans' home in Decatur.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.—(adv.)

Mrs. Ernest Brown Resigns Office After Long Service

Mrs. Ernest Brown, who has served federated church women of Georgia as recording secretary for the past two years, has offered her resignation to the board in order that she may leave to make her future home in Florida where Mr. Brown has been transferred by the company with which he is connected.

In the time that Mrs .Brown has been connected with the board, she has endeared herself to all the officers who regret to give her up.

Besides her membership in official capacity on the board, she is active in all affairs concerning the Baptist church, of which she is a member.

MRS. ERNEST BROWN,
Recording secretary of the Federated Church Women of Georgia.

Ladies Memorial Association Notes.

Members or friends of the Ladies' Memorial association who will tender the use of their automobiles for the Memorial day parade are asked to communicate with Mrs. R. G. Stephens, Hemlock 1085. All members of the association who desire seats reserved for them in the hired automobiles will also communicate with Mrs. Stephens.

The members of the Memorial association will meet at Oakland cemetery Saturday morning, April 24 at 9 o'clock to make wreaths and garlands. Anyone interested in this patriotic service is invited to assist.

Tabernacle W. M. S. Holds Mission Class.

The W. M. S. of the Baptist Tabernacle held an all-day mission study class at the church recently.

Talks on "Soul Winning," by Dr. Mullins was most ably taught by Mrs. L. O. Langston. She proved herself a splendid teacher and endeared herself in the hearts of all who heard her. About 20 ladies were present.

Mrs. Roger S. Howell, press chairman, W. M. S., Baptist Tabernacle.

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

"We Visit Old Inns"

BY CLYDE PETTUS, of the Carnegie Library

A poet has said that all old dwellings are haunted houses, peopled in their quiet age with ghosts of the past. If such former visitors return to old inns they must be of the ruddy, convivial type pictured in Dickens' "ghost of the Christmas present" with a raised goblet as symbol of perpetual good cheer. For the inn has none of the grim reminders of mortality found in an old house. Its memories are of the gala occasions of bygone days, of ease and jest and hours of mirth.

It is well to follow Miss Northend's occasional plan of letting the landlord of the hostelry talk as he will of colonial days and relate the marvelous stories the "ordinaries" themselves would tell if they could speak. On her journey through New England she has visited such famous taverns as are to be found hidden away in the little towns of New Hampshire and Massachusetts, many of them with swinging signs that tell of long service to thirsty men. Something of the artistic taste of the first innkeeper may be learned from his choice of subjects for his signboard, which vary as widely as religious events, British officers in uniform, or pictures of the humble, but particularly appropriate and popular horse. Occasionally an invitation to alight is conveyed temptingly in rhyme:

"Pause traveler here.
Just stop and think
A weary man
Must need a drink."

Gage's Headquarters.

The earliest inns have recollections of times when draughts of patriotism as well as New England flip warmed the hearts of colonists beginning to look askance at the red-coated officer on Ye Landlorde's sign. Contemporary with these is an old house in Danvers, Mass., where General Gage made his headquarters, the Page house with patriotic atmosphere tempered not only by the British general's occupancy but by the refractory Madam Page herself, who obeying the letter of her husband's prohibition of tea within his mansion, found a way to indulge in her favorite beverage upon the roof. In historic Salem is the Washington Tavern, hidden by a row of stores from the view of all except those most determinedly interested in the resting place of the victorious American general on his memorable journey through New England in the fall of 1789.

Miss Northend does not use to the full the possibilities of her fascinating material. She is less a story teller of particularly intriguing by-gone days than one who notes in passing some of the places where such stories may be found. But profuse illustrations of colonial interiors and a theme that no inadequacy of treatment can deprive of charm offer compensation to the imaginative reader.

Wayside Inn.

A chapter on the Wayside Inn is concerned less with historic than with literary interest. Here in the quiet village of Sudbury is the rambling old house with the half-effaced red horse prancing on its sign, the "Hob-goblin Hall" of Longfellow fame. Only it is no longer

"Now somewhat fallen to decay
With weather-stains upon the wall,
And stairways worn, and crazy doors,
And creaking and uneven floors."

but, less poetically, the restored favorite meeting place of the Myopia Hunt. There is, to be sure, the typical colonial chief room where the fireside seats of Parsons, Luigi Monti, and the teller of the "Tales of a Wayside Inn" are shown, and the framed letters of the company of friends displayed on the walls. A reminder of the past is the windowpane inscription: "William Molineux, Esq., June 24, 1774," recalling the intrepid man who by his presence, protected the British soldiers from insult as they walked along the streets of Boston. The bedroom in which Lafayette slept is pointed out, the great four-poster and hangings unchanged since the general's visit; and the inn has the distinction of having housed the first spinnet seen in the community which was the reward of assiduous learning acquired by the landlord's sister, Jerusha Howe, whose shrewish tongue is said to have given her as much prestige as her unfamiliar musical instrument.

The Wright tavern at Concord, was in the course of the historic day April 19, 1775, the rallying place of the patriots, soon perhaps to use some of the 48,000 bullets made from a statue of George III at Bowling Green, and the headquarters of British officers led by Major Pitcairn who stirred his morning dram with the boast that before night he would stir the Yankees' blood as well. There is no doubt that the blood of the Yankees was stirred, though the Major's exertions may not have been wholly the cause.

The Alcotts' Home.

More in keeping with Concord's peaceful name is Orchard House, home of the Alcotts, where Louisa and her sisters enacted "Little Women" during the anxious days of war. Hawthorne lived nearby, and though a recluse, broke his unsociable habits by visiting at Orchard House and chatting with the sisters and their brilliant father. Another home that makes the little town a literary mecca is that of Henry D. Thoreau.

In visiting the old inns Miss Northend shows the collector's instinct for finding the treasures they contain. Sometimes it is a sampler with the 10 commandments on a background of mustard-colored canvas, or with a border of the favorite strawberry pattern. Or it may be a pottery Falstaff finished in salt glaze, a process that resulted from a careless servant-girl's spilling over a pot of brine. Cottage ornaments like those that stood on the shelves in English houses were not a rarity in the early days, and for the double purpose of decoration and utility many a Napoleon in his cocked hat and rubicund John Bull justified his existence as a pepper-shaker. Salem suggests the old time china closets with their stores of ruby-colored Bohemian glass, Lowestoft, and copper lustre ware guarded from depredating fingers by a key that hung from the girdle of the New England housewife. At that time bottles were also a cherished possession and adorned with portraits and such encouraging but ambiguous sentiments as General Taylor's command: "A little more grape, Captain Bragg."

Some of the inns have names that give promise of good cheer, like the "Bunch of Grapes Tavern" with its many English forebears. Others such as the old "Bell-in-Hand" of Boston's newsboy rendezvous, Pialley, need a little imagination for their proper interpretation. But all of the older ones have an interest inseparable from the hearty days of rough traveling when no heavenly reward seemed more to be desired than a log fire and a well-filled toby at journey's end.

Baptist Hospital Auxiliary Holds Enthusiastic Meeting

An enthusiastic and well-attended meeting of the Georgia Baptist hospital auxiliary was held in the Joe Brown Connolly reception room of the hospital Friday, with Mrs. James L. Key presiding.

Dr. J. F. Eden, chaplain of hospital, opened the meeting with prayer. After the prayer, Dr. Eden gave a short talk in which he expressed appreciation of and thanked the ladies for a trip to the Florida Bible conference which they had given him. He thanked them for many kindnesses shown during his recent illness and told of the great privilege he felt it to be connected with the hospital as chaplain.

Greetings were extended by Mrs. Sam Jones, president emeritus of the auxiliary.

Geraldine Harmon, one of the young girls from the crippled children's ward, attended the meeting and thanked the ladies for special attentions that had been paid her.

Minutes of last meeting were read by Mrs. J. W. Awtrey, the secretary, and Mrs. Kate Dawson gave the treasurer's report.

A splendid personal service report was given by representatives from the various churches. Included in these reports were the number of visits to the hospital made during the month, number of magazines carried to wards, flowers, fruits, jellies, linen, vases and Easter gifts sent the children.

A picture of the first unit of the new hospital which is now under construction was before the auxiliary, and Dr. Elder, superintendent, pointed out locations of the different wards and operating rooms and told of the number of patients they would accommodate. Great interest was shown over progress in this part of the work.

Mrs. W. H. Houghton, wife of the pastor of the Tabernacle, conducted the devotional reading, Psalm 103. The need of praising God and being thankful unto him was presented in an impressive way.

Seven chairmen of districts in the Atlanta association were present and gave words of encouragement.

Beautiful calendars with some of the most interesting features of the present hospital and of the new unit had been arranged and were distributed for sale to representatives of the churches. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Sullivan.

Officers Elected By Ergaton Class; Work Organized

On Thursday night, April 8, the Ergatan Bible class met at Capitol Avenue church. The yearly election of officers resulted as follows:

Miss Madge Harkins, president; Mrs. Fred Elliott, first vice president; Mrs. C. A. Phillips, second vice president; Mrs. S. B. Chalmers, third vice president; Mrs. I. H. Carmichael, secretary; Miss Sallie L. Fortson, treasurer; Miss Minnie M. Caldwell, personal service; Mrs. L. N. Martin, reporter; Mrs. T. E. Rowden, teacher.

There are four groups, each having a captain, absentee chairman and a social chairman. On Friday afternoons several ladies go to A. F. Stewart Good-Will center to train a club of teen-age girls to become useful women and active Christians. The class aim is "Every member saved and serving."

The name "Ergatan" means workers. We want you, young woman, if you are between 20 and 30 years of age. Come visit us next Sunday. We welcome you.

Mrs. L. N. MARTIN,
Reporter.

Briefly Told

Eighteen members of the executive board and their honored guests, Mrs. George Westmoreland, Mrs. T. L. Lewis and Miss Emma Leachman, home missionary of the S. B. C., attended the sixth district rally at Lakewood Heights. Every church in the district was represented by a large percentage of its officers.

The Tabernacle Y. W. A. gave a splendid program last Friday evening under the direction of Miss Elsie Wright, assisted by Miss Annie Strond, Miss Lillie Wright and Miss Anna Davis.

A cab company of Miami, Fla., has offered free cab service to and from church to all who are unable to attend otherwise.

Miss Daisy Davies, of Atlanta, has been conducting a revival at Galloway Memorial church in Memphis, where the Rev. E. W. Crump is pastor. The services were well attended and the interest was very intense.

An ordinance has been passed by the city commission of Rome providing for teaching the Bible in public schools of the city. The plan provides that the teachers be paid from private sources but must be under the supervision of the board of education. Study of the Bible will be made an elective course in the schools.

Mrs. John M. Slaton was awarded a beautiful wrist watch in the recent attendance contest in the John M. Slaton Bible class of the Trinity Methodist Sunday school. Mrs. Slaton brought 61 persons in eight weeks.

Mrs. May J. Betts, of Ashburn, will be Memorial day speaker at Fitzgerald. Mrs. Betts formerly lived in Atlanta and was about six years ago secretary of the organized woman's work among the Methodists of North Atlanta district.

Women of Trinity Methodist Missionary society spent one day last week at the church sewing for the orphans' home in Decatur. The machines were loaned by a sewing machine company and a box containing 47 garments valued at $67 was sent as a result of the day's work.

The woman's council committee on foreign fields of the M. E. church, south, recommended that the week of prayer funds for 1926 be devoted to Collegio Isabella Hendrix in Bello Horizonte, Brazil, for a new building. The home field share of this fund will be directed to Brevard institute, Brevard, N. C., for a girl's dormitory.

In the report of the committee on home fields, read at the recent meeting of the woman's council of the M. E. church, south, it was recommended that group insurance be taken for all active workers in the home field, the premium on the first $1,000 to be paid from the retirement and relief fund.

Atlanta friends of Deaconess Frances Howard, who for many years was stationed here for work under the city mission board of Methodist women, will be interested to know that she has been appointed to work at the Bethlehem house in Augusta, Deaconess Sarah Lowder, who has been at the Bethlehem house, goes to Danville, Va.

In the group of missionaries consecrated at the recent meeting of the woman's council of the M. E. church, south, there were two Georgia girls. Miss Edith Bayne, of Macon, Ga., and Miss Pearl Edwards, of Perry. Miss Edwards will graduate from Scarritt in June and will go to the Wesley community house in Spartanburg, S. C., for her first work. Miss Bayne will do foreign work.

Wesley Chapel Society in Session.

The Woman's Missionary society of Wesley chapel, Ben Hill, held its regular monthly meeting in the church auditorium on Wednesday. Programs as outlined in the year book are being carried out in all meetings of this auxiliary.

The baby division, the juniors and young people all report paid-up pledges and progress in all lines. The society will hold in the near future, its semi-annual quilting party. This is the way it raised most of the money for the Bennett memorial.

One of the most interesting features of this auxiliary is the prayer circle which binds them together in an earnest endeavor to do all possible to extend the kingdom of God in the home and foreign lands.

The next meeting will be held on May 4 at the home of Mrs. F. H. Jackson at 3 o'clock.

Hopewell Church Women Are Active.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Hopewell Methodist church of the Dawsonville charge, Marietta district, is going forward with renewed zeal.

At a recent meeting held in the home of Mrs. G. W. McMurray 16 members and two visitors were present. An enjoyable program was rendered by several of the members, Mrs. McMurray being the leader of the discussion. Miss Lizzie Singleton led the devotional.

On account of bad weather and sickness in many homes, the society has not been able to keep its Bible and mission study going for the past three months. This will be resumed, however, in the second quarter. This society is not yet two years old, but there are 18 members, six of whom are subscribers to the Missionary Voice.

Officers for this year are: President, Mrs. T. W. Barron; vice president, Mrs. M. L. Jackson; recording secretary, Mrs. J. F. Wallis; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Miss Leona Hughes; assistant treasurer, Miss Ruby Hughes; social service superintendent and junior superintendent, Miss Lizzie Singleton; Bible and mission superintendent, Mrs. J. B. Carruth; superintendent of supplies, Miss Maggie Wallis; superintendent of publicity, Miss Beulah Barron; agent for The Voice, Mrs. B. H. Freeman.

Rome Mothers Unite To Aid Prohibition.

In accord with the interstate plan of the women of the Protestant churches to hold simultaneous prayer meetings during the past week in the interest of prohibition, a mass meeting was held in Rome at the First Methodist church on Sunday afternoon. Representatives of all churches were present, and strong resolutions were adopted following addresses by the Rev. R. J. Broyles, Judge John Bale, Honorable Seaborn Wright and Judge Henderson Lanham. The Rev. John Wood presided.

An outgrowth of the mass meeting was the beginning of a movement among the church leaders to urge all citizens to qualify as voters. Committees will be appointed in the churches to follow up this resolution, and the pastors will cooperate. The movement was launched by the women of the city, but has grown to the point that men and women of the various denominations are working together in the interest of this common cause.

Miss Keipp Gives Lecture Recital.

Miss Madeline Keipp gave her regular semi-monthly lecture-recital for the Atlanta Music club Wednesday morning, her subject being "The Development of Orchestral Music." Miss Keipp described how the great musical masters pointed the way to the development of the instruments of the orchestra, as well as to the development of orchestral music. Historical musical facts were traced back to Claudio Monteverde (1566), who was called "the father of instrumentation," and to Scahlatti (1659), the first one to write in four parts for strings; Haydn, called "father of the symphony;" then on through the three centuries of the evolution of the symphony. Classical orchestral compositions from Beethoven, to the ultra modern work of Goldmark, covering a period of 100 years, were used in demonstrating.

Methodist Women To Assume Charge Of Mission School

When the woman's council of the M. E. Church, South, met in 1925, there was before it a proposal that the woman's department take over the entire charge of Hiroshima Girls' school in Japan, where about 1,000 girls are enrolled from kindergarten to college ages. So acute was the desire to accept this new responsibility, that several of the women offered gifts of jewelry to add to the fund, but there was not enough money in sight, and it was not undertaken.

The secretary of the general department of missions was anxious that this should be done and the Japan mission was unanimous in its request that it should be done.

Therefore, this year when the council met in Raleigh, N. C., the request was repeated and the proposition was considered again. Discussion arose as to whether the women should take over only the college department or the entire school. The latter plan prevailed, and since the women of the church were in a better financial condition this year than last, the committee on estimates recommended a budget of $30,000 to carry on this new work. The needs for the future are great and its development for years to come will be a challenging task but a joy to the women who have the privilege of entering this new field.

Sylvan Hills Club Holds Meeting.

The Sylvan Hills Woman's club met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. R. H. Harris on Katherwood drive. Each lady embroidered a dish towel to be given in a shower to the new Sylvan Hills clubhouse. Mrs. O. G. Hayes was a visitor for the afternoon.

Mrs. Harris was assisted by Mrs. J. Ernest Williams.

The Woman's club will take up a vocational class in art as soon as a teacher can be secured. Mrs. Theo. B. Ashton was appointed chairman of this class. Mrs. P. A. Lewis was named head of the sewing department of the club.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. A. J. Gilbert, on Woodbourne drive, this meeting will be held Thursday and will also be devoted to sewing.

Mrs. Camp Honors Church Circle.

Mrs. J. M. Camp entertained Circle No. 3 of St. Paul Methodist Episcopal church at her home.

Mrs. K. K. Kelley, chairman, presented several plans to boost the circle. Mrs. R. D. Crowe, Bible teacher, gave a beautiful lesson in Romans. Mrs. J. B. Welbern, treasurer, reported finances in good condition.

Side Hurt

"I HAVE been troubled with a bad pain in my right side, which came on me at certain times and lasted for days," says Mrs. Sylvester Farmer, of Pikeville, Tenn. "Often it would be accompanied by a severe ache across my back.

"I worried along for years—never did anything for it, but last year I got so bad off I knew something had to be done. The pain across my back was very bad and my side hurt all the time. I had known about Cardui for years, but I dreaded taking any sort of medicine and had put it off as long as I could. One day, after I had been suffering an unusual lot of aches and pains, I said to my daughter, 'I think I will try the Cardui treatment.' I could not do my housework and had no strength at all.

"I started on the Cardui Home Treatment. It was not long before I began to pick up. I noticed an improvement from the beginning, but as my case had gone on so long it took some time before it was relieved.

"I continued taking Cardui. The pain across my back left me and my side no longer hurt. It did not hurt me to stoop over, as formerly. My appetite grew better. I could eat and enjoy my meals. Cardui certainly is a fine medicine, and I like to recommend it because it helped me so much."

Merry Hill, N. C.

"I have been using Pratts Buttermilk Baby Chick Food and Pratts Buttermilk Growing Mash and can say without doubt that I have never used anything to compare with them. What more could one expect of pullets than to weigh 2½ pounds each when 8 weeks old? I have used many kinds of poultry feeds but that is the best I've ever had any to do. Nothing can come up to Pratts for starting and keeping pullets growing.

Very truly yours,
J. W. KEETER."

Galaxy of Stars! "Annie May" Frocks - $59.50

Cameos of the Past

Opera Shawls

$24.95

—Out of the pages of history comes the Spanish embroidered shawl—a cameo of the past. It charms of itself—rich, colorful, scintillating. But there is the more subtle halo that surrounds it—associated as it is with romance, adventure, opera!

—It is the opera which has kept its brilliance alive through all these years. And this season the shawl promises to figure as prominently in the boxes as on the opera stage.

—Through a special purchase these Spanish embroidered shawls are just $24.95. All pastels as well as red, white and black. Silk hand-knotted fringe.

Hand-embroidered shawls, $34.95 to $123.75.
Hand-painted shawls, $24.95 to $50.
Plain shawls, $15 to $24.95.

When Success Hangs on Silken Threads

Glove Silk Lingerie

—When operas were young and frocks depended on the number of petticoats for their success, it mattered little of what those petticoats were made.

—But to the operagoer of 1926 everything depends on that. Her frock must sheath the body closely—not much room for lingerie at all. It must be translucent, silken, GLOVE SILK. Then success is assured.

Silk Teddies, $2.98

—Women's glove silk teddies, firm quality. Tailored and novelty styles. Pastel shades.

Silk Vests, $2.50

—Women's glove silk vests. Bodice style with strap over shoulder. Pastel shades.

Silk Bloomers, $3.50

—Women's heavy, firm quality glove silk bloomers. Pastel and dark colors.

Milanese Slips, $4.95

—Women's Milanese slips. Shadow-proof hems. Variety of colors. Sizes 36 to 44.

Opera Hosiery

Irene Castle Corticelli Silk Hosiery

While Keely's hosiery department has long since been recognized with ardent favor by women who prefer quality and known style values in hosiery, the comprehensive display of beautiful, inspiring new hosiery that has recently arrived will lend enthusiasm to local and visiting shoppers during opera week.

We would call especial attention, in this connection, to a display of the famous Irene Castle Corticelli Silk. This is a dreamy, almost atmospheric, all-over silk hose with picoted top edge, double reinforced garter hem, reinforced knee, and a very narrow double silk sole.

While of the most exquisite gossamer weave, its tensile strength is exceptionally pronounced. Shown in Gold, Silver, Gunmetal, Pompadour, Dove Gray, Rose Taupe, Shell Pink, Cherub, Mandarine, Nude, Rose, Beige and Maple Cream.

Price $3.95 Pair

New Opera Shoes

Whatever madam's exclusive and individual taste in footwear, her dearest wish and heart's desire can be gratified at Keely's. Fashion's strictness of style and numerous "by-plays" of esthetic designers are here to delight her fancy, done in leathers of finest texture and cloths of purest lineage. Combinations there are that are unusually smart and appealing, and all the approved color shades are assembled. We cordially invite opera visitors to see Keely's shoes. Among the many models especially designed for formal wear we call attention to

The Lavalliere

This dainty one-strap pump is a thoroughbred! Its contour is the personification of grace, and its symmetry is perfectly composed. For opera and formal wear it is shown in patent leather, black satin and silver kid at Weather indications for the week are exactly right. Sunshine and comfortable temperatures. Let's hope they stick to their advance intentions. As a usual thing Atlanta's weather for opera week is perfect. So, as you read this, touch wood, cross your fingers and hope for a repetition.

Atlanta hotels are practically full, every one of them, for opera week. Many of the stars and visitors have had their reservations for weeks in advance.

The Georgian Terrace, f'instance, reports every room reserved for the entire week. Among the famous Metropolitan stars who will stay at the Terrace—and who will doubtless be seen on the famous terrace during the daytimes—are Lucrezia Bori, Adamo Didur, Leon Rothier, Jose Mardones, Beniamino Gigli, Mary Bonetti, Vincenzo Reschigian and Gennaro Papi, the conductor.

Don't forget that all the performances start promptly on time—8 o'clock for night performances and 2 o'clock for matinees. If you aren't inside when the lights dim you'll stay outside until the end of the first act. That's the inflexible rule for Atlanta opera performances.

Marion Talley, famous new American soprano, who is to sing the title role in "Lucia" Friday evening, was born in a small frame house in a little railroad town just outside Kansas City, Mo. Her father is a telegraph operator. The name of the little railroad town was "Nevada," and for it she was christened Marion Nevada Talley.

Expect a genuine thrill in "Jewels of the Madonna," the new opera for Thursday's matinee. It is a really tremendous spectacle. It includes a stage band, a tremendous chorus and it utilizes special scenery imported from Italy. It is crowded with animation and color. One interesting detail is the use of a young woman, not a statue, to represent the virgin in the procession.

Mary Lewis, another beautiful young American singer who recently has leaped to operatic fame with the Metropolitan, is tired of being referred to as an ex-Follies girl. Not that she denies the truth of that assertion. Asked to write a special story for this column on how she got into opera, she said: "I don't know how it happened."

"It just did happen," she continued, "like all the wonderful and awful things that ever happen to anyone. You may ascribe the event to perseverance, or luck or pull or knowing the right people or determination or anything you choose, but really the things that happen to you are not to be explained so easily."

Miss Lewis thinks the supply of American singers is by no means exhausted. "There are future stars in the south today," she says. "I know it. They will come to Metropolitan by many different routes and when they get there they will have as much difficulty as I in explaining how it happened."

Miss Lewis will appear as Nedda in "Pagliacci," on Wednesday night.

While on the subject of these young new American stars, there is Dorothea Flexer, formerly a choir singer of Allentown, Pa., Miss Flexer, a contralto only 23 years old, will sing twice in Atlanta, first in "Don Quixote," Tuesday evening, and again Thursday afternoon in "Jewels of the Madonna."

Miss Flexer made her New York debut on March 5 last. A large delegation of her home town folks from Allentown was there to cheer her and, according to the New York critics, she "conducted herself with poised assurance and displayed true dramatic instinct in the intelligent use of opportunities afforded her. Miss Flexer's voice is clear and true—a pure mezzo contralto."

Now, on the eve of the great week, is everything ready? Got your tickets? They are still on sale—and will be all week—at the Cable Piano company, 84 North Broad street, except after 5:30 for night performances and after 12:30 on the two matinee days, Thursday and Saturday. Then they will be available at the auditorium.

Got your rostume? Arranged for parking space for the bus? Look for the traffic diagram and instructions which will be published in The Constitution on Monday morning. There are a few changes this year which it will pay you or your chauffeur to study.

All ready? Let's go!

Gibbons Class Gives Dance.

League President Is Given Banquet.

Mrs. E. T. Stallings, president of the Protestant Woman's league, was the guest of honor at a banquet given by members of the league Wednesday evening at their hall.

Colonel Peel To Be Honored At Elaborate Opera Breakfast

More than 100 Atlantans have indicated their pleasure in entertaining Colonel William L. Peel, president of the Music Festival association of this city, by reserving seats at the lovely opera breakfast to be given in his honor by the Atlanta Woman's club, Friday, April 23, in the beautiful banquet hall of the clubhouse.

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the club, will preside at the breakfast and has issued invitations to 25 of the opera stars and included in the list of honor guests Colonel Peel, Governor and Mrs. Clifford Walker, Augustus Lukeman, Otto Kahn, of the Metropolitan company; Mayor and Mrs. Walter Sims, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Willis, Mrs. H. G. Hastings, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, Mrs. William H. Kiser.

Mrs. Sharp will be assisted in receiving the guests by the officers of the club including Mesdames D. F. Stevenson, T. Guy Woolford, John R. Hornady, E. V. Carter, George Ripley, Eva Corrigan, W. D. Williamson, Joel Hunter.

Those assisting in entertaining will be Mesdames Hamilton Douglas, John K. Ottley, Bolling Jones, Norman Pool, James T. Williams, T. G. Delph, George Obear, W. S. Coleman, Thomas Harmon, Harry Horsey, Dudley Cowles, Tom Brooke, Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, John D. Evans, M. D. Farnhan., C. R. Justi, Ben Simcox, J. A. Carlisle, M. L. Thrower, A. A. Lecour, J. E. Spinger, George Hinman.

Mesdames E. V. Carter, Irving S. Thomas, Mary Griffith Dobbs and G. H. Brandon are in charge of arrangements for the occasion.

Miss Louise Hunter, charming and artistic soprano, and Lawrence Tibbett, popular tenor, who will interpret the role of Wolfram in "Tannhauser" will sing several beautiful selections. Other members of the Metropolitan company will also be heard in song.

League of Women Voters Plan Many Interesting Events

The Atlanta League of Women Voters, in totaling up the results of the third annual membership drive, announces that 15 workers on the squads which completed their quotas, having filed their own individual quotas, are entitled to receive the three months' subscription to the Woman Citizen, a popular magazine awarded each year to the workers filling both their individual and squad quotas, but not quite reaching the goal for the loving cup. These ladies are: Mrs. Frank Mason, Mrs. Frank Lowenstein, Miss Eleanore Raoul, Mrs. J. H. Gibbs, Mrs. J. B. Robbins, Mrs. Harvey H. Payne, Mrs. C. C. Schoen, Miss Eloise Moon, Mrs. F. E. Lyon, Miss Lucy Nagle, Mrs. J. P. Billups, Miss Leila Ayer, Mrs. J. A. Carr, Mrs. J. A. White and Mrs. L. L. McDaniel.

The monthly meeting of the ninth ward of the Atlanta League of Women Voters was held on Tuesday, April 13, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. J. R. Weithington on Virginia avenue. The second Tuesday in the month was agreed upon for the regular monthly meeting of the ninth ward.

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, ward chairman, brought before the members many important matters to be discussed and acted upon. Mrs. Harvey Payne, ward secretary, gave a resume of work accomplished in the ward during the past year under the efficient chairmanship of Mrs. Bailey, and plans for this year's work were adopted. Mrs. J. H. Gibbs was speaker for the occasion and made a very interesting and instructive talk on "The Purpose of the League."

The league plans to stage a mammoth rummage sale in September, the proceeds to go to the league budget, and Mrs. T. B. West, 868 East North avenue, was appointed chairman of the rummage committee for the ninth ward. Anyone who has anything to contribute will oblige Mrs. West very much by phoning her.

Little Miss Betty Weithington entertained by giving an interpretative dance and a reading.

A monthly meeting of the eighth ward members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters was held Tuesday afternoon, April 13, at the charming home of Mrs. L. D. T. Quimby, chairman. A program of unusual interest was given, Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, representative of Bibb county to the Georgia legislature, being the chief speaker. Mrs. Napier is one of the first women ever elected to the legislature in Georgia and gave a most interesting talk on "What the Legislature Was Called to Do—and What They Did Do." A number of new members who joined the league recently in the annual drive took advantage of their opportunity to attend and meet other members and to a clearer insight of the league work. Delicious refreshments were served. The next monthly meeting of this ward will be held at the home of Mrs. C. K. Ayer, 1089 Peachtree street, in May, the exact date to be announced later.

Miss Cleo Hearon, of Agnes Scott college and a member of the DeKalb League of Women Voters, will leave Saturday to join the Atlanta and Georgia delegations of women voters now attending the National League of Women Voters' convention in St. Louis. Miss Hearon will probably represent new voters' division of the Georgia league and be accorded the privileges of that office while there. Among the delegates now in session from Georgia are Mrs. R. L. Turman, Mrs. J. P. Billups, Miss Eleanore Raoul, Mrs. George A. Matson, Mrs. Miria Pyle Lame, Mrs. J. E. Springer and Mrs. Anne Freeman Johnson.

Quarterly Meeting.

The quarterly meeting of the Atlanta League of Women Voters will be held at the chamber of commerce at 3 o'clock Friday, April 30. One of the most important features of this meeting will be the presentation of the silver loving cup won by Miss Lila Ayer and her squad in the recent membership drive. It is hoped every member of the Atlanta league will make a supreme effort to be present, and to let no engagements interfere with her being present. Many important matters are to come before the meeting. Those interested are cordially invited, whether a member or not.

The second ward members of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, Mrs. L. G. Wentworth chairman, held their monthly meeting in the Georgia Avenue school the afternoon of Tuesday, the 13th. A very interesting program was carried out, which was of special interest to the new members who attended their first ward meeting after joining the league in the recent drive.

Hapeville Woman's Club Honors New Members at Meeting

The Hapeville Woman's club met Thursday afternoon, April 15, at the home of Mrs. D. B. Evans, 101 Atlanta avenue. In the absence of the president Mrs. Jere Wells, president of the club, Mrs. S. E. Treadwell occupied the chair. The reception rooms were decorated with cut flowers, the color scheme of pink and white being used.

A short message was given by Mrs. Treadwell, welcoming the visitors and new members present. Mrs. Fannie Harrison presented an instrumental solo, "Always," by Irving Berlin. The community service committee, with Mrs. W. M. Schneider as chairman, planned the program introducing as speaker, Mrs. Frank McCormick, president of the Atlanta Better Films committee. Mrs. McCormick spoke very interestingly on the subject of "Better Films," stressing the importance of the line of work in which she is engaged, explaining the different phrases and benefits derived by the public, especially the children who attend the matinees under the censorship of their committee, mentioning interesting facts pertaining to the bill now introduced before the house education committee in Washington for federal censorship of films.

Mrs. Fred E. Johnson, chairman of economics, introduced another visitor, Mrs. A. P. Boardman, of 2195 Gordon street, Atlanta. She will be the instructor at the cooking school to be sponsored by the committee of economics during the last week of April. The first lessons to begin on April 26, in the morning at 10 o'clock, the school to be held in the city auditorium. Mrs. Boardman is an experienced authority on cookery and with her broad experience and practical views, she is certain to bring much interest to those who attend. Many suggestions will be offered in piquant flavors and saucy designs for teas, parties and the substantial at-home feasts. There will only be a very small charge for the course. Those wishing other information please call Mrs. Johnson, Fairfax 1464-J.

During the afternoon the following announcements were made: Mrs. H. A. Allen, chairman of legislation, announced a cake sale to be sponsored by her committee, and held at Evans' market on Saturday morning, April 24.

Another announcement of importance was given by Mrs. N. A. Anderson, chairman of gardening, stating that an ice cream festival would be sponsored by her committee in the afternoon of April 24, to be held in the city park. As the proceeds from these sales are to be placed on the building fund, it is hoped that many will respond.

At the conclusion of the program a reception was held, honoring the new members. Mrs. W. B. Stewart, chairman of membership, introduced them as follows: Mesdames J. Junion, G. C. Ward, B. B. McCord, D. H. Barnett, T. L. Costa, F. G. Swan, Frank Smith, W. H. Stallings, S. J. Jackson, T. L. Melton, A. C. French, C. F. Davis, H. D. Rape, G. W. Hendrix, G. W. Tingle, W. M. Kinswain, Maggie Bloodworth, George I. Wells, E. W. Linthicum, F. M. McDaniel, J. M. Bince, F. G. Turner, O. M. Huie, A. C. McLendon, Joe Levins, William Jenkins, Morgan Bodie, Guy Scott, Hubert McWhirter and T. L. Lang.

The membership committee is composed of Mrs. W. B. Stewart, Mrs. W. A. Dietrick, Mrs. T. M. Hamilton, Mrs. J. S. McGloughlin, Mrs. R. L. Neal and Mrs. M. Lilly.

Punch was served by Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Emilie Schenck and Mrs. E. Marvin King.

The most important quality desired in a piano is desirability of tonal quality! A piano that will be sure to appeal to music lovers with its superb tonal quality and handsome case design is the Studio Model upright piano at Ludden & Bates, 80 North Pryor Street.

Daintily diminutive, it will contribute to your home the richness and reasonance belonging to a large piano—it will be a constant source of pleasure and satisfaction to you —they have the stamp of quality, character and individuality.

Besides the value of being an instrument of musical excellence, one of these lovely Studio Models will add so much to the artistic atmosphere of your home. They are in several woods, mahogany, oak and walnut, and can be had in either dull satin or waxed finish. Attractive terms can be arranged with Ludden & Bates for the purchase of one. Beautify your home—make it more livable—more enjoyable—and more artistic.

Electric Refrigeration In a Servel Is Ideal!

The Georgia Railway and Power Company have at their salesroom on Marietta Street a most interesting display of the Servel, and if you will go in and see one in operation you will be delighted with not only the convenience and attractive appearance of it, but its mechanism and efficiency—it is a marvelous achievement in electric refrigeration.

If you are planning to build or are already building a home this spring, why not have your contractor install a Servel for your future comfort and convenience—it is an ideal and dependable way to be assured of it, and no modern home is really complete without electric refrigeration. Once you become accustomed to its use, you will wonder how you ever delayed investigating and purchasing one so long. You can arrange with your contractor for the installation of a Servel and its cost can be included along with your building, complete and paid for when you make the usual payments of notes. What an advantage!—you should avail yourself of it certainly.

You will soon save the price of a Servel in the elimination of loss of food by spoilage. A salesman will be most pleased to demonstrate it to you and explain its many features. Not only is Servel the personification of perfect electric refrigeration, but it supplies you besides with an abundance of cubes of sparkling ice and freezes ices, ice cream, mousses, and salads in its chilling compartment that is "colder than ice." You will be amazed with its many advantages and I am sure you will feel that you cannot really be without one in your home after you have seen it——they are wonderful.

Day in and day out, what food product is more necessary on our menus than bread? Considering this, and appreciating that it is the "staff of life" as well, it must necessarily be the best and most wholesome that you can procure.

The Rogers Stores make in their own splendidly equipped sanitary bakery, bread as fine as it is possible for bread to be and it is indeed unequalled in quality and price. The ingredients that go into its making are the very best and purest that can be obtained. The result, of course, is delicious, fine-grained light bread—no better could be made. Rogers' bread is in two sizes: the Perfection Loaf and the Quality Loaf.

Its unmistakable, the delicate aroma that tells you at the breaking of the waxed paper sealing your loaf of Rogers' bread that it is fresh baked, right from the ovens the very day you purchase it. They offer it to you with pride—you housewives who know so well the quality that makes the Rogers' bread. It is of the same superlative standard of perfection always—you can depend on it to be, and think, too, the economy in price—the best for the least.

The small family in this day and time will be delighted to know that at the Rogers Stores are offered for their convenience No. 1 size cans of fruits and vegetables of all varieties with which they plan their menus—no waste as previously when canned goods desired could not be purchased always in the small sizes—left-overs are a waste and there is no need for anyone to buy more than is necessary for any meal—hence the convenience of the small can.

Housewives of today know how important it is to have on their pantry shelf a sufficient supply of canned fruits and vegetables to meet the everyday needs of housekeeping. Really one cannot get along without a goodly supply—it's a convenient way to have at a moment's notice a variety of both with which to plan a luncheon or dinner—and such a world of delectable dishes can be made from them.

Specially priced this week at Rogers' are 4 No. 1 size cans of Standard or Rogers' Tomatoes for 25 cents; Lima Beans at 11 cents; Sliced Pineapple at 16 cents, and Pickaninny Cut Okra at 11 cents. These products are splendid values and can be utilized in many ways. Here are a few suggestions: Tomato and okra soup is so appetizing these spring days and other vegetables can be added if one desires a gumbo instead. Okra is very nice made into fritters accompanying fried chicken or other meats. Lima beans are tasty served plain or with cream sauce. Sliced pineapple is most appetizing and so delicious and can be used in various ways for both desserts and salads. Served on lettuce leaves with grated cheese and mayonnaise it is nice, or if cut into cubes and combined with other fruits and gelatine it makes an unusually attractive salad. Place in a fancy mould to congeal and turn out whole and garnish with crisp lettuce leaves and cream cheese balls sprinkled with pecans or walnuts and serve with mayonnaise. Be sure to purchase a supply of these convenient sized cans of the products that Rogers is offering this week specially priced—they are so good—the quality the very best and of unusual value.

MANY VISITORS WILL PAY HOMAGE TO GRAND OPERA

Royal Welcome Is Planned By Atlanta's Fair Hostesses For Attractive Opera Guests

Next in importance to the galaxy of stars in the Metropolitan's brilliant firmament are the visitors who gather from far and near to pay homage to the lyric music and bask in the cordial hospitality of Atlanta's holiday mood. Representing the beauty and culture of the far-famed southland the fairest of Dixie's daughters will assemble in charming array each evening in the great auditorium, adding interest and gaiety to the social side of opera.

For the visitor within her gates, Atlanta prepares a royal welcome worthy of the culture and charm represented, and an elaborate social program, unprecedented in brilliance, will be inaugurated in deference to these guests. The city's exclusive clubs, her palatial hotels and beautiful homes will be opened to the opera visitors with typical southern hospitality and they will form the inspiration for the opera festivities which are always an important feature of the season.

New York Visitors.

Adding great interest to the 1926 season will be the presence of a New York group long identified with the Metropolitan opera: Otto Kahn, chairman of board of directors; Roland Harriman, Henry Rogers Winthrop, Fred P. Moore, these three being directors of the Metropolitan; Bernard M. Baruch, one of the leading financiers of the country, and James I. Bush, vice president of the Equitable Trust company.

A young visitor who will receive much attention at opera will be Miss Sarah Peel Watts, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Watts, of the University of Virginia, and granddaughter of Colonel W. L. Peel, president of the Atlanta Music Festival association and presiding genius of opera in Atlanta since the first appearance here of the Metropolitan opera.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Pharr and Mrs. Henry McAden, of Charlotte, N. C., will arrive Monday to be the guests for opera week of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr., at "Pine Hill," and they will be among the prominent visitors who will be elaborately entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Thompson and Mrs. J. S. Fassett, of Elmira, N. Y., will arrive Sunday to be the opera guests of Dr. and Mrs. Fred Hodgson at their home in Druid Hills.

Mrs. Richard Wilmer, of Washington, D. C., and her young son, Richard Wilmer, Jr., will arrive Thursday to be the guests of Mrs. Wilmer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, at "Craigellachie." Mrs. Wilmer, formerly Miss Margaret Grant, is one of the most popular former Atlantans and is always feted at a round of parties.

Mrs. Frank Dancy, of Baltimore, Md., is a former beloved Atlantan who is already in the city and will be among the prominent opera-goers as the guest of Mrs. Joseph T. Orme.

Mrs. Nathaniel Baxter, of Nashville, Tenn., will be a prominent figure seen in the opera audiences. She is the guest of her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox at their home on Pace's Ferry road.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bucknell, Jr., of Shanghai, China, are the guests of their parents, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Bucknell, and will be charming visitors entertained during the week.

Miss Mary Washburn and Miss Carolyn Washburn, of New York, arrived Tuesday to visit their sister, Mrs. Gilbert Marshall, at her home on West Fifteenth street. These two visitors will remain in the city until after opera and will be the honor guests at a number of parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Cason Callaway, of LaGrange, will also be among the visitors, as will be Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Charles Candler and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Godfrey, of Covington.

An attractive visitor who will be cordially welcomed by members of the younger set of society is Miss Adelaide Howell, of Gainesville, who will arrive Monday to be the guest of her father, Evan Howell, on Wesley road.

Alva McCrary, of St. Petersburg, Fla., is the guest of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. R. McCrary, for opera week.

Mrs. W. D. Haas, of Alexandria, La., will arrive Tuesday to spend two weeks with her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin T. Mikell at their apartment, 1085 Peachtree road.

Mrs. Strother Wightman, of Valdosta, will be the guest of Mrs. C. Irvine Walker at her home in Myrtle street for opera week.

Coming from Fort Benning will be Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Holt, Major and Mrs. John W. Lang, Major and Mrs. F. V. Schneider, Mrs. John Landis and Mrs. J. D. Patch.

Mrs. Hill's Guest.

Miss Mildred Wedekind, of New York, who is the lovely guest of Mrs. Walter Hill at her home on Peachtree circle, will be a strikingly beautiful young guest to be seen in the opera audiences and at the attendant festivities.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Richard Palmer, of Irvington-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. E. Bates Block and will be lavishly entertained during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gray, of St. Petersburg, Fla., will visit their mother, Mrs. Charles Stoney at her home in the McGehee apartments. Mrs. Gray was formerly Miss Mary Stoney and she will be cordially welcomed by numerous friends.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Smathers, of Asheville, N. C., will be entertained as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Willis during the coming week and will be among the feted opera visitors.

Miss Effie Morgan, of Nashville, Tenn., will be the guest for the week of Mrs. R. B. Pegram at the Biltmore apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stevens, of Savannah, will come to be the attractive guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dickey who will open their handsome home on Pace's Ferry road for the season. Much informal entertaining during opera week will center around these guests.

Mrs. Walter Farley Roberts, of Utica, N. Y., is being delightfully entertained as the guest of her mother, Mrs. Carrie Stewart, at her home on West Peachtree street and will be noted among the out-of-town visitors at the opera.

Mrs. John Reynolds, charming member of Savannah society, will be among the out-of-town guests attending the opera.

Miss Henri Sinclair, of Wilmington, Del., arrived Saturday to be the opera guest of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Black at their home on Peachtree street. She will be a belle attending the opera and the festivities of the week.

A lovely belle of southern society who will be a charming addition to the opera gaities is Miss Josephine Connors, of Birmingham, Ala.

Former Atlantan.

Mrs. Edgar Upton, of Miami, is another former Atlantan who will be the center of much attention as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Stearns.

Mrs. Raymond Demere, of Savannah, will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sims Bray and Mr. and Mrs. James R. Mobley for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Walton, of Natural Bridge, Va., will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Oliver at their home on Walker terrace. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver will also have as their guest, Mrs. William M. Paxton, of Florence, Ala.

Miss Roberta Hodgson, of Athens, arrived Friday to be the guest during opera of Mr. and Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood at their home on Avery drive.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Livingston, of Savannah, and Mrs. Frank Martin, of Greenville, S. C., will be the opera guests of Mrs. Andrew Pickens Calhoun, at her home on Moreland avenue.

Miss Martha Berry, of Rome, will be the prominent guest of her sister, Mrs. Bulow Campbell, at her home on Andrews drive.

Mrs. J. C. McMichael will arrive from Garden City, L. I., to be the guest of her father, J. J. Haverty.

Mrs. H. B. Whitmore arrived Thursday to be the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, during opera, at her home on East Seventeenth street.

Mrs. Ernest Merry, of Augusta, will arrive Sunday to be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Charles Edward Harrison, on Huntington road during grand opera week.

Among the visitors during opera week will be Mrs. D. M. McIver, and Miss Nellie McIver, from South Carolina. They will be joined here by Donald McIver, from Tampa, Fla.

Mrs. John W. Lipscomb, of Greenville, S. C., and Mrs. Marbry Norton, of Louisville, Ky., will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph T. Jones for opera week.

Mrs. Fowler's Guests.

Miss Harriet Whitehead and Mrs. W. D. Crooks, of Williamsport, Pa., are the guests of Mrs. A. L. Fowler and Mrs. Ida Achenbach at their home on West Eleventh street. These attractive visitors will be honored at a number of interesting social affairs during the opera season.

Mrs. Robert Hall, of Washington, will be one of the feted visitors during the week and will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. Warren D. White, at her home on Piedmont avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Hosmer will have as their guest during opera, Miss Genevere Albers, of St. Louis. The Hosmer home in Clairmont park, Decatur, will be the scene of several informal parties in Miss Albers' honor.

Miss Dorothy Brown, of Milwaukee, Wis., who is the guest of Miss Corrie Hoyt Brown, will be a charming figure at the opera festivities.

Mrs. G. C. Phillips, attractive member of Birmingham society, is the guest for the week of Mrs. Morris Ewing.

Miss Mary Bond, of Savannah, will be extensively entertained during the week as the guest of Miss Ann Shewmake.

Mrs. Zelle Gibson Roe, who is receiving a cordial welcome as the guest of Colonel and Mrs. William R. Gibson at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue will be among the attractive visitors seen at opera.

Mrs. Ben Lee Young, of Huntsville, Ala., will receive much attention as the guest of Mrs. William Thompson at her home in Druid Hills.

Miss Mary Cheatwood and Miss Nancy Peck, of Lynchburg, Va., will be delightfully entertained as the guests of Mrs. M. M. Emmert.

Mrs. R. H. Bennett, of Chattanooga, Tenn., will be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Boykin, during opera week.

Mrs. Henry St. George Tucker, of Alexandria, Va., is the guest of Mrs. S. P. Warnock at her home on West Peachtree street and will be a feted opera visitor.

Mrs. James Baird, of Baird, Miss., arrived Sataurday to be the opera guest of Colonel and Mrs. William R. Dashiel at their home, "Maplewood," on Peachtree road.

Mrs. T. R. Knight, of Miami, will be among the Floridians who will attend opera as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Cross at their home in Ansley park.

Mrs. Ralph Davidson, of Montreal, Canada, who has been the guest for some time of her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson, will be an attractive figure seen at opera.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stanley Rhine, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., motored to Atlanta today for grand opera and are the guests of their mother, Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, at 595 Piedmont avenue.

Mrs. Samuel F. Smith, Jr., of Savannah; Mrs. Jewell Durden and Mrs. Thomas H. Buttrill, of Jackson, are popular devotees of opera who will be guests for the week at the Piedmont hotel.

Guests at Terrace.

The Georgian Terrace which is always a popular and attractive rendezvous for opera visitors and stars will entertain a distinguished group of southern music-lovers during the coming week, an elaborate social program having been arranged by the hotel management in special compliment to the visitors.

Among those who will be at this popular hostelry for the week are: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adamson, of Cedartown, Ga.; Major R. H. Fletcher and party, of Fort Benning, Ga.; Mrs. A. N. Jamaris, of Pine Bluff, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Rylee, of Athens, Ga.; Mrs. C. B. Fitzgerald, of Safety Harbor, Fla.; Mrs. J. L. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C.; T. H. Mrs. Virgil Sigman Is Party Hostess.

Mrs. Virgil Sigman entertained at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at her home in Glenwood avenue in honor of Miss Zelma Hardin, a bride-elect of this month. April shower effect was carried out. An umbrella suspended from the chandelier tied with shower bows held the honoree's gifts. A bridal party of dolls facing an altar banked with small palms formed an effective decoration. Memory verses were registered in the bride's book.

A clothes pin, wearing a doll dress, used as a contest prize was won by Miss Evelyn Hardin. The guessing contest prize was won by Mrs. Hamby.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Miss Maude Moore, Mrs. R. C. Aiken and Mrs. T. B. Ivey.

A Wet and Dry Serial

M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

As a panacea for insomnia, current issues of The Congressional Record are recommended by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Nowadays the adventure and detective magazines that specialize in thrills have a formidable rival in the publication sent out by the government in Washington.

It is putting it mildly to say that those sections of the Congressional Record that reports the discussions on the wet and dry issue are stimulating reading. They are almost intoxicating, for they certainly contain more than one-half of one per cent of mirth andd thought-provoking material.

They illustrate the saying of George Bernard Shaw, "The way to get at the merits of a case is to get it argued with reckless bias for and against."

For example, can one imagine any more humorous incident than that of Senator Edwards, of New Jersey, ranting and raving on the abridgement of the personal liberty of the people of his state, when one recalls that a full year after the eighteenth amendment had been nailed to the constitution of the United States by 45 perfectly good state ratification spikes, New Jersey came pleading to be allowed to contribute a little forty-sixth tack to make the federal prohibition law secure in the constitution?

Constituency Speaks.

Through the W. C. T. U. all over the state scores and scores of letters and telegrams have been sent to Georgia congressmen and senators in Washington asking them to oppose any modification of the Volstead code that would change the alcoholic content one-half of one per cent in beverages. Satisfactory replies have been received.

These requests were sent by individuals, churches, Sunday schools, adult Bible classes, missionary societies, the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. and other organizations, as well as the W. C. T. U.

Public and private prayers are being offered that those standing for allegiance to the constitution at the prohibition hearing in Washington may meet the strategy of opponents of the benign prohibition law with wisdom, good judgment and convincing arguments.

Messages were sent the senate judiciary committee urging no amendment for the eighteenth amendment, no modification of the Volstead act, but its strict enforcement.

The members of the nine commissions making reports at the convention of the woman's national committee for law enforcement in session in Washington, heard from the nine organizations affiliated, the Federation of Woman's Clubs, Federation Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Council of Women for Home Missions, King's Daughters, Council of Jewish Women, Lend a Hand Society, Young Women's Christian Association, Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, protesting against modification of the Volstead act and urging the strongest possible enforcement from the federal government.

Georgia's Experience.

Georgians have protested and are still protesting against modification, because they have tried both a bear and a near-beer regime, and know from sad experience what a colossal failure they proved as a aid to temperance and law enforcement, indeed the result in both instances was just the opposite.

We, in Georgia, know because of this disastrous experience that there is real wisdom in the attitude of the chief justice of the United States supreme court when he said: "I am not in favor of amending the Volstead law in respect to the amount of permissible alcohol in beverages. I am not in favor of allowing light wines and beer to be sold under the eighteenth amendment. No such distinction as that between wines and beer on the one hand and spirituous liquors on the other is practicable as a police measure. Any such loop-holes as light wines and beer would make the amendment a laughing stock."

Justice Brandeis, another member of the United States supreme court, voiced his opinion thus: "The legislation and decisions of the highest courts of nearly all the states establish that it is deemed impossible to effectively enforce either prohibitory laws or other laws merely regulating the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors if liability of inclusion within the law is made to depend upon the issuable fact, whether or not a particular liquor made or sold as a beverage is intoxicating."

When President Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts, a light wine and beer bill passed by the legislature of that state came to him to sign. He sent it back unsigned with the message: "There is little satisfaction in attempting to deceive ourselves. There is grave danger in attempting to deceive the people."

New W. C. T. U. Organized.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, field secretary of the Georgia W. C. T. U., continues to do splendid work in her office, among the recent results are several new unions, whose officers are:

Greshamville—President, Mrs. S. J. Pyron; secretary, Mrs. M. L. Van Winkle; treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Smith. Charter members, eight active and five honorary.

Douglas—President, Mrs. A. E. Winn; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. E. Roberson; recording secretary, Mrs. Thomas Overstreet; treasurer, Mrs. M. A. Whittaker. Twelve active and five honorary members.

Washington—President, Mrs. A. J. Brenizer; secretary, Mrs. A. W. Posey; treasurer, Mrs. Alfred Holcomb. Sixteen active and twelve honorary members.

Willacoochee—President, Mrs. G. W. Strange; secretary, Mrs. J. F. Shearer, and treasurer, Miss Leola Oberry.

Hazelhurst—President, Mrs. J. C. Bennett.

Education and the School.

"History shows that a new idea enacted into law by the advanced majority, takes from one to two generations to enforce. The unconvinced minority has to be brought into line. In short, as the French say, law enforcement is like vegetable growth in which the new idea slowly ripens into accepted custom. To facilitate this process, there must be constant education of the ever-rising generation in our country of our 25,000,000 school children," said Mrs. William Tilton, legislative chairman, Parent-Teacher association, author of "Save America," at the meeting of the woman's national committee for law enforcement in which 12,000,000 women are affiliated through nine national women's organizations, in session in Washington the past week.

Continuing she said: "The basic ideas to be inculcated now in the minds of the coming generation are (1) the nature of alcohol, that it is not what men formerly believed a life-giver but a life-destroyer, a narcotic poison, and thus a menace to health, character and also a great efficiency leak among nations; again in a modern industrial world where the steam engine has taken to modern highway, it becomes a thorough misfit.

"(2) The second basic truth is the reason why we have prohibition. We have it because 100 odd years of experimentation has shown that prohibition enforced is the best way to reduce the drink evil to a minimum and experience has also shown that prohibition can be enforced if you keep at it long enough. It took Kansas 30 years to enforce its prohibition law, but in the end (1914) while the per capita consumption of the nation was 22 gallons, that of Kansas was three gallons. Beer and wine experiments have been tried and failed (in Massachusetts and Georgia.) Government control has failed. It means putting your government into the most corrupting business there is, the liquor business."

Adriel Class Holds Meeting.

The monthly business and social meeting of the Adriel class of the First Christian church was held Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Walker, 277 Virginia avenue, Mrs. A. R. Mayfield, president.

The membership committee reported sixty names on the roll of the Adriel class. This committee also reported that Easter Sunday the class had an attendance of fifty-one, the largest in the history of the class, and that the attendance for the past few months has averaged around forty.

One feature of this meeting was the concurrence in the recommendation made some few weeks ago by a special committee on the purpose of educating a worthy young man for the ministry. For the present the name is not being revealed. In adopting this definite work by the Adriel class, a resolution was passed and adopted to the effect that not less than $10 per month be laid aside for use by this young man.

The entertainment committee, of which Miss Elizabeth Burke is chairman, proposed a game of "White Elephant." A. R. Mayfield, who is chairman of the membership committee, was auctioneer. Among the honored guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby and Mrs. Clarence R. Stauffer.

The next regular business meeting of the class will be held at the home of Mr. Phillips, date of which will be announced later through The Atlanta Constitution.

Boulevard Park Auxiliary Meets.

On Monday afternoon, the members of the Boulevard Park auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. O. F. Taylor, 15 Elmwood Drive, for the second of the four social meetings of the year.

The principal question to be brought before the club was the proposed revision of the constitution and by-laws, and the changing of the club's name to a more comprehensive one. After a short business session, the remainder of the afternoon was turned over to the program committee of which Mrs. Charles McLaughlin is chairman. First on the program was a vocal duet by Mrs. Truluck and Mrs. Ivey, accompanied by Mrs. Register at the piano, and followed by a reading given by Miss Grace Gaffney. The daughter of the hostess, Miss Willette Taylor, rendered a piano solo, after which Mrs. O. D. Bartlett gave a monologue. Next was offered a vocal solo by Mrs. Rector. Another very interesting number was the reading given by Mrs. Fox.

An added feature of the afternoon was a general discussion by Mrs. R. K. Rambo, touching on her recent trip to Augusta, and outlining the obligations assumed and the benefits derived from concerted action by the Woman's clubs of Atlanta.

Visiting Beauties and Lovely Debutante Will Grace Grand Opera

Adorning the page are three of the most beautiful figures featuring the grand opera season in Atlanta this year. At the upper left is Mrs. Clifford Hatcher, Jr., of Miami, Fla., who will visit her sister, Mrs. Harold Rogers, at her home on Cherokee road. Miss Sarah Peel Watts, of Charlottesville, Va., only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Watts, at the extreme right, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. William H. Kiser, at her home on Pace's Ferry road, and will be a guest in her grandfather's box, Colonel William Lawson Peel, at the opera Monday evening. Miss Watts is to be entertained extensively, as she is one of the most prominent and admired visitors in Atlanta. The charming photograph at the lower part of the page is Miss Virginia Campbell, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bulow Campbell, who will be seen in a box party Monday evening at the presentation of "Aida" by the Metropolitan Opera company. Photograph of Mrs. Hatcher by Chambers Studio, of Chicago, and Miss Campbell's is by the Winn Studio.

Capital City Supper-Dance Opens Season

The initial evening social affair of the Grand Opera season and a brilliant climax to the glorious opera "Aida" will be the supper dance Monday evening at the Capital City club when opera stars will mingle with southern society, this popular club being renowned for its hospitable atmosphere.

The directors of the club will be hosts on this occasion to the directors and artists of the Metropolitan Opera company and to the directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association and their wives.

Atlanta's Cultural and Festive Week Marks Sixteenth Grand Opera Season

The most cultural and festive week in Atlanta's history dawns today. Grand Opera is on the horizon and the Gate City of the South is the mecca to which hundreds of music lovers are treking, lured by the sixteenth operatic season and to hear those incomparable, world-renowned singers of the famous Metropolitan, entertain, thrill and hold enraptured thousands of musically inclined audiences at the auditorium throughout the forthcoming seven days.

Visitors will come from far and near to listen to stirring melodies from such noted composers as Verdi, Puccini, Leon-Cavallo, Wolf-Ferrari, Donizetti, Massenet and Wagner, whose magical music has charmed and stirred the emotions of world-wide audiences for generations.

Through such a marvelous medium as the Metropolitan Opera company, Atlantans and the stranger within her gates, will again be given the opportunity to listen attentively to, and drink deep of this glorious fine arts festival. In their fullsome praise and patronage threof, they will strengthen and demonstrate the appreciation of the cultural side of life.

April Is Season of Enjoyment.

April is always anticipated and set apart as Atlanta's season of musical enjoyment. Residents and visitors embrace simultaneously the magic suggestiveness and spirited meaning of this eventful month and occasion, for Atlanta is the only city outside of New York that sponsors an annual presentation of Grand Opera by the brilliant and internationally famed organization.

Society will assemble every afternoon and evening at social clubs and hotels, to participate in the program of entertainment planned before and after each performance. The social calendars of the Capital City, Piedmont Driving and Druid Hills Golf clubs provide for a week of unusual entertainment. Augmenting this program are the tea-dances and luncheon parties scheduled at the Georgian Terrace and Atlanta Biltmore hotels, where orchestras will play arias from the operas at special hours specified for dancing and teaing on the terraces.

Visitors Arrive Sunday.

Visitors, those devotees of music, begin to arrive Sunday from many miles away, adding their numbers to those who reside here yearly and await with prideful spirit the annual return of the artists. It is an auspicious occasion, and may well be termed the April carnival of song. Not in many months has Atlanta been so gay of heart, so in readiness to receive the song-birds, and to welcome with outstretched arms the entrancing season of 1926. Opera goers are anxiously awaiting the debuts of the two wonderful American singers, Mary Lewis and Marion Talley, preparing to fall captive to their glorified voices and charms, as did last season's audience, which greeted with delighted and ringing applause Laurence Tibbetts, the youthful California baritone who has risen to stellar heights in the Metropolitn ranks. Likewise, a royal welcome awaits those favorites with whom many will renew old friendships.

Atlanta music lovers adore Rosa Ponselle, Lucrezia Bori, Frances Peralta, Julia Claussen, Florence Easton and admire with great fervor the art of Gigli, Martinelli, Chaliapin De Luca, Mardones, Rothier, Reschiglian, and other names to conjure with in the world of music, for Atlanta has held the "Met" close to a warm pulsing heart for sixteen years.

Visitors Honored at Biltmore Tea-Dance.

The tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore Saturday afternoon was a delightful feature of the week-end. Dancing was enjoyed in the ballroom, the tea tables being placed around the outer edge, each being decorated with a vase of bright-colored flowers.

RICH'S --- AT BROAD AND ALABAMA --- A SOUTHERN INSTITUTION FOR 59 YEARS!

Facsimile of Rosa Ponselle's handwriting

Shop at Rich's

Rosa Ponselle

Miss Ponselle in a negligee purchased at Rich's

Ponselle the Great came to town the other day. She got to the Biltmore unobserved. Four hours later, accompanied by her secretary, she swept into Rich's.

Sensation! Uproar!

Her presence here immediately became palpable, electrifying the store. Business was suspended. The repercussions were felt outside, in the newspaper offices. Instanter an army of reporters, notebooks drawn, pencils fixed, attacked her, covered by a battery of camera gunners.

"Why such a fuss?" in that voice that has conquered the capitals of the world. "Atlanta is my favorite city and Rich's my favorite store. I am at home at Rich's and I like it better than the shops of West End, London; Rue de la Paix, Paris, or Fifth Avenue, New York.

"For seven years, immediately on arriving in Atlanta I have visited Rich's.

"This is not strange. There is warmth, friendliness at Rich's, your famous southern hospitality.

"The merchandise, the styles! I find nothing better in Europe and America. You have many things here before they are shown in New York!

"You call this idle talk? Proof of my words is in the fact that, just after leaving New York, I have now purchased $500 of 'this and that'—lingerie, negligees, if you please.

"Glorious Atlanta, wonderful Rich's, I love you!"

Well, sweet Rosa Ponselle, our heart is yours also!

Brilliant Convention Staged By Augusta Clubwomen

By Bessie S. Stafford.

The splendid group of women composing the Augusta federation well deserve the praise and glory of the brilliant convention held in Augusta April 5 to 9, which is now a matter of history. This was indeed a colossal undertaking involving months of preparation and planning to entertain and actually be responsible for the hundreds of women who attended the thirtieth annual convention of the Georgia federation. This was carried out in perfect detail, from the reception committee meeting the train on the arrival of delegates, until they entrained Friday, April 9, for their respective homes after a four-day session.

Demonstrated Ability.

Mrs. David Bloch, president of the Augusta federation, demonstrated her exceptional executive ability as convention hostess and general chairman. She was in attendance upon every session, stood ready to answer all questions, to smooth out every detail, and this she did with charm, poise and dignity, her graciousness and sweetness reaching every person with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. David Nachman, president of the Augusta Woman's club, was right bower to Mrs. Bloch, and right royally she deserved her title, for she supported and cooperated with the city federation president in every movement during the convention, demonstrating the harmonious spirit existing before the convention began and while the clubwomen were guests of Augusta. Mrs. A. H. Brenner, first vice president of the state federation, had a guiding hand in this enjoyable convention, and when the reason of its great success is told, every member of the Augusta federation deserves individual praise. The convention plans showed that wonderful team work had put over the entire program and that every woman had done her duty.

Among Others.

Among others who assisted Mrs. Bloch were Mrs. David Nachman, of the Woman's club; Mrs. W. C. Lyeth, of the Philomathic; Miss Beryl Bredenberg, of the Business and Professional club; Miss Alma Videtto, of the teachers; Mrs. Isaac Cohen, Council of Jewish Women; Miss Alma Brown, graduate nurses, which clubs compose the city federation. The same praise for faithful service before and after the convention is due the officers of the city federation. Miss Annie Page, Miss Anne Sancken, Mrs. L. S. Arrington, Miss Caroline Brown, Mrs. W. T. Wiggins, Mrs. P. F. McAnnally, Mrs. J. P. Mulherin. Mrs. Mulherin was also chairman of the city federation luncheon committee, and Mrs. Arrington was also vice general chairman of the convention.

The following Augusta convention chairmen were devoted in their efforts and deserve much of the praise for the success of the convention: Mrs. A. H. Brenner, who also had many duties as state vice president; Mrs. Sanford Gardner, Mrs. M. M. MacFerrin, Miss Sophie Schneiker, Mrs. B. N. Cranston, Mrs. Espey, Mrs. A. B. von Kamp, Mrs. L. H. Clinton, Mrs. T. J. Hamilton, Mrs. Phoebe Dana Kellogg, Mrs. M. M. Hurst, Mrs. V. P. Sydenstricker, Mrs. Rose Curry, Mrs. Harold Eve, Mrs. J. Willie Levy, Mrs. William H. Fleming, Mrs. Clarence Duvall, Miss Anna Ayre, Mrs. Sibert Jones, Mrs. J. S. Plaxco, Mrs. W. C. Kellogg, Mrs. W. S. Richardson and Mrs. Willis Holt—who was not only one of the luncheon chairmen but director of publicity.

Georgia clubwomen came together for the betterment of humanity, and to go on record to continue in that unselfish aim. The federation is growing every day in strength, now numbers 50,000 Georgia women who are united in true purpose, and every woman has as her inspiration to do something to make the world better for us all. It was Matthew Arnold who said: "If the world ever sees the time when the women come together purely and simply for the good of all mankind, it will be a power such as the world has never seen."

The Richmond County Federated clubs and officers include:

Augusta City Federation—President, Mrs. David Bloch.

Augusta Woman's Club—President, Mrs. David Nachman.

Augusta Philomathic Club—President, Mrs. Wilfred Lyeth.

Augusta Business and Professional Woman's Club—President, Miss Beryl Bredenberg, 460 Greene street.

Augusta Teachers' Club—President, Miss Alma Videtto, 1240 15th street.

Augusta Association of University Women—President, Mrs. J. B. Littleton, 2431 McDowell street.

Augusta Council of Jewish Women—President, Mrs. Isaac Cohen, 2312 Walton way.

Richmond County Teachers' Club—President, Miss Jamie Bruce, Hephzibah.

Graduate Nurses' Association—President, E. Alma Brown.

Mrs. C. S. Selover To Direct Club Institute in Athens

The University campus, always attractive with its young life of girls and boys, is especially so when the summer school of over 2,000 students is in session—students not only from all over our own state, but representatives from other states.

This Piedmont section of Georgia with cool nights and not unpleasantly warm days is a health-making locality and conducive to intellectual effort. It is to this environment we invite you for a few short days of study in our club institute. The dates—June 29 and 30, July 1 and 2.

Mrs. Selover Leader.

Following the plan as suggested by Dr. Stewart, director of summer school, we are to have an outstanding clubwoman to direct and instruct in club work. Mrs. C. S. Selover, of Cleveland, Ohio, national and general federation chairman of club institute, is to be our leader.

Georgia friends who know Mrs. Selover tell us of her charming personality aside from her ability and splendid service in club work. She will map out her program, which we hope to give you at an early date.

Only morning sessions were agreed upon at last year's meeting. Afternoons to be given over to other summer school activities, if desired, and social events. A silver cup will be offered as an award for attendance to the district with the largest number. The evening entertainments of the summer school will be specially planned for the clubwomen. Other nights will be given over to clubwomen for special entertainment for the summer school.

Fine Opportunity.

The meeting of the federation in Augusta last week gave a fine opportunity of reaching the clubwomen over the state and the indication is for a large attendance at the coming session of club institute.

Distrct presidents, won't you make it your responsibility to see that your district is well represented? Make of your club and clubmembers publicity agents for club institute, for this is our best effort to instruct in club work.

Our federation must increase in clubs and club members with a knowledge of the splendid and unselfish service the federation is giving to Georgia.

(Signed) MRS. C. M. SNELLING,
State Chairman of Club Institute.

Mrs. Helbig Issues Letter to Women Of City Federation

To the members of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs: Dear friends:

One of the main objects of the Federation of Women's clubs is to keep in touch with as many clubs as possible, and as far as possible to emulate the example of various clubs as pertains to worth-while things. As chairman of community service for the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, I not only heartily indorse the following "Pledge of all good Atlanta citizens," but pass it on for the earnest consideration of the 115 clubs that comprise the Atlanta Federation. This pledge was adopted by and originated in the Boulevard Park Civic league, of which Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe is president and Mrs. L. F. Dreyfus chairman of community improvements.

Pledge of Citizens.

Realizing that all must work together to make a community or a city what it ought to be; and realizing that cleanliness, sanitation, a healthful and wholesome atmosphere and attractiveness are some of the greatest assets any city can have, I wish to and will do my part in making my city—Atlanta—clean and attractive.

First: By doing everying I can to keep my own little "corner" free of rubbish, papers, trash and other unsightly things, as well as all other accumulations which might prove unsanitary or a menace to health. Thus will I make the city clean, the first step toward attractiveness.

Second: By doing whatsoever is practical, proper and within my means to add something of beauty or attractiveness to our city, such as planting a tree or a shrub, making beautiful lawns, planting a flower and painting-up.

Third: By cooperating with others interested in the cleanliness and attractiveness of Atlanta, and encouraging in whatever way I can, and at all times, an interest on the part of others in civic pride and a city beautiful.

Fourth: I am not only willing, but anxious, to see Atlanta go forward and realize that each in his own way can give impetus to that movement by doing his best with the problem nearest at hand.

Fifth: Realizing that only by giving his best can a person receive the best in return, I make this pledge to myself: "That I will endeavor to learn the meaning of civic pride, cooperation, personal effort, civic interest, achievement and 'a city beautiful.'"

Appropriate Pledge.

Just at this season of the year is this pledge peculiarly appropriate, as the chamber of commerce is beginning its spring clean-up campaign and the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs is preparing to take part in this. The time for better homes week, a national celebration, is approaching and Atlanta must do her part. What a fine thing for our city if each club in our City Federation would not only adopt the above pledge, but fulfill it. I recommend that this be done, and earnestly hope that each club president will call the attention of her club to this pledge at her first opportunity. The city is the big home of all of us. You can make your community famous by helping make it a leader in neatness and beauty. Will you help?

Cordially yours,
MRS. EDWIN M. HELBIG,
Chairman, Community Service, Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs.

Twelfth District Meets in Abbeville

The twelfth district of the Georgia Federation of Woman's Clubs will meet in Abbeville April 30 at the Methodist church.

All clubs in the twelfth district are expected to be represented. The state president, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, will attend.

Mountain Boy Writes Letter.

This letter was written by a mountain boy of 13 who has been an orphan without any "folks" since babyhood. He has had little chance to go to school, having "worked around" for his living almost all his life. He is now at the Tallulah Falls school on the scholarship of Argonne post, No. 1, American Legion, Atlanta, is doing fnely in every way. His character and spirit excel his spelling but that will improve. The directness with which he gets things said partakes of the "punch" of a future journalist. Lewis will amount to something, sure.

Tallulah Falls, Jan. 30, 1926.

Dear Mrs. Ottley:

I will rite you a few lians to thank you for the swetter you sent me. it is a warm one and I sure epreshate it and I thank you for letten me come to school here. I will try to get an exacation and maby I can do something for you some day. I sure did epreshate all that you have done for me. I like Miss Davis for a principl. I think that she is doing what most of wimmen could not stand. I think Miss Davis will do anything she can to help the poor and orfants and so will you. You will have to excuse bad writen for I can't rite well. I will close for this time.

Eats Anything Sleeps Fine Enjoys Life

Because she had stomach trouble Miss Carrie Livly would not eat a great many things she liked. But now since taking Adlerika she says she can eat anything, sleeps well and enjoys life.

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old metabolic poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Just ONE spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can sleep at night without rolling from side to side. Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika removes much additional poisonous matter which you never thought was in your system, and which caused sour stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, etc. Don't wait any longer but let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels QUICK relief. At leading druggists.—(adv.)

Seventh District President

Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, of Dallas, who was elected president of the seventh district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, at the convention held last Friday in Dallas. As vice president of the district Mrs. McGarity has been very active in club work, and is fully qualified to lead this organization.

State President Extends Thanks

In behalf of the federated women of Georgia I have the honor to express most hearty appreciation to the clubwomen of the Augusta federation, who have extended such distinguished courtesies to the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in the thirtieth convention assembled at the Bon Air-Vanderbilt hotel, April 7, 8 and 9 as the guests of the Augusta Federation of Women's Clubs.

Such a combination of sunny skies, beautiful surroundings and gracious hospitality has rarely greeted the women of the Georgia federation of clubs during the 30 years of its organized life.

The thanks which we give here, express the splendid hospitality thus extended the Georgia clubwomen, must include also grateful recognition of the many courtesies extended through Augusta clubwomen by official and personal life of Augusta outside of its own bounds.

In leaving the beautiful city where we spent four such days the federated clubwomen of Georgia leave their hearts behind.

MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY,
President Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Seventh District Elects Officers At Convention

Mrs. Charles B. McGarity was elected president of the Seventh district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to succeed Mrs. Oscar T. Peeples, who has served a very successful term of office. The election took place at the district convention held in Dallas last Friday, and a vote was taken that next year's convention would be held in Lafayette in the spring.

The other officers elected include Mrs. W. F. Collar, of Austell, vice president; Mrs. Wirt Garmany, of Lafayette, secretary; Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, of Dalton, recording secretary; Mrs. B. F. Lowther, of Cedartown, treasurer; Miss Belle Bayless, of Kingston, press. The office of corresponding secretary was made appointive by the president, and Miss Bessie Crew, of Dallas, was appointed to this district office.

Mrs. Dougherty Is Elected President.

At a recent meeting of the Abbeville Woman's club the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. W. Daugherty; first vice president, Mrs. P. D. Wootten; second vice president, Mrs. E. P. Dunaway; recording secretary, Mrs. J. R. Ewing; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. H. McDaniel; treasurer, Miss Julia Bass; music director, Mrs. Tom McDonald; assistant music director, Mrs. J. H. Dorsey; parliamentarian, Mrs. Judson Johnson; librarian, Mrs. R. T. Ford; publicity superintendent, Mrs. George Hancock.

The club is doing good work in all the different departments. Six new trees have been placed on highway and named, four trees in memory of four club members who have died and one for Dr. Googe, the former mayor, and one for Mrs. Charles Sheldon, who has been such a great help to the club.

G. M. A. TO COMPETE FOR NATIONAL HONOR

Major William F. Robinson and Major John H. Hester, distinguished army officers, will inspect Georgia Military academy Monday for recommendations for honor schools, it was announced Saturday. The report from the two officers, who comprise a board of inspectors, will be given the secretary of war for decision on the 12 military schools of the country to be designated as honor schools. G. M. A. was awarded a place as an honor school last year and interest has been keen among students and faculty this year to hold the rating. Competition for the 12 places is keen among military school and much prestige is given a school so designated.

Mrs. Otto Makes Her Report On Motion Pictures

Mrs. Olaf Otto, of Savannah, motion picture chairman for the Georgia federation, made the following report at the 30th annual convention held in Augusta:

"When your chairman accepted this position as chairman of motion pictures committee, she carried to it a great interest in the subject but a very vague idea as to her duties. After writing to several 'in authority' she came to the conclusion that it takes a lot of time to round up these duties and to set in motion the forces for action.

"Mrs. Herbert Brown, through Mrs. Arthur De Laperriere, of the ninth district, and Mrs. W. D. Tutt, of the eighth, are to be congratulated on sending in reports. The ninth district, besides sponsoring 'better movies' programs, has placed a motion picture machine in one of the schools through the Norcross Women's club. In the eighth district Mrs. Tutt has written many letters to the clubs during the year, sending out lists of pictures planned especially for children's matinees, also recommneding that mothers be urged to ascertain the kind of pictures their children are seeing. Her letters stressed the fact that a desire for good pictures must be created and a demand for them fostered.

"The Savannah Women's federation through its committee on motion pictures, Mrs. J. W. Daniel, chairman, is working to form a council for better films, made up of representatives from all clubs interested in this subject. This council will work along constructive lines, supporting good pictures rather than advertising bad ones. Worth-while films will be selected and classified into groups suitable for mature audiences, for general audiences, for family audiences including young people, and for family audiences including children. It will probably sponsor junior matinees which will be properly chaperoned and where carefully selected pictures, taking in the interest and intelligence of the child, will be shown.

"It will be the object of this council to cooperate with film theater managers in pushing the pictures it approves so that they will be financially successful, for however altruistic a manager may be, he cannot be expected to operate at a loss. It is the hope of your chairman that similar councils will be formed in every district and that the motion picture, that power for good or evil, will be so guarded and directed that it will prove a blessing instead of a curse to mankind."

Reports Must Go To Mrs. Robert Heinsohn

Will the officers, district presidents and state chairmen who did not turn in their reports at the Augusta convention do so at once to the newly-elected recording secretary, Mrs. Robert Heinsohn, LaFayette Terrace, Macon? She is most anxious that none of these be left out of the year book, and will greatly appreciate your prompt cooperation in this matter. (This does not include reports already handed in to Mrs. Brantley and Mrs. McKinzie.

Mrs. Hastings Makes Mrs. Lee Chairman Of Club Posters

Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of fifth district, Federation of Women's Clubs, announces the appointment of Mrs. R. H. Lee as poster chairman. Mrs. Hastings urges all clubs to be preparing posters for the exhibit at the May meeting at Emory university. At this time, a prize will be awarded the best individual poster, or set of posters. All posters will then be sent on to the club institute, University of Georgia, Athens. The fifth district won the silver cup at the poster exhibit in Athens in 1925 and will be the permanent owner if the cup is won for three successive years.

Each club president and departmental chairman in the fifth district is requested to make a collection of newspaper clippings, year book, club history, original poems, pictures of pageants and plays, pictures of flower shows, of clubhouses, officers, etc.

The blank posters may be obtained now at state headquarters, 604 Chamber of Commerce building. All posters will be preserved after the exhibit and may be secured at state headquarters. For further directions call Mrs. R. H. Lee, West 1784.

Barnesville Woman's Club Gives Report.

The Barnesville Woman's club has 91 members and monthly meetings are held regularly except during summer months.

Standing and special committees are actively interested, which results in good reports. Educational committees see that all children are in school, paying for tuition and buying books for those unable to do so. The civic and garden committees offer prizes for most beautifully kept lawns and vacant lots, thereby making waste places blossom like a rose. The sanitarium committees help to keep our city clean, putting on a clean-up week in March. The cemetery committee makes our "silent city" a place of peace and beauty. A luncheon committee serves dinners to the Civitans and thereby adds to the treasury as well as wins the good will of our men.

We have paid state and general federation dues $27.30. Paid to Tallulah Falls school, $40.00. Paid to Ella F. White Memorial fund, $35.00. $35.00.

Respectfully submitted.
MRS. W. T. GARRETT,
Delegate.
MRS. L. A. COLLIER,
President.

Public Service Body Gives Thorough Study To City Rail Changes

Results of the hearings held by the Georgia public service commission on the proposed changes and eliminations of stops on the Atlanta street railway system, will probably not be ready for announcement for some days, yet, according to Chairman James A. Perry, of the commission.

Mr. Perry said Saturday that the commission had been studying the voluminous record, taking each of the hundreds of proposed changes individually, during the past week. This work will continue another week. The commission plans to make a personal inspection of some of the stops affected in the proposed revision.

Mrs. Rambo Issues Letter On May Day Festival

Throughout the length and breadth of this country of ours May 1 will be set aside as a day of festivity for children. Health and happiness, God's greatest gifts to children, will naturally assume the major role of May day programs. These may well be the summation of school health activities for the year. In many countries May day pageants have been arranged with May queens to be crowned, May pole dances, games, etc. Happiness born of radiant healthfulness.

Health Program.

State superintendent of schools says: "I think it a splendid idea to emphasize the subject of health on May day, and, if possible, have the day properly celebrated in every school in the state. Anything which the schools can do to interest the child in his own personal health and enlist his interest in the health of the community should be considered worthy of the teacher's very best efforts. It is greatly desired that all schools in the state will lend their very best efforts toward using May day celebration to emphasize health subjects in the schools and in the community."

If you have not planned to have an elaborate May day festival growing out of the health work done in your school during the year, please give the children a picnic to celebrate the beginning of your summer round-up of pre-school children who will enter school next fall. If your P.-T. A. has not entered every school in your county in the Delineator contest—as suggested in enclosed outline—please see that this is done next fall—using enclosed stamped envelope to give me a report of your intention to help to make "every father and every mother a blue ribbon parent in 1926."

Next year plans will be made to form a permanent May day committee with every county superintendent of schools, county health officers, county public health nurse and county demonstration agent as members.

We realize that little time is left for planning, but do what you can for May day this year. Each day throughout the year work for a health program which will reflect credit to our state. And next May day let us all get together to joyfully express our happiness in the health accomplishments of 1926 for children.

Mrs. VerNooy Chairman.

Mrs. C. A. VerNooy, of Athens, is the state chairman for the May day committee and all club women are urged to get in communication with her immediately for information as to the May day program and also to enroll the clubs in this splendid undertaking. Every child in Georgia should have a part in this health and happiness movement.

Please report to your state chairman of public welfare what part your club and community has taken in this celebration.

Cordially,
MRS. ROBERT K. RAMBO,
State Chairman Public Welfare.

Mrs. Brantley Goes To Convention.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the state federation, attended the 8th district convention which met in Elberton on April 13 and 14.

"The Value of Scholarship" As Told by Mrs. Price-Smith

Join me in a cruise on this great wonderful "ship." The officers of this ship will be president as the captain, and the executive board and coworkers the rest of the staff. The Georgia Federation represents a group of citizens generally concerned with the welfare of the state and nation and at all times stands ever ready to discharge its duties toward all educational lines. With courage and faith at the helm the scholarship girls will always succeed. As we stand gazing on this appropriate setting of this big ship we find ourselves at a point almost central to the most needed work of the federation. The value of this scholarship work is shown when success comes to these students, and their willingness to serve, aid comfort, inspire and spread happiness among the world. Making the most of their opportunity achieving results and personal success. Life grows with activity with expression in all normal ways. Some of these worthy girls living in lonely regions who cannot even attend church need a more intimate acquaintance with the work and the ways of the federation. The district presidents will be the key to locate these girls and assist them in finding themselves, in service to God and humanity.

If there is a business college in your district, secure scholarships and gain confidence of the teacher and pupil; soon both will be interested and at work. After completion of course, place her where she can have proper environment. Instill into her mind that success depends upon her earenstness and determination when a task is undertaken. Despite our intellectual pride to aid these girls, we do not know all the methods of our Divine Father. Who at all times guides our every step in assisting these girls in many ways to become valuable citizens. It is the individual club woman multiplied who makes the general federation or state federation. We all realize that this organization has a great and powerful influence in a world that is slowly turning its face toward the light. Let me beg of you one and all to do team work and make the value of our scholarships greater every year.

MRS. W. B. PRICE-SMITH.
State Scholarship Chairman.

Lydia E. Pinkham and Her Great Granddaughter

IF Lydia E. Pinkham were alive today she would be 107 years old. Her memory is revered by her descendants who continue to manufacture and market her famous Vegetable Compound.

From Lydia E. Pinkham to her great granddaughter, four generations have relied upon this dependable medicine. The happy school girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, knows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps to restore and preserve her health.

Years ago, a mother gave this medicine to her fifteen year old daughter. The daughter married and became the mother of seven children. She writes, "I always took it before my babies were born and I know it gave me strength to keep up and do my work. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again and I am giving it to my oldest daughter."

Because this dependable medicine has proved its worth in her own family, she will answer letters from other women asking about it.

"Un Mot Ici, Est Bien"

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS,
Sandersville, State Editor Georgia Division United Daughters of the Confederacy.

No organization in the world should be more united than the United Daughters of the Confederacy. The very love of the cause from which sprang its growth and development is sufficient to band all chapters together into a sisterhood of unalloyed unity and interest. All chapters over the state should be cognizant of the achievements and aspirations of their sister chapters, and feel in accord with their advancement and progression. To do this it is necessary to keep in touch with the news which is published weekly on the official page. Statistics of great value to individual members as well as to the chapters, appear from time to time and the various workings of all chapters are faithfully chronicled as sent in. The page is arranged with a view to keeping achievement as the goal of all enterprise and to catalog all records of prizes and scholarships, as well as featuring the historical value of the different divisions of the work. Recently, no less than six members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy told the state editor that they did not receive in their homes the paper which carries the official page. This fact is, in itself discouraging, in that a message is sent each week with a direct objective—that of reaching the heart and intriguing the interest of every member of the organization. While the fact remains that thousands all over the state do receive the official page and look forward to the coming of the paper which is kind enough to give us the necessary publicity, we would like to reach out and gather in the few that do not, so that the circulation may be complete and the circle closed.

Miss Rebecka Black DuPont has sent a most interesting article which appears elsewhere on the page today. It deals with the subject of crosses of honor in the psychological time when all hearts and thoughts turn toward these citations as the next honor to be paid the beloved veterans. Miss Black is a valued member of the executive board of the Georgia division U. D. C. and has served most faithfully for years. She states that the Georgia crosses are now in Mrs. Holt's possession and that the chapters will receive same at an early date. She regrets that a delay has occurred. She goes on to say that it was unavoidable and not due to anything but circumstances over which no one had control. We who know and love Miss Black for her outstanding work in the organization needed no assurance of this kind for ever she has been found faithful and at her post of duty.

The Oconee chapter, U. D. C., of Dublin, Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, president, is planning quite an elaborate affair in honor of Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president, Georgia division, on Wednesday, April 21. A seated luncheon will be given at the home of the president, Mrs. Bashinski, and this assurance is sufficient to guarantee a feast of epicurean delights and histrionic ability. In the afternoon a reception will be tendered Mrs. McKenzie at the home of Mrs. A. T. Coleman. This function has been planned most elaborately and the happy thought of using Mrs. Coleman's beautiful new home, which is le dernier cri in tasteful appointments, is most timely. Other guests invited for the occasion are Mrs. J. E. Hays, Montezuma; Mrs. S. G. Lang, Sandersville, first vice president; Mrs. C. R. Reed, Montezuma, corresponding secretary; Mrs. I. Lieberman, Mrs. Federic and Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville, state editor.

This chapter is most enterprising. It has shown its appreciation of its charming president by giving a scholarship in her honor. It has the distinction of having every child of suitable age in the Dublin public school enter the essay contest and write an essay. This is quite remarkable, shows wonderful cooperation and is certainly worthy of honorable mention on the official page. It is our hope that all chapters will bring in such splendid reports and that the news be sent to the state editor so that their achievement may be exploited. The Oconee chapter is also planning to entertain the executive board of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs. This is quite a compliment to a member of the board, Mrs. Louie Bradly, director of the twelfth district of Music clubs, and shows that not only does it rate 100 per cent in its own activities, but it is making an effort to assist other organizations in the forward march of progression.

Frederick Cup Contest.

Mrs. Hardy Richard, Marshallville, is chairman of the contest—Best story on war-time experience as told by a Confederate veteran. Serving with her on this committee are: First division, Mrs. Regina Rambo Benson, Marietta, Ga.; second division, Mrs. Helen M. Long, Newnan, Ga.; third division, Mrs. H. O. Ball, Jackson, Ga.; fourth division, Miss Mary Howard, Ellaville, Ga.; fifth division, Mrs. J. N. Simmons, Bainbridge, Ga. Each subchairman is to get as many stories as they can from their district and pick out the best three and send them to Mrs. Richard; then she is to select the best one of the three and have it at the state convention in Statesboro next October. The second best is to have honorable mention. These stories must be in the hands of the subchairman by September 15 and in the hands of the state chairman by October 1. This contest bids fair to be of great interest, and it behooves all who are able to do their part toward the success of the enterprise. The Frederick cup is presented by Mrs. Oscar McKenzie in honor of her brother who served in the world war and in memory of her father who was a Confederate of highest rank. Each division should make a point of securing as many stories as possible so that it will rate 100 per cent in the contest.

Ben Hill Chapter U. D. C.

The last meeting of the Ben Hill chapter of Fitzgerald was held at the home of Mrs. E. A. Russell with Mesdames Russell, M. T. Boney and Miss Mabel Rogers as hostesses. The meeting was called to order by the president and opened with the ritual sent by Mrs. H. M. Franklin, of Tennille, chairman of programs. Mrs. Newton Mathis reported that the educational committee had distributed the literature for the essays to all the schools. Mrs. J. C. Fussel reported that the welfare committee thought it best to give a dinner or some form of entertainment some date later than Memorial Day. Mrs. Jim Mays reported that as yet no speaker had been secured for Memorial Day but that plans were under way and would be perfected by that time. The chapter voted to hold the memorial exercises at the Baptist church on Monday afternoon, April 26. It was carried unanimously that the president order some flags for Confederate graves. The following program, in charge of Mrs. C. T. Owens, was rendered: Reading, "The Major's Story," Miss Dorothy Jay; "History of the Confederate Flag," Mrs. Newton Mathis; "History of Green County," Mrs. Emory Wilcox; solo, Mrs. Chester Strickland.

Fulton County Chapter.

Fulton county chapter U. D. C. met last Tuesday in the palm room at the Piedmont hotel, with Mrs. C. L. Anderson presiding. The treasurer reported all debts paid and that the chapter was in good financial condition. Four new applications for membership had been transferred to state registrar during the month and two new applications were made at this time. Miss Sue Palmer is doing good work for the chapter. Mrs. C. B. Williams, custodian of crosses, stated that she had applied for several crosses of honor for Confederate veterans and two crosses of service for world war veterans to be delivered June 3. Mrs. J. S. Wise, historian, was welcomed after being absent several months on account of severe illness. Mrs. Wise read an interesting paper on the "Origin of the Cross of Honor." Dr. C. L. Moore, an honored guest, was introduced by Mrs. Anderson and responded with a talk on conditions existing in the state among the pensioners, which will be greatly relieved by the payment of back pensions. Dr. Moore stated that this amount would be paid soon. The members of the chapter were invited to attend the reunion in Birmingham with the veterans on May 18-21 by R. E. Camp, a representative of the Seaboard railway, who is a personal friend of many of the veterans. After a short social hour the chapter adjourned to meet again the first Tuesday in May.

Memorial Day To Be Observed.

The annual work of the Ladies' Memorial association begins forwarding Memorial day plans, and this body which was organized in 1866, has a larger membership than since its existence.

Memorial day, the 26th of April, will be the 59th consecutive observance of the day set apart to memorialize the Confederate soldiers who gave their lives in battle.

The preceding day the association meets in the Sexton house at Oakland cemetery to make garlands for the Confederate graves and for the big Confederate shaft erected to the unknown dead.

A small Confederate flag is placed on every grave and the ladies request the children and visitors on Memorial day to leave these flags on the graves and ask every child who can take a blossom out on that day to help spread the floral covering for those sacred grounds.

Mrs. William A. Wright, president of the Ladies' Memorial association, will later announce the official program.

East Point Social News.

J. Ernest Mixon has returned to Bradenton, Fla., after a visit with his mother, Mrs. E. P. Mixon, who has been indisposed for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Bryant and family have returned after spending several months in Sarasota, Fla., and have taken possession of the family home.

The literary meeting of Church Street Methodist Missionary society will be held Monday afternoon, April 19, with the Evie Trimble circle in charge of the program.

Miss Lola Allen, of Jonesboro, is spending several days with her aunt, Mrs. J. M. Orr.

Mrs. W. J. Darsey is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Mr. and Mrs. Bonny Carl Bruice, of Buford, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Ramsey, the past week.

J. H. Hudson is visiting with relatives in Texas.

Mrs. Eugene Calloway has been called to Blakely by illness in family.

The W. C. T. U. met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. R. B. Callahan. The Rev. O. H. Callis, of Wilmore, Ky., was the principal speaker, and a group of appropriate vocal solos was sung by Homer S. Jenkins, evangelistic singer.

Mrs. Roberts Honors T. E. L. Class.

The T. E. L. class of Moreland Avenue Baptist church held its April business meeting Wednesday afternoon at the nome of Mrs. B. B. Roberts on Eden avenue.

After the business session refreshments were served by the hostess.

The meeting was also in the nature of a farewell party to Mrs. Roberts, as she is leaving shortly to make her home at Miami. To show their love and appreciation of Mrs. Roberts, the members of the class presented her with a memory book in green and white, the class colors.

Crosses of Honor

The Cross of Honor has been written upon and discussed for so many years—28—there is very little that can now be said. There are a few facts though that will bear repetition as Georgia was instrumental in presenting same. The idea of presenting a cross of honor to the soldiers and sailors of the Confederacy originated with Mrs. Alexander S. Erwin, of Athens, Ga. The matter was placed before the United Daughters of the Confederacy convention at Hot Springs, Ark., in October, 1898, and ratified the following year at Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Sarah E. Gabbett, of Atlanta, was chosen custodian general and upon her retiring on account of the work growing too heavy, Mrs. L. H. Raines, of Savannah, was made the second custodian general. Georgia was well represented in this department of the U. D. C. work from its infancy.

Initial Step.

The Lizzie Rutherford chapter of Athens made the initial presentation of crosses on the morning of April 26, 1900. A. S. Erwin was given cross No. 1. The other chapters held their services on the evening of that date, which is Memorial day in this state. During the 25 years that have passed thousands of these coveted emblems of bravery, showing appreciation of the beloved soldiers and sailors of the south, have been presented. Under the rules, a veteran can only receive one cross, though a second cross may be given should the first cross be lost or destroyed, hence the greatest care has been taken of same.

In 1907 it was decided by the United Daughters in order to expedite the work, there being much detail and red tape, the rules requiring accuracy and papers having to be checked and rechecked, a state recorder of crosses was appointed to assist the custodian general with the clerical work. Georgia has only had two recorders, Mrs. Lettie Wirt Dupont, who fell asleep in 1911, and her daughter, who was afterwards elected recorder for life, and who still fills that office.

In 1908 it was decided to grant the cross of the soldier or sailor who had marched on before securing same, to the oldest living lineal descendant, son or daughter, and in this manner show honor to the brave man who was willing to give his life if necessary, for what he knew was right. It is harder to get up the necessary data for a descendant's cross for the ancestor is resting on the other shore. Unfortunately we never think of securing such information until it is too late. A descendant's cross can never be replaced should same be lost or stolen.

Establish Facts.

Now and then cross of honor records are called upon to establish facts and chapters can give ready information to the boys who wish to secure a cross of service, they having on file the original papers upon which the cross of honor was bestowed and these paper are always certified by two veterans who know the war record of the applicant.

Is a veteran proud of his cross of honor? Ask him and see. He knows it was bravely won and can prove by wearing same his war record was clear and the daughters appreciate his services.

Crosses of honor have been given to all but a very few veterans who live away from where there are chapters, and this part of our work is almost completed. We have tried faithfully to see that each and every man who fought, bled and would have died for "The Cause" was presented with his cross with due ceremony and appreciation.

George M. Sparks To Speak Wednesday At West End Club

A program will be given Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by the literature department of the West End Woman's club. Mrs. Alice E. Means, chairman, announces the following attractive features:

George M. Sparks who is widely known in literary circles, will deliver an interesting address on the "Feature Story." Miss Lucile Moore, a graduate pupil of Mrs. Kurt Mueller will give a piano number, "Volcik," by Mokjers and two vocal numbers, "Ye Merry Birds That Sweetly Sing, by Gumbert, and "As in a Rose Jar," by Cadman. Little Evelyn Paradies will dance and Miss Stella Schillinger will give a reading. Mrs. Wood, well-known West End violinist, will also be present and will render several selections.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to meet with club members at the dance hall, corner of Lee and Gordon streets and enjoy this program.

A special meeting of the club is called for Friday afternoon, April 23, at 3 o'clock at the clubhouse to discuss plans for the proposed new club building. Every member is urged to be present at this important meeting. The treasurer, Mrs. H. W. Wilder, assisted by Mrs. Homer King, assistant treasurer, will be on hand at 2:30 to receive club dues which are payable at this time.

The hospital committee will meet Friday morning at the Albert Steiner clinic to fold bandages and dressings. Other committees are invited to assist in this work. The child welfare department, Mrs. J. B. Withers, chairman, reports much work accomplished at the Atlanta Child's Home. An Easter shower was given the little boys and girls by this committee. Each child received a handkerchief besides articles of clothing. Twenty-two news sheets for the baby beds were also given to the home. The committee will meet Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for their regular spend-the-day sewing for the children.

The regular meeeting was held Wednesday with Mrs. Chester Johnson, president, presiding. Imp tant club business was discussed at length and announcements of coming activities were made. Mrs. Grady Andrews announced a benefit bridge party to be given at the Henry Grady hotel Friday afternoon, April 30, under the auspices of the ways and means department.

Mrs. L. M. Ahern, chairman in charge of the Thursday evening dances, reports the largest attendance of the season. These dances are held Thursday evening of each week at the club house and are attended largely by the younger dancing contingent from all over the city. They are always chaperoned by club members and their husbands. The Charlie Trout Melody Artists are making a record for themselves with their ten-piece orchestra.

St. Paul Circle Holds Meeting.

St. Paul circle, No. 1 met at the home of Mrs. W. R. Jones, 181 Glenwood avenue with Mrs. Jack Lane presiding. Prayer was given by the honor guest, Mrs. W. C. McDonald, followed by the lesson by Mrs. W. O. Gifford. Minutes of last meeting were read and treasurer's report given. Chairman of flower committee reported $35 from sale of flowers.

Galaxy of Stars! "Annie May" Frocks - $59.50

Cameos of the Past

Opera Shawls

$24.95

—Out of the pages of history comes the Spanish embroidered shawl—a cameo of the past. It charms of itself—rich, colorful, scintillating. But there is the more subtle halo that surrounds it—associated as it is with romance, adventure, opera!

—It is the opera which has kept its brilliance alive through all these years. And this season the shawl promises to figure as prominently in the boxes as on the opera stage.

—Through a special purchase these Spanish embroidered shawls are just $24.95. All pastels as well as red, white and black. Silk hand-knotted fringe.

Hand-embroidered shawls, $34.95 to $123.75.
Hand-painted shawls, $24.95 to $50.
Plain shawls, $15 to $24.95.

When Success Hangs on Silken Threads

Glove Silk Lingerie

—When operas were young and frocks depended on the number of petticoats for their success, it mattered little of what those petticoats were made.

—But to the operagoer of 1926 everything depends on that. Her frock must sheath the body closely—not much room for lingerie at all. It must be translucent, silken, GLOVE SILK. Then success is assured.

Silk Teddies, $2.98

—Women's glove silk teddies, firm quality. Tailored and novelty styles. Pastel shades.

Silk Vests, $2.50

—Women's glove silk vests. Bodice style with strap over shoulder. Pastel shades.

Silk Bloomers, $3.50

—Women's heavy, firm quality glove silk bloomers. Pastel and dark colors.

Milanese Slips, $4.95

—Women's Milanese slips. Shadow-proof hems. Variety of colors. Sizes 36 to 44.

New Lingerie for the Opera. Purchase of Silk Costume Slips

—Opera! The signal for our lingerie buyer to go on a treasure hunt! Off to New York ten days ago! Fast and furiously she searched, breathlessly and expectantly we waited.

—At last the news came! And what a piece of news it was!

—Pastel colored costume slips, which, according to fashion, must match the new evening gowns. A special purchase of course. How else could the price be $3.89? Beautiful radium, crepe de chine and satin. Pink, green, peach, beige, orchid and white. Regularly $4.95 and $5.95.

Diaphanous Chiffon

Looks Like Silk — $1.69 — Tubs Like Cotton

—Reminds one of the little girl who reluctantly, but firmly, re-christened Mary Ann, her precious, beautiful dolly, "63."—And all because she simply COULDN'T remember the answer to "7x9!"

—Why so ethereally lovely a fabric as this new celanese chiffon should be so unromantically named "63" is a mystery.—There IS no answer to that.

Orchid, Crimson, Miami Rose, Pablo, Peach, Nile, Mais, Woodflower, Castillian Pink, White

—Colors that look after many a tubbing like primroses after rain. 36-in. Small wonder if you mistake this chiffon for silk! It looks "very like it!"

Miss Couch and Mr. Born Wed at Beautiful Ceremony

With a ceremony characterized by dignity and impressiveness at the Druid Hills Methodist church Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock, Miss Maude Couch became the bride of John Westerfield Born, the Rev. J. H. Eakes, of Griffin, officiating. Preceding the marriage service, Miss Irene Langdon sang "All For You," with Miss Ethel Beyer accompanying her at the organ.

The altar scene was one of rare beauty, the altar being decorated with Southern smilax, palms, ferns and Ascension lilies, which, under the gleaming glow of the altar candles, gave an enchanting setting for the nuptials. The posts outlining the aisles of the church were festooned with garlands of smilax with clusters of Easter lilies arranged at intervals. In the windows were cathedral candelabra burning white tapers with huge bouquets of lilies adorning their bases. White tulle was gracefully draped across the ends of the seats reserved for the families and relatives, at the ends of the pews there being bows of the tulle entwined with Easter lilies.

Bridal Party.

Mrs. Walter Toole, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss Margaret Yeager, of Knoxville, Tenn., were the two attractive bridesmaids. Mrs. Toole's gown was fashioned of orchid chiffon and Miss Yeager's of green chiffon. The bride's sisters, Mrs. Karl Elkin Greene and Miss Marion Couch, were matron-of-honor and maid-of-honor. Mrs. Greene wore turquoise blue chiffon and Miss Couch was gowned in yellow chiffon. The gowns of the maids were fashioned alike, the bodices being close-fitting and the skirts extremely full. Narrow taffeta ribbon in graduating widths to match the costumes encircled the chiffon skirts at intervals, the graceful modish skirts being of the period type, almost touching the floor in the back.

A narrow girdle of French flowers joined the bodices to the skirts and the maids wore satin slippers to match their costumes with shell pink hose. They carried exquisite floral fans fashioned of pastel shaded flowers with background of ostrich feathers to match their gowns.

The little flower girl, Miss Anna Moore Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louise Wright, wore a dainty frock of yellow chiffon made entirely of narrow ruffles. She carried a miniature floral fan and wore around her head a wreath of French flowers.

Master Bobby Maupin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Maupin, wore a smart white satin suit and carried the ring in the center of a calla lily.

The ushers, H. T. Dobbs, W. D. Greene, T. R. Allen and Carroll McGaughey, entered first. They were followed by the bride's attendants, who entered in pairs alternating with the groomsmen, who were Joe Haverty, Dr. Thomas Crenshaw, Jr., and Karl Greene.

The little flower girl and ring-bearer entered together.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful young bride entered with her father, Maxie Gregg Couch, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Carroll Griffin.

The bride's gown was modeled of lustrous white satin, the short, full skirt beaded in a tulip design of tiny seed pearls. Diamond-shaped inserts of fragile lace ornamented the skirt at intervals, while a narrow flounce of the lace formed the hemline. A lovely tulip design, embroidered in pearls, trimmed the bodice, while pearls outlined the neckline. The upper part of the bride's train was of sheerest tulle joined at the waist line to the satin, which continued to a graceful length. Flesh-colored chiffon lined the train, while sprays of orange blossoms were its only trimmings. The bridal veil of tulle edged with narrow duchess lace was adjusted to the bride's head with a coronet of rose-point lace, beaded in pearls and crystals, while clusters of orange blossoms on either side held it in place. At the back of the head the veil formed a ruche effect banded by orange blossom buds, the veil extending the length of the train. She carried an arm bouquet of valley lilies and white orchids.

Bridal Party Honored.

Following the marriage service, Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Couch entertained the members of the bridal party at their home on Oxford road. Mrs. Jacob Born, of New Orleans, Mrs. Arthur Westerfield, Mrs. Louis Wright and Mrs. W. D. Greene assisted in entertaining.

Mrs. Couch, the bride's mother, wore a peach-colored crepe gown trimmed in lace to match. Her shoulder spray was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Jacob Born, of New Orleans, the groom's mother, was gowned in lettuce-green crepe and wore a shoulder spray of orchids.

Mrs. Arthur Westerfield's gown was fashioned of pastel green chiffon.

Mrs. W. D. Greene wore hyacinth blue crepe.

Mrs. Louis Wright's gown was of blue chiffon, combined with a henna-shaded lace.

During the evening Mr. Born and his bride left for a wedding trip east. On their return they will be at home with the bride's parents for the present. Mrs. Born wore a striking two-piece traveling costume, the dress being sand-colored crepe romaine and trimmed in summer ermine.

Mrs. Pharr Is Club Hostess

Mrs. Will Pharr was hostess to the Ten Two Sewing club Wednesday afternoon at her home on Broyles street. Mrs. Jack Lane was introduced and welcomed into the club as a new member.

Those present were: Mrs. W. E. Vanderon, Mrs. Allen Tison, Mrs. Cliff Harris, Mrs. Sid Tuller, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Jack Lane, Mrs. T. P. White and Mrs. Pharr.

Miss Sara Schoen Weds Mr. Duggan in New York

The marriage of Miss Sara Schoen and Frederic Leeds Duggan, of Spring Lake, N. J., took place Saturdy at high noon in St. Bartholomew's chapel on Fifth avenue, in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends.

The church was handsomely decorated in Easter lilies, palms and ferns, and the bridal party entered to the strains of "Lohengrin's Wedding March."

Miss Grace Goldsmith, of Atlanta, was maid of honor, and Mrs. George Marion Fletcher, of New York, formerly of Atlanta, was matron of honor. They wore exquisite gowns of beige chiffon combined with lace, and Neapolitan hats in the same shade, with matching satin shoes and stockings. They carried bouquets of spring flowers of blue, lavender and pink blossoms.

The groomsmen included Louis S. Kerr, Jr., of New York; Arthur B. Forst, Jr., of Trenton, N. J.; Joseph W. Borland, of Orange, N. J.; Norman F. Robertson, of Orange, N. J.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful bride entered the church with her father, Allen M. Schoen, by whom she was given in marriage. Her bridal gown was a Lauvin model in gros de Londre, fashioned after the style de robe, with tight-fitting bodice and full skirt. The tulle veil was fastened to her blonde hair by clusters of orange blossoms, and a train of real lace completed the effective ensemble. She carried a bouquet of pale pink orchids and valley lilies.

Robert C. Roebling, of Washington, D. C., acted as best man for Mr. Duggan.

Mrs. Allen Schoen, the bride's mother, was gowned in gray georgette crepe, embroidered in self tones, and her gray transparent hat matched her gown. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Mrs. Duggan, of Spring Lake, N. J., mother of the groom, wore black chiffon veiling, flesh-colored chiffon and satin. Her flowers were orchids and valley lilies.

Wedding Breakfast.

A wedding breakfast at which 100 guests were entertained followed the ceremony and was given at the Park Lane. The table was elaborately decorated in lavender, blue and pink flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Duggan will spend their honeymoon in the Bermudas.

Miss Florence Obear Weds Mr. Lacour in Chattanooga

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Obear, Jr., announce the marriage of their daughter, Florence, to A. A. Lacour, Jr., formerly of Peoria, Ill., and now a resident of Atlanta. The wedding took place Wednesday, April 14, in Chattanooga, Tenn.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Tidwell and also a granddaughter of the late Mrs. Florence Cubbedge Obear and George S. Obear, of Birmingham, Ala. She is a sister of George Obear, III, and Elizabeth Obear.

Mrs. Lacour, who is a beautiful young woman of unusual charm, has always taken a prominent part in the philanthropic and civic life of Atlanta. She graduated from Girls' High school and attended the Atlanta Normal school. She is an active worker in charitable and women's organizations and is chairman of the Original Thirteen of the Atlanta Woman's club.

She is very talented and has studied art and interior decorating.

Mr. Lacour, who is a young man of unusual ability, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lacour, of Peoria, Ill. He holds the position of professor of art at the Georgia School of Technology. He is a graduate of Bradley Polytechnic college of Peoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Lacour, are now at home with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Obear, Jr., at their home on Ridgecrest road in Druid Hills, where they will be until June, when they will take an extended wedding trip.

Miss Josephine Roper Weds Mr. Meschine.

Cornelia, Ga., April 17.—A wedding of interest to South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia was that of Miss Roper and Reynolds Meschine. The wedding took place in the Cornelia Methodist church, Rev. Wills Jones officiating.

The bridesmaids were Miss Lucile Brewer, of Gainesville, Ga., and Miss Blanche Taylor, of Tallulah Falls, Ga. Robert Roper, a brother of the bride, and Tom Milner, of Tallulah Falls, Ga., were the groomsmen. Mrs. J. L. Rooper, Jr., was matron of honor. Miss Austell Henderson was maid of honor. Keys Bowman was Mr. Meschine's best man.

Ouida Cleveland, a cousin of the bride, and Louise Clinkscale, a niece of the groom, were flower girls. James Louis Roper, III, was ring bearer. Little Betty Joe Roper and Francis Meschine held the veil. J. L. Roper, Jr., brother of the bride, and Mourris Meschine, brother of the groom were ushers.

The bride entered on the arm of her father. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man. Her dress was of beautiful faille silk with lace trimmings, her veil was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms while Betty Joe Roper and Francis Meschine held the end. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and valley lilies.

The bride and groom left in their car for points in South and North Carolina. Her going away dress was a blue silk sport with hat to match. They will be at home to their many friends at Tallulah Falls, Ga., after April 11.

Kirkwood Civic League To Meet.

The fine arts section of the Kirkwood Civic league will meet Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, April 20 in the school auditorium.

An unusually interesting program has been prepared by the chairman, Mrs. E. H. Pickett, and it is urged that all members and their friends will attend.

Mrs. R. F. Gilliam will read a paper on "Color," a subject on which it behooves everyone interested in the fine arts to be better informed. Mrs. Gilliam is well qualified to present this theme, as she has received national recognition from her exquisite ivory miniatures, as well as her studies in water-color and oil.

The musical features of the afternoon will be arranged by Miss Mary Louise Parham, Miss Jerome and Sam Hughes.

Beautiful Bride To Reside in Savannah

Piedmont Chapter D. A. R. Has Meeting.

The Piedmont Continental chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution held its regular meeting Thursday at the Henry Grady hotel, Mrs. A. H. Foster, the regent, presided.

A short business session was held. Reports were heard from the officers of the chapter, also reports from the state D. A. R. conference. The Piedmont Continental chapter was placed on the state D. A. R. honor roll again this year.

A book recently published, entitled "Our Flag," by Dosia Head Brooks, a former regent of the chapter, was most favorably received. It was voted to send this book, as a gift to Carnegie library to be placed on its shelf or reference.

Korea Native To Address Auxiliary.

Miss Pilly Choi will be principal speaker at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church Monday afternoon, April 12, at 3:30, at the church. Miss Choi is a native of Korea and a very brilliant young woman who came to this country last year and entered the senior class at Agnes Scott college. She is studying with definite purpose in view as it is her ambition on returning to her own country to become president of a college for girls.

Her talk Monday afternoon will be both interesting and instructive as she will be able to give first-hand information about the conditions in Korea.

All the women of the church and their friends are urged to be present at this meeting.

Benefit Bridge To Be Given.

Georgia chapter No. 127, O. E. S., will sponsor a benefit bridge party at Rich's tea room Tuesday, April 20, from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The public is cordially invited. Tables $2 each or 50 cents per person. Those desiring to make reservations can do so by calling Madison 5890-J, Main 4721-W, Main 5527-W or Main 1623-W.

Baptist W. M. U. Board Meets.

The executive board of the Atlanta Baptist W. M. U. met April 8 at the First Baptist church, with 20 present. In the absence of the assistant superintendent, Mrs. John Thompson, the meeting was called to order by Mrs. Jeffries. The devotional was led by Mrs. T. L. Lewis, after which reports from treasurer and good will centers were made.

Mrs. E. S. Caldwell, secretary of the third district, announced a rally for April 27 with the Ponce de Leon church. Mrs. Pascal, secretary of the seventh district, will hold a rally May 7 with the Druid Hills church.

Reports from Counsellors of Y. W. A's., G. A's., and chairmen of personal service, stewardship and white cross.

Resignation of Mrs. C. W. Wing, superintendent, was read and accepted with regret.

It was decided by the board to make a love gift of $10 toward the graduation of Edward Dunston.

Mrs. J. W. Awtry was appointed to arrange a special program for the July meeting.

Miss Lovelace Weds J. D. Talbert in West Point, Georgia

West Point, Ga., April 17.—A wedding of cordial interest to a host of friends throughout Georgia was that of Miss Irene Lovelace and J. D. Talbert, of LaGrange, Ga., which was quietly solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Rev. A. W. Dick, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, West Point, performed the ceremony.

The bride was unusually lovely in a costume of Marie Antoinette shade of rose, worn with a coat of the same color and a hat to match. Her corsage bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Talbert is the charming and attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Calvin Lovelace. She is a graduate of the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville.

Mr. Talbert is the son of Mrs. J. D. Talbert, of Brinson, Ga. He is a prominent young business man of LaGrange and holds a responsible position with the Fincher-Traylor Motor company.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Talbert and his bride left on a short wedding trip, and on their return will be at home to their friends at Pleasant Acres, near West Point, the home of the bride's parents.

Music Club Chorus Presents Program At West End Club

A program, artistic in detail, was arranged by Mrs. Swann Burnett and Mrs. Eugene McElroy at the regular meeting of the Woman's Civic club of West End on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the clubhouse.

The distinct feature of the meeting was the presentation of the Atlanta Music club chorus, under the directorship of Miss Lula Clark King.

Prior to the musical program a short business meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. A. J. Merrill, who announced that on Tuesday afternoon, April 27, an informal reception will be held at the clubrooms for the purpose of the members casting a straw ballot for the election of new officers for the coming year.

Mrs. O. F. Kaufman and her committee, reported that they had secured estimates for the erection of a private entrance to the club apartment and the club body authorized this committee to take necessary action regarding such improvement.

Mrs. V. L. Patton, club hostess, announced that the regular open house meetings will be resumed beginning Monday evening, April 19, at 8 o'clock in the clubrooms.

Mrs. Sefton Strickland, director of the K. O. X. club, announced that a meeting of her group would be held on Friday evening, April 23, at 8 o'clock, in the clubrooms.

A large social affair of the past week was the box supper given by a representative gathering of club members and their friends at the clubhouse on Monday evening. Following the supper the literary committee, with Mrs. Murray Howard, chairman, entertained the guests with a number of stunts in the assembly room. The guests of honor on this occasion were the club husbands.

Mrs. Lueking Gives Lovely Tea.

A lovely affair of Friday afternoon was the tea Mrs. Henry Fremont Lueking, Jr., at which she entertained at her home in Camp Jesup when she had for her honor guests Miss Dorothy Leitch, who has recently come to Fort McPherson to make her home; Miss Mona Louise Dudley and Mrs. Dorothy Meyer Hones, two lovely brides-elect.

Mrs. Emil W. Leard, presiding at one end of this table, poured tea, and Mrs. A. R. Boling poured coffee.

Mrs. Lueking was assisted in receiving by this charming trio of honor guests.

Invited were Mrs. Harry J. Keeley and her guest, Mrs. Bryon Shirley, of Fort Oglethorpe; Miss Mona Dudley and her two guests, Miss Willie Stewart, of Valdosta, and Miss Agnes Dudley, of Savannah; Mrs. Cecil E. Henry and Miss Martha Guillan, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. William L. Mitchell, Mrs. Jesse Graham, Mrs. John Otto and Miss Kittie Hagood.

Following the regular Friday afternoon parade, Mrs. Lueking invited the younger officers to tea, and included in this group were Lieutenants John W. Childs, John C. Logan, E. Berry, William C. Saffarass, Jesse Thompson Traywick, John E. Nelson, William Isaacs, Percy E. Hunt, Pat M. Lynch, Jesse Graham, John Otto, William L. Mitchell, Cecil E. Henry, Henry J. Lueking, Luther G. Causey, Rufus Parsons, Captain Emil W. Leard, Captain A. R. Bolling and Major Harry J. Keeley.

Wynne—Nesbit Wedding Plans.

The marriage of Miss Grace Wynne and Roy L. Nesbit, of East Point, will be a social event of Friday evening, April 23.

The ceremony will take place in the First Baptist church at 6:30 o'clock. The Rev. J. A. Crumbley, pastor of the church, will officiate.

The bridal party will include Mrs. J. F. Redding, matron of honor; Miss Grady Wynne, aunt of the bride, maid of honor; Miss Ruby Mae Smith and Miss Ruth Crumbley will be bridesmaids; little Misses Katherine Hutcheson and Jennie Ray Redding will be junior bridesmaids.

The groomsmen will be Floyd Glascow, Floyd Granes and Harold Coaly.

The groom's best man will be Ernest Allen, and the ushers will be Hugh Quarles and Carl Wynne.

The bride and groom will leave immediately after the ceremony for a short wedding trip, and on their return will be at home in East Point.

Fidelis Class Plans Month's Work.

Formulation of plans for work during the ensuing month featured a meeting Saturday of the executive board of the Fidelis class of West End Baptist Sunday school at a luncheon at Davison-Paxon-Stokes tea room. The board is composed of Mrs. J. H. Lorenze, Mrs. Clyde Spinks, Mrs. L. C. Adams, Mrs. Thompson Jones, Miss Hattie Wynn, Miss Grace Owen, Miss Margaret Wade, Mrs. J. M. Maury, Mrs. Kate Laird and Mrs. J. K. Warren. L. P. Wilson, teacher, also attended the meeting.

Barbecue at Druid Hills Club To Assemble Society Wednesday

Wednesday of grand opera week will find society motoring out Druid Hills way, all attuned to charming informality in readiness for that distinctive event of the season, the annual barbecue at the Druid Hills Golf club. Here in a lovely alfresco setting Atlantans and their opera visitors will mingle with the stars of the Metropolitan troupe who will be honor guests of the occasion, and southern hospitality will be revealed in all its alluring phases.

On the spacious grounds surrounding the handsome new clubhouse, the barbecue will be served at midday from beautifully appointed tables placed in inviting array amid the blooming dogwoods, brilliant azaleas, and other flowering shrubs. The lovely springtime scene will provide a beautiful background for the colorful sports costumes to be worn by the guests.

Of especial interest is the announcement made by the club management that Tom Fisher, of Newnan, a true artist in the preparation of this Lucullan feast, will have charge of the barbecue.

The officers of the club will act as hosts and receive the guests. Lowry Arnold, the club's popular president, and his charming wife, Mrs. Arnold, will act as official host and hostess.

The other hosts and hostesses will include: Lloyd B. Parks, vice president, and Mrs. Parks, Henry W. Davis, treasurer, and Mrs. Davis, and Dana C. Besler, honorary secretary, and Mrs. Belzer.

The club directors and their wives will assist in receiving the guests. They will include Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Holditch, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Cary F. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Newell, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Troutman, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Shivers, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Colquitt, Mr. and Mrs. Sam T. Maddox.

Many reservations have already been made. Colonel William Lawson Peel will entertain as his guests, Augustus Lukeman, memorial sculptor; Miss Sarah Peel Watts, of Charlottesville, Va., his granddaughter, and a group of opera stars.

Others entertaining will be Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Mr. and Mrs. F. Graham Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, of Columbus, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. James B. Nevin, Mr. and Mrs. James I. Bush, of New York; Miss Mary Lewis, member of Metropolitan Opera company, Miss Dorothy Flexer, Miss Ziegler, R. A. Kline, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams, J. A. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Atkinson, D. B. Thornton, H. E. Huff, W. A. Fuller, Mrs. L. J. Magill and E. C. Laird.

Tri Delta Sorority Will Give Luncheon Saturday, April 24

The Atlanta club of the Delta Delta Delta sorority announces that the annual subscription luncheon will be held at 12:30 o'clock on Saturday, April 24, at the Atlanta Biltmore. The lovely occasion will assemble the local members of the sorority and all visiting Tri Deltas who are in the city, including a number of prominent out-of-town guests who will be here for grand opera. Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling Mrs. W. A. Smart, at Dearborn 1632-J.

The officers of the Atlanta club of Tri Delta are: Mrs. W. A. Smart, president; Mrs. Robert Eleazer, vice president; Mrs. Wilbur Dent, treasurer, and Miss Mary Steadwell, corresponding secretary.

Musical Program At Trinty Church.

A musical program will take the place of the evening service at Trinity church on Sunday. Professor Potter will be at the organ and W. C. Mansfield will preside.

The chorus and quartet of 40 voices will render several big choral numbers, in addition to other gems from the works of the greatest masters. Professor Potter will also play special numbers on the organ.

Mrs. Charles Dowman Heard In Brilliant Piano Recital

It is seldom that a non-professional musician ventures to publicly present a program of such caliber as that offered by Mrs. Charles Edward Dowman in her piano recital Friday evening at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, a program that would severely test the abilities of the most eminent artists of the concert stage.

Within recent years Mrs. Dowman has acquired a proficiency of technique and a mellowness and breadth of view well calculated to interpret the varying moods and sentiments inherent in the markedly contrasted compositions of this distinctive recital; that she successfully did so was attested by the rapt attention accorded her playing and the generous applause indicative of sincere appreciation of same.

Opening Number.

The opening number was Liszt's arrangement of the organ prelude and Fugue in A minor of Bach, which was played with reverance to the spirit of the work, the themes of the fugue, in particular, being brought out with such crystal-like clarity and beauty as almost to justify the assertion that this was as perfect a piano performance of Bach as has been given here in years.

In each of her annual recitals Mrs. Dowman has included one of the larger piano works of Robert Schumann and this year she presented the "Etudes symphoniques," Opus 13, one of the greatest compositions in the entire literature of the instrument. This work, consisting of a theme with 12 variations, is of overpowering intensity, characterized by richness of ideas and individualistic harmonies. Mrs. Dowman's rendition of this supurb creation was truly brilliant and noble and made a profound impression on her audience.

Poetically Portrayed.

It was a happy idea to follow this soul-stirring work with the lovingly restful "Reverie" of Debussy, of of which the languishing beauty was charmingly and poetically portrayed. The two ensuing Debussy numbers, "Valse Romantique" and "Ballade" were played with that subtlety of expression befitting these delightful tone pictures.

Works by Liszt and Chopin comprised the final group. Of the former, Mrs. Dowman played, with pleasing effect, the technically brilliant and richly melodious "Etude" in D flat and the beautiful "Gondoliera" from the "Venezia e Napoli."

An admirable performance of the "Ballade" in G minor of Chopin, in which its warmth and passionate energy were finely set forth, was fervently applauded and Mrs. Dowman supplemented this with a most realistic and picturesque rendition of Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," an appropriate conclusion of this very beautiful recital, which evinced the great strides Mrs. Dowman has made in poete and scholarly interpretation, certainty of technique and artistic finish of execution.

Endeavor Society Is Entertained.

The Christian Endeavor society of Morningside Presbyterian church put on a contest recently between the purples and the whites with the understanding that the losing side should entertain the winning side. The whites had the pleasure of entertaining the purples Friday evening. The purples were invited to meet at the church promptly at 8 o'clock where spooks and weird sounds greeted them and from there they were directed to go to the home of Miss Marion Lanham, where a short entertainment was enjoyed, consisting of a few songs and readings. From here they were sent to several homes in the neighborhood on a treasure hunt before they arrived at Howard Bandy's home, where they were greeted by the whites for a party.

Mrs. Claude Hutchinson will entertain at her home this afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Wynne.

Stars and Visitors of Opera Mark Georgian Terrace Season

Social interest centers in the visitors who will spend opera week at the Georgian Terrace. A tea-dance will be given every afternoon on the broad terrace surrounding the hotel and Vick Meyers' orchestra will play each afternoon at the tea-dances, the first beginning Monday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock and continuing every day thereafter. Miss Annie Munger Mueller will be soloist.

Many reservations have already been made for these events, and a number of the opera stars will be present upon these occasions and also a group of prominent visitors to grace the tea-dances.

The arrival of the Metropolitan artists, Lucrezia Bori, Beniamino Gigli, Jose Mardones, Vincenzo Reschiglian and Leon Rothier, will begin the social whirl at the Terrace.

Miss Mary Bonetti, of the Metropolitan Opera company; Gennaro Papi, musical conductor of the Metropolitan Opera company; Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Evans, of New York; A. C. Martin, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Hunter, of Kingsport, Tenn.; Charles E. Roberts and family, of Macon, Ga., are the latest arrivals at the Georgian Terrace.

Miss Hilda Thomason Weds Mr. Compton.

The marriage of Miss Hilda Thomason and James K. Compton took place at the home of the bride's parents on April 14. The bride is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Thomason on Whitefoord avenue and has a host of friends in Atlanta and Stone Mountain.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Compton, of Roanoke, Va. He is well known throughout the south.

Mr. Compton and his bride will be at home to their friends in Atlanta after a wedding trip to Virginia, Washington, New York and other points of interest.

Grand Opera Visitors Are Subject of Sunday Chatter

By Bessie S. Stafford.

THE usual ripple of grand opera excitement is in the air and it is being pleasantly rumored that Frank H. Warren, the distinguished New York musical critic, upon whose shoulders fell the leading part in staging the brilliant masquerade ball at the Biltmore during last year's opera season, will return for the 1926 appearance of the Metropolitan Opera company.

If he does—and here's a toast to Mrs. Warren's return—and can be persuaded to assume command as chief spieler of "The Streets of Old Madrid" fete, which the Atlanta Biltmore announces on its program for Thursday evening, it will be an affair such as the elite of this fair and flowery town has never seen before.

In an entirely impromptu manner, Mr. Warren, a great dignitary in the realm of music, featured Metropolitan artists in many amusing and original stunts to the revelers. He prepared a richly colored burlesque on Billy Guard, the popular gentleman who sees to the well advertising of the "Met," and Mr. Warren made the artists clown through one of the cleverest entertainments ever offered in Atlanta.

Mr. Kahn's Arrival.

AND while on the subject of the adored members of the stronger sex let's have a paragraph or two about the arrival of Otto Kahn on Wednesday.

It will be his first visit here and his first glimpse of Atlanta with her holiday and carnival spirit as preeminent factors of the forthcoming seven days.

As chairman of the Metropolitan Opera company, Mr. Kahn is perhaps one of the most ardent supporters of music in America, having helped to lay its foundation. He has given freely of his time and wealth towards developing true art in this country, and as far back as he can remember music has been cultivated in his family. He believes in encouraging and fostering every meritorious manifestation of American musical talent, and he believes that, notwithstanding the imperfections of present-day jazz, there will develop out of it in the future a genuine and significant American contribution to the art of music.

Bears Unusual Significance.

THE thirty-eighth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Atkinson bears unusual significance, for on that happy date, April 5, they attended the service which united Miss Mildred Asser to John Duncan Miller, of London, in the cathedral at Hamilton, capital of the Bermuda Islands.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson were guests at the elaborate reception given in the famous tropical gardens of the government house, where Sir John J. Asser and Lady Asser entertained 600 guests.

At Tuckerstown, 6 miles from Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson propose to erect a charming cottage, the building of which begins quite soon, so as to be in readiness for them next winter when they return for rest and recreation in the Bermudas.

Associate Matrons' Club Has Meeting.

The Associate Matrons' club held the regular meeting April 14 at the home of the president, Mrs. Mae Spier, 604 Moreland avenue.

Mrs. Rose May Ashby, worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter; Mrs. Sadie McElroy, associate grand matron of Georgia, and Mrs. Lucy Price, past matron of Grant Park chapter, were honor guests.

After the transaction of business there was an enjoyable social hour. Those present were: Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, Mrs. Sallie McElroy, Mrs. Lucy Price, Mrs. Mae Spier, Mrs. Annie Schenck, Mrs. Myrtle Pattilo, Mrs. Ruby Braswell, Mrs. Lucil McCullock, Mrs. Ophilia Murphy, Mrs. Olive Kelley, Mrs. Myrtle Smith, Mrs. Virgie Simpson.

The next meeting will be held May 12 at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Ruby Braswell, 516 Lakewood avenue. Take Lakewood car and get off at Stillman street.

Kle Club Elects Mrs. Bond President.

The Kle club unit of B. P. O. E., No. 78, held its annual meeting for election of officers on Wednesday, April 14, in the peacock room of the Elks' club. Those elected were: Mrs. Ed F. Bond, president; Mrs. William T. Adams, first vice president; Mrs. William Hinds, second vice president; Mrs. J. Turner Fitten, third vice president; Mrs. Gus Cooper, fourth vice president; Mrs. J. T. Murphy, treasurer; Mrs. LeRoy Hatfield, secretary.

B. C. Broyles, secretary of lodge No. 78, commended the club on its past 100 per cent efficiency, foretold and equally bright future and pledged his allegiance. J. Clayton Burke, founder of the Kle club, and C. A. Ryder made talks. Mrs. Gus Cooper, contralto, accompanied by Mrs. C. A. Ryder, rendered several pleasing selections.

Spring Festival To Be Given.

The members of St. Anthony's Guild of West End will hold a spring festival April 26 to May 1 at 13 Auburn avenue. The various committees are working diligently and expect to make the festival a very unique affair.

One of the most attractive features will be the hot dinners served daily from 12 to 2 o'clock under the efficient direction of Mrs. John Henry Owens.

Mrs. T. W. Dealy, chairman of the fancy work and domestic tables reports excellent work from her committee. Dainty hand-made articles of every description are being received. Also many practical articles, aprons, dresses, bags, caps, etc., for the housewife.

Margaret Willis and Mrs. M. E. Rappold assisted by the young ladies' sodality will make the candy booth the most attractive with plenty of good things for all, both young and old.

Mrs. W. Welsh and Mrs. Fred Young will manage the "country store." These ladies guarantee satisfaction to all customers and invite all friends to call upon them April 26 to May 1. Friday, April 30, will be the children's big day.

Driving Club To Entertain At Opera Dinner-Dance

Gaiety and joy will reign supreme at the Piedmont Driving club dinner-dance Thursday evening, this affair to be one of the most outstanding in brilliance and beauty given during the opera season.

The affair will gather opera stars, distinguished visitors and members of Atlanta's fashionable society, while a number of surprise features will be presented during the dinner courses for the amusement of the guests. This will be the only formal affair given at the Driving club during opera week, while a whirl of luncheons, teas, breakfasts and dinners will mark the social program at this club during each day.

Among those who have made reservations for the Thursday evening dinner-dance are M. M. Emmert, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Carey Baker, Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes, Dr. and Mrs. Calhoun McDougald, Mr. and Mrs. Winship Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme, Sr., Mrs. A. L. Fitzsimmons, E. M. Eastman, C. C. Pace, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Daley and John Grant, Jr.

Third Baptist Union Meets.

The regular business meeting of the Woman's Missionary union of the Third Baptist church was held at the church on Monday. The devotional was led by the president, Mrs. C. S. Morris, the subject as "Praise and Thanksgiving." Minutes of the previous meeting were read, after this all circles made splendid reports of their work. The scrap book committee was present and the book was placed on exhibit, this proved to be very interesting. Mrs. J. W. Smith, fourth district secretary, was present and made a most encouraging talk which was enjoyed by all.

A mission study class will be held at the church Monday, April 19, beginning promptly at 2:30. The book to be taught will be, "Training for Leadership." The president urges a good and prompt attendance.

Honors Conferred Upon Juniors At Agnes Scott

The greatest honor than can be conferred upon a junior at Agnes Scott is to be elected a member of Hoasc. This organization seeks for members those who have contributed most to their alma mater and who have sought to serve her in all capacities. This honor was won by six members of the present junior class this week, including Miss Elsa Jacobsen, Decatur, Ga.; Miss Carolina McCall, Opelika, Ala.; Miss Roberta Winter, Leland, Miss.; Miss Ellen Douglas Leyburn, Rome, Ga.; Miss Evelyn Powell, Little Rock, Ark., and Miss Elizabeth Norfleet, Winston-Salem, N. C. Other members will be elected from the senior class at the beginning of the fall term.

At a recent meeting of Folio, the freshman-sophomore short story club, officers were elected for the coming year. Miss Marion Green, of Asheville, N. C., was chosen president, and Miss Mary Ellis, of Atlanta, was chosen as secretary. The members of the club are Marion Green, Mary Ellis, Bettina Bush, Pearl Hastings, Mary Alice Juhan, Ester Nesbit and Catherine Woodberry.

The maids to attend the May queen, Miss Edythe Coleman, of Atlanta, have been chosen by the May day committee at Agnes Scott. They are Grace Boone, of Newnan, Ga.; Mary ine Mitchell, LaGrange, Ga.; Mary Dudley Brown, Salisbury, N. C.; Eliz-Ella Hammond, Griffin, Ga.; Catherabeth Clarke, West Point, Miss.; Virginia Grimes, Statesboro, Ga.; Josephine Walker, Summerville, S. C.; Sarah Slaughter, Atlanta; Martha Rose Childress, Athens, Tenn.; Ruth McMillan, Atlanta; Mary Weems, McDonough, Ga.; Sara Carter, Decatur, Ga.; Sarah Robinson, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Pernette Adams, Charlotte, N. C. The annual May day will take place Saturday afternoon, May 1.

Notes From Shorter College.

Rome, Ga., April 17.—A series of junior and senior recitals in music and expression add interest to the pre-commencement season at Shorter college. On Tuesday evening Miss Marjorie Johnston, of Canton, gave her senior piano recital, rendering a classical program.

Dr. E. F. Talmadge, rector of Trinity church, Toledo, was the guest of his son, Arthur S. Talmadge, head of the department of music, and spoke Friday to the students at the chapel hour on the subject, "Playing the Game of Life."

Officers of the International Relations club for next year were elected at the April meeting as follows: President, Miss Jincey Hunt, Mayfield, Ky.; vice president, Miss Laura Kersey, Newnan; secretary and treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Beverly, Thomasville.

Kappa Gamma Tau, or Science club, the the April meeting on Wednesday night, presenting a botany program. Dr. Ada Hall, head of the department of biology, discussed algae and fungus, presenting specimens from woods hole; Miss Margarite Mustin, assistant instructor in the department, gave a paper on pteridophytes, and Miss Mary Smith, of Cochran, discussed bryophytes. Lantern pictures of both ferns and mosses were shown.

Notice

Information has just reached me that photographs taken at the congress of last year of the Georgia delegation were sent to some purchasers collect. I will appreciate it as a great favor if any who were called upon to pay will so advise me. Please do this at once.

MRS. JULIAN B. M'CURRY.

(The above notice was missent, reaching me too late for April 11. Mrs. McCurry is attending congress, so you may address her, New Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C.—Editor.)

Attention, New Officers!

With the confirmation of Mrs. Herbert Franklin as state regent of Georgia, which takes place at congress' convening, April 19 to 24, in Washington, D. C., all officers automatically assume duties of offices to which they were elected at conference.

Mrs. Leary, state editor-elect, will take charge of the D. A. R. column next Sunday, April 25. Please send all material for publication to Mrs. C. H. Leary, 705 Union street, Brunswick, Ga.

Again, may I thank you for your splendid help of the past two years? I bespeak for my successor the same cooperation which you have so kindly given me.

The officials of The Atlanta Constitution have shown our organization many favors. I stress this again, that each member of the Georgia D. A. R. will be mindful of their kindness to us.

MRS. MELL KNOX, Editor.

D. A. R. Ritual.

Mrs. J. A. Peacock, state chaplain, D. A. R., whose absence from the recent state conference caused much regret among her many friends, sent cards containing the ritual form, which were used.

Message From Mrs. Peacock.

Please allow me to express my appreciation to the Georgia Daughters for the confidence they placed in me, in giving me two important state offices, those of historian and chaplain. It gave me great pleasure to serve and my association with the other members of the "official family" will ever be a bright spot in my memory. Now, as I retire to the ranks, I will continue to strive for the interests of our beloved organization. God bless each and every D. A. R., is my prayer.

With best regards,

ANNE BOIFEUILLET PEACOCK,
State Chaplain.

Chapter Reports.

Abbeville—At the last meeting of Peter Coffee chapter Mrs. Chauncey L. Foote, regent, presided over a short business session. Mrs. Sheldon gave a very interesting report of the history and historic spots of Wilcox county. Mrs. Harrel, presented a splendid patriotic program. Mrs. Hal Lawson gave an interesting talk on the life of Patrick Henry and sketches from his patriotic addresses. Mrs. Harrell read his famous address, "Give me liberty or give me death," delivered in the Virginia convention March 23, 1775. Mrs. Foote gave an interesting report of the D. A. R. state conference, held in Americus.

Dublin — John Laurens chapter elected the following officers at their April meeting: Regent, Mrs. M. J. Guyton; vice regent, Mrs. B. A. Hooke; recording secretary, Mrs. Fred Brown; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. B. Freeman; treasurer, Mrs. Earl Camp; registrar, Mrs. Guyton Sanders; reporter, Miss Mattie Ramsay; genealogist, Mrs. A. W. Garrett; parliamentarian, Mrs. M. A. Shewmake; auditor, Mrs. Ivan Prim; chaplain, Mrs. J. A. Peacock.

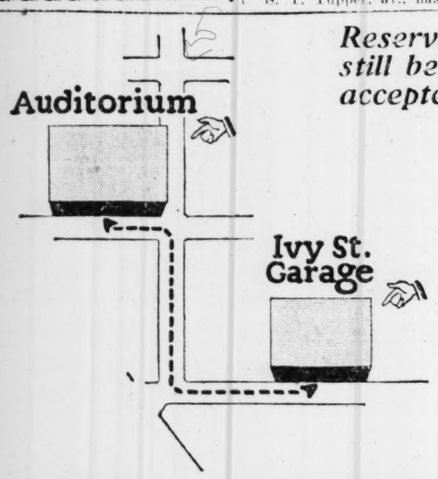

Fitzgerald—Reports given at the April meeting of Nathaniel Abney chapter were most gratifying. Mrs. Gelders presented to the chapter a splendid suggestion for observance of all patriotic days. The chapter will buy slides, each bearing the date and inscription of that particular historic event, and on each anniversary of the event the slide will be shown at the local picture shows. In this simple way the chapter will call attention to the important days in history.

A resolution was passed at the conference in Americus that the loan scholarship fund at Valdosta and Fannie Trammell memorial fund be increased to $5,000 each.

OPERA COMFORT

for those who

Drive to Atlanta

ONE of the Auditorium's advantages is that it's so close to the Ivy Street Garage—especially during Opera Week, when parking would be a serious problem without this convenient parking garage so handy.

This year we have instituted the Opera Parking Ticket — good for a reserved space — the same reserved space during each of the seven performances.

Thus you find out where your space is, drive your car into it, hear the Opera, go get your car . . . and so on to the evening's remaining entertainment, without any delay whatever.

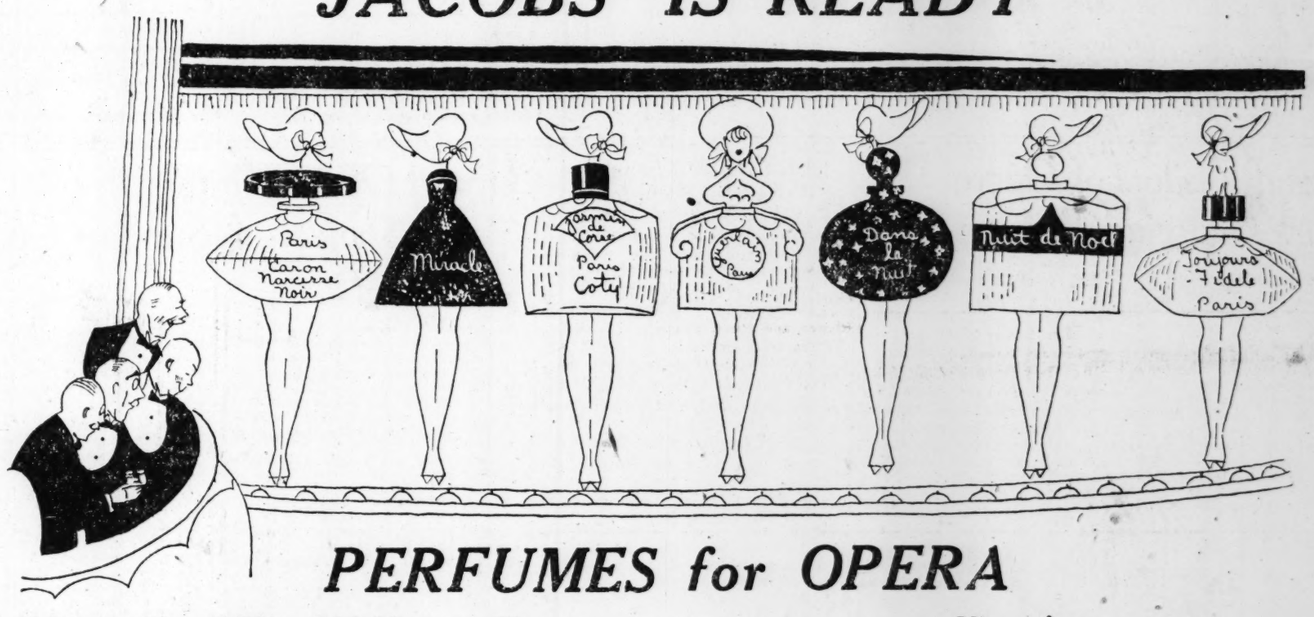

For you folks from out of town, the same sort of arrangement can be made for the whole week. Parking here is the most comfortable parking you have ever known.

Brilliant Fancy Dress Ball To Be Staged at Biltmore

Final arrangements and details have been made for the elaborate fancy dress ball termed "A Street Festival in Old Madrid," which will be one of the outstanding entertainments for Atlanta's sixteenth opera season, to be held in the gardens in the rear of the Atlanta Biltmore hotel on Thursday evening, April 22.

Since the first announcement was made, reservations have been coming in daily and up to the present date several hundred members of society will assemble in parties during the height of the opera season, which will be reached when this unique entertainment will be staged.

Rosa Ponselle, Louise Hunter, Marion Tally, Mary Lewis, Marion Telva, Florence Easton, Giovanni Martinelli, Feodor Chaliapin, Lawrence Tibbett, Giuseppe De Lucia are among the prominent members of the Metropolitan Opera company who will be present. Special mention must be made of Frances Peralta, whose guiding genius was the inspiration for the fancy dress ball last year which was the first of its kind ever given or attempted by any other city acting as hosts to world-renown Metropolitan Opera company.

Opera stars are not the only persons of prominence who will be present at this affair, but also the president and board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company as well as many men of prominence identified with the financial world. Among such names being Otto H. Kahn, Bernard Baruch, E. Roland Harriman, William Forbes Morgan, Henry Rogers Wintrop, James I. Bush and Fred P. Moore.

Large Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Atkinson will entertain the largest party of the evening in compliment to the president and board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company; opera stars and Atlanta friends.

College Belles of Atlanta Will Attend Grand Opera This Week; 'Follies' Paved Way for City's Annual Week of Musical Festivities

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

All of the Follies preening which has been ours during the last week has had a wonderful effect in the way of preparedness in bringing about a holiday attitude, a mental state of gala alertness, looking towards the big things in the week just ahead—grand opera.

All society is awake and ready for tomorrow night when the curtain is to go up on the premiere performance of the Metropolitan's Atlanta engagement.

The boxes—as usual—will be a-glitter and the remainder of the house will not be behind a good step.

Opera Appeals to All.

Opera is appealing not alone to one class of society but to all, the younger as well as the older contingent and herein is the gratification of this splendidly cultural affair, our youth are not only acquiring a knowledge of the opera but a taste for the very best in this the outstanding of all the fine arts—music.

During the coming week there will be many young people seen in the audience at each performance.

One particularly bright group will consist of three devoted, life long friends—Catherine Candler, Mary Rhorer and Runa Erwin.

These three charming members of society will be seen at all of the week's activities.

The Great Diva.

And speaking of opera—one word of magic always comes to mind first in thinking of Atlanta opera—Ponselle!

When we are told that Ponselle has arrived, read for her Atlanta engagement, we immediately perk up in keenest anticipation, read to be off!

What a wise judgment was shown in the cast of characters in putting this supernatural drawing card in both the first and last performance of the week!

Can you imagine a more revishing portrayal of both Aida and Leonara than Ponselle will give?

Can't you hear now the sobbing plaintive, sweet "Miserere" as she will sing it?

Italian Opera.

Il Trovatore never fails to challenge the public's admiration for beauty, variety and dramatic effect. One of the most popular operas of the entire week's engagement will be this tuneful one prove.

There are several reasons for this. This entire work of Verdi's—four acts filled with vivid coloring and alive with gypsy vengeance—is replete with beautiful melodies, exquisite scenes, following each other in rapid succession.

Divine Arias.

The florid aria for Leonora which in the last act, leads to the exquisite wail of the "Miserere" is a number which never fails to charm and arouse the audience with their beauty and richness.

This is followed by a very familiar duet between Azucena the witch, and Manrico, supposedly her son.

Upon this duet Verdi lavished his musical genius and with what success, you do not have to be told.

Anvil Chorus.

In the second act the Anvil Chorus in the camp of the gypsies, the measures of the musical score are accentuated with the hammers upon the anvils.

This is a bright colorful scene for which the audience always lives, expectant. And as the strains of the Anvil Chorus die away in the distance, Azucena breaks out into an aria of intense brightness and with very expressive accompaniment, in which the witch tells of the horrible burning of the mother for sorcery, who was accused of witchcraft in connection with the pining away of Garzia, brother of Count di Luna.

In the third act there is the lovely animated "Soldiers' Chorus," which act closes with the spirited aria "Di Quella Pirra," sung by Manrico (Martinello in this instance). This is a number which has always been the delight of all dramatic tenors, not alone for its fine melody but for its rare opportunity of showing off the voice in the using of the exceptional high C in the finale of the aria.

From the opening midnight scene in the palace of Aliaferia where the old servant Ferrando is seen relating the story of the fate of young Garzia until the last set in which the count triumphantly drags Azucena to a window to witness the execution of Manrico, at which terrible moment she reveals that he is the lost Garzia, his brother, the whole opera is thrilling in interest, and dramatic in its combined grief, fear, hate and love.

Little Commencement.

Today sees the end of "Little Commencement" at the University of Georgia.

All of the Atlanta guests will be coming home, some through the country, some on the train, all tired out but with such happy memories of a very pleasant week-end.

These Athens students are royal hosts.

Nothing was left unthought of for the pleasure of their guests—both girls and chaperons.

A whole floor of the New Holman was taken for the use of the visitors. These came from all over the southern states, forming a most charming personnel of fairness and loveliness.

There were dances, receptions, teas and many pretty parties and the girls have only one thought in mind—time to return for "Big Commencement!"

Joint Hostesses To Agnes Scott Club.

The "Granddaughters club" of Agnes Scott college met with Miss Era Kamper and Miss Anaise Cay Jones at the home of Miss Kamper on Springdale road Friday.

After the business meeting bridge was enjoyed, after which tea was served.

Mrs. Seldon Jones and Mrs. Francis Kamper assisted their daughters in entertaining their guests, who included 20 young students of Agnes Scott.

Miss Essie Williams Weds Earl Moore.

Perry, Ga., April 17.—(Special.)—Mrs. W. L. Hay, of Miami, formerly of Perry, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Emmie Williams, to Earl Moore, Jr., of Los Angeles and Detroit, which took place Saturday, April 3, at the parsonage of Woodward Avenue Baptist church, Detroit, Mich., the ceremony being performed by the pastor, Dr. John Wellington Hoag.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore will make their home in Detroit until fall, after which they will reside in California.

Miss Wynne Is Honored.

Miss Ruby Mae Smith was hostess at a beautiful reception Friday evening, followed with a miscellaneous shower, at her home, 104 East Washington street, East Point, in honor of Miss Grace Wynne, a bride-elect of April 23.

Miss Smith was gowned in rose-colored georgette crepe and her corsage were daffodils.

The honoree wore a beautiful gown of pale green georgette crepe and her flowers were violets.

Mrs. Claude Hutcheson entertained a large group of friends at her home, 416 Thompson street, Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, at a linen shower in compliment to Miss Wynne.

An effective color motif was carried out in pink and white and punch and ices were served.

Mrs. Hutcheson wore a handsome gown of blue satin and Miss Wynne was gowned in pink flowered georgette crepe.

A group of classmates will entertain Miss Wynne Monday afternoon, April 19, at a matinee party followed with a tea at Nunnally's.

Mrs. Claude S. Wynne will entertain at a trousseau tea Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Ernest Allen will entertain the wedding party at dinner Thursday evening, April 22, after rehearsal.

says
"Chew SILPH if you want to be Slender and Well"

ARE YOU TOO FAT?

Why not give a chance to SILPH?—
See what it can do for you—
You chew SILPH like ordinary Gum!

Safe—Easy—Pleasant
No diets—no exercises—no dangerous drugs

Miss Mable Sears from Ohio, writes: "I have already reduced fifty pounds. I think SILPH is wonderful. There is not any excuse for anyone being overweight now, with this easy, pleasing way to reduce."

"I have lost about twenty-five pounds and have been relieved from high blood pressure from which I suffered greatly," writes Prof. Budlong of Manchester.

Louise Mele—winner of contest for most perfect girl in America, advises SILPH Reducing Gum to the woman who cares to get a beautiful figure.

NOTE—SILPH will not work any overnight miracle, neither will it take off twenty pounds in one week, but chew it regularly and see for yourself how much you can take off—SILPH sells at all good drug or department stores for 50 cents a box. If your druggist is out of it send direct to the SILPH CO., 9 West 60th Street, New York City.

Beware of Imitations Silph is the name of the original and genuine. The only one we personally guarantee to be safe and harmless.

TWO FACTORIES AT AUSTELL, GA.

Programs Are Arranged For Better Homes Week

The attention of home lovers naturally will be focussed on the better homes in America demonstrations that will be presented to the Atlanta public during the week of April 25-May 1 at Better Home No. 1 at 49 Ridgecrest drive, Boulevard park; No. 2, corner Fair and Kelley streets; Nos. 3, 4 and 5, school practice apartments respectively at Girls' High, Fulton High and Spellman seminary for negroes, but according to Mrs. Newton C. Wing, general chairman for Atlanta, these will be augmented by many other and different features.

Of these features, some of which are of state-wide nature, the most important, perhaps, are those which come under the head of "Programs," the chairman for which is Mrs. George Price, who will have associated with her men and women leaders of Atlanta, whose province it will be to see that the entire public will be aware of the opportunities of Better Homes week.

The Speakers' bureau is of extreme importance with Roy Le Craw, Better Homes secretary, Walnut 0961, as leader of the men's forces, and Mrs. Murray Howard, as organizer of the women speakers, Hemlock 3876. All clubs who wish speakers before and during Better Homes week are asked to communicate with them. Already enrolled are Mmes. R. L. Turman, R. K. Rambo, Norman Sharp, Alonzo Richardson, Ira Farmer, George Price and Newton C. Wing. As leader of the school of public speaking at the chamber of commerce, Mr. Le Craw has already organized a large number of men speakers. Mrs. Wing has during the past week, addressed the Atlanta Woman's club and the Teachers' Normal school, while Mrs. Price spoke at the fifth district P.-T. A.

In charge of programs (group talks) at home No. 1, is Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, with Mrs. Nellie Lee Edwards representing the music committee of the chamber of commerce and National Music week chairman, chairman of evening music, while Miss Kate Haralson has charge of the afternoon programs of school music.

At Better Home No. 2, programs are in charge of Mrs. Maude Baker, head of the Americanization work at the Opportunity school. She will be assisted in the musical features by Mrs. Edwards and Miss Haralson. Various programs during the week at both homes will be given in conjunction with special days, such as fifth district day on Monday, April 26, at which time Mrs. Norman Pool, American Homes chairman for the fifth district women's clubs, will put on a fifth district program.

Mrs. Ira Farmer, chairman for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs for home demonstration work, has charge of the radio programs through the week of April 25, assisted by Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, president of the Atlanta Music club. As usual these programs are expected to be one of the big features of Better Homes week.

Moving pictures of better homes, including Atlanta's own film of its work this year, will be in charge of Frank McCormack, president of the Atlanta Better Films committee, and will include pictures and slides shown at the various theaters, while the Carnegie library, under the chairmanship of Miss Jessie Hopkins, assistant librarian, will provide both better homes libraries with "better books," and at Carnegie library will have on display a collection of books on home economics and house furnishings, together with material sent on by the national Better Homes in America board. Also posted at the library will be lists bearing on such subjects as a model home library of 200 volumes, the best 25 books for children and gifts for children's book shelves. Book lists prepared by the library will be given out at the homes also.

Demonstrations of home making will be given at both demonstration homes by Miss Clara Lee Cone, and teachers at No. 1 and by Miss Leila Bunce and assistants at No. 2, as well as at the school practice apartments. Exhibits from the various schools are in charge of Mrs. W. L. McCalley the P.-T. A. appointee. Demonstrations of home play for the little tots and games for larger children will be given, while contests of posters, essays and other things will be of interest.

The NOBLEST CUBAN of THEM ALL

by Viola Brothers Shore

Hal hesitated over the translation, and the Major not entirely satisfied, complained wistfully to Sid.

She Might Have Resigned Herself to Spinsterhood, But "Sid" Didn't Bear a Boy's Name for Nothing; She Found a Way

"I SUPPOSE I'm old-fashioned"—Aunt Hilda appeared to be addressing the sheer, gunmetal stocking she was darning for her niece—"but I think girls cheapen themselves, running after men."

"Meaning—?" blandly inquired Sid, regarding her slim figure critically in the mirror to see whether last year's white flannel skirt could be pressed into service.

"Oh, nothing," replied Aunt Hilda, in a tone which fairly implored to be disbelieved. And a moment later she continued her musing. "Funny, isn't it, your firm just happening to send you to Havana when Hal Hayes is there?"

"Not funny, Aunt Hilda," Sid turned on her aunt those imperturbable brown eyes which revealed nothing. "Just lucky. Because you know how fond I am of Hal——"

Aunt Hilda's grunt implied that that was not the quarter of it, my dear. But. "Seems to me if he cared anything about you, he'd have been back once in two years."

Well, Sid was sure Hal would have been back if he could have managed. And she was sure, too, that he did care. There had been a night, before he left, when he had all but—Hal probably never knew how all but he had been. Men are dense about those things. Particularly the big, silent, attractive ones.

Hal Hayes had gone to Havana to represent his firm. The job had proved bigger and more exciting than he had anticipated. So that with the passing of the weeks the reasons for staying in Cuba seemed to augment and multiply; those for going back to the States to lessen and lose their significance. He still meant to get back, as he wrote to Sid in the letters which were almost as regular as ever. But there was a suggestion of vagueness—even indifference—about his return. And Sid had reached the point where she could wait no longer—that is, without knowing what she was waiting for. And so she had asked for her vacation early in April, invented the yarn about being sent by the firm, and invested most of her savings in an eleven-day excursion to Havana. Somehow she felt if she could just see Hal she would know.

That was all she wanted—merely to know where she stood. But much as she tried to prevent it, her mind would race ahead to how nice it would be if. . . . In five years one grows tired of even a responsible and remunerative job as head statistician of a large brokerage house. As for living with Aunt Hilda—well, you can leave a husband who gets on your nerves; but nothing short of death is excuse enough for deserting an aunt who devoted her best years to raising you. Except marriage, of course.

Nobody had ever meant as much to Sid as Hal, in all the years since dancing school. There had been other men, of course—a girl with a skin and mouth like Sid's couldn't go through life without some complications—but they had all either gone on the rocks or simply melted away. But this friendship with Hal had run through the years unmarred and undiminished—even growing stronger and more vital—until the day Sid realized she was in love with Hal.

And then he had gone to Havana.

It was a shock to Sid to find herself confiding the whole affair to a comparative stranger on the boat—a young Cuban who hardly spoke English—but who appeared able to understand some things much better than any American she had ever met. Before leaving the pier she had recognized certain obvious and familiar symptoms on the part of a very good looking young man, standing along the rail. At luncheon she was not surprised to find him next to her. Nor, later, to discover his deck chair beside her own. She was glad to have some one attentive to her. Some one understanding, and not without a certain appeal.

Her conscience hadn't worried her at all. After all, everybody flirts a bit on a boat and the young foreigner had an engaging way of taking things for granted. . . . But on Monday night (they were due in Havana the following noon) Sid suddenly found the affair had attained a momentum nothing short of radical measures would check.

They had been dancing and the young man had taken her to the upper deck to look for the rising moon or the southern cross, or whatever it is young people go seeking on upper decks. There was an indecent display of stars in a sky whose immensity made Sid feel futile—and a little mean.

She was wearing her kindest dress. Every girl has one tried and true sartorial friend—not to be counted on, perhaps, for startling effects, but always safe, dependable, and generous. Sid's was of coffee colored lace, the long, slim bodice scantily fitted, the skirt demurely ruffled below a twisted girdle of Mocha and orange. It made her dark, sleek hair look darker—her pale skin creamier—so that the young man called her his Madonna of the Flaming Mouth.

Sid had the kind of mouth which, although women pronounced it too large, men always found—well, adequate. Not the sort of mouth which belonged in the statistical department of a brokerage house. The red under lip, shorter and fuller than the upper, had a wicked way of catching under a shiny tooth, which made men think impulsive things—and say them, too.

She eschewed make-up, not unaware of the shock value of one flash of red against the impassive background of a pale face dominated by a pair of arrestingly silent eyes—brown and unrevealing, except for an occasional distant mockery or a vague helplessness which shadowed their surface—like a stray sunbeam or a vagrant cloud crossing a deep and imperturbable well—as a young man put it. Still eyes and a restless mouth—a southern moon and a million stars—small wonder that every moment became pregnant with smiles.

Besides, he was a very romantic young man and he believed that this American girl was the most beautiful—the cleverest—the most unusual creature in the world. Had there been the least use, Sid might have pointed out that she was only a poised young woman of average equipment, with more selective than creative ability, more distinction than real beauty. Yes, and twenty-seven years instead of the twenty she looked. But he was too far gone. He was madly in love with her—there was no sacrifice he would not make for her—life would but begin for him on the moment when he might press her lips. . . .

It was at this point that Sid told him.

Not that she was insensible to the attraction of this dark-skinned, warm-eyed young man. There was between them a bond of sympathy which under certain circumstances might have deepened into real feeling. But Sid found the path blocked by another image—tall, gray-eyed, a little wooden. That was the way it had been for years. And that was why she had to know. . . .

She had written Hal she was coming, and from afar she made out one man who towered above the white clad native figures about him. Whereupon she experienced a swift, dropping sensation, as though her ribs, contracting, had forced her heart down. . . . Yes, it was really he, looking handsomer than ever. She hoped to make him aware of her. . . . When at last she met his gray, level eyes, looking unusually bold and forthright from the setting of his bronzed face, her heart began to swell and pound as though it meant to suffocate her. However, during the endless time it took the boat to make a perfectly obvious and commonplace landing, she recovered a measure of her poise. And only her eyes, for once, betrayed her.

But people arriving in a strange harbor are too busy drinking in their own impressions, or making themselves visible and audible to friends below, to peer under the brim of a dark felt hat hugging the head of a girl differing in no wise from every other slim, well tailored girl except, perhaps, in the extravagant display of scarf which wound its flaming way picturesquely about her throat.

There was one young man, standing well in the background, who saw the look and wished passionately it had been there for him. But he knew better.

Hal was glad to see her—there was no doubt about that. What stunning luck that her firm had sent her to Havana! And how corking she looked! They were both too brimming over with something vibrant and disconcerting to do much talking, at first. Besides, there were the customs. Sid, standing back while Hal gibbered unintelligibly with sweating men in white coats, luxuriated in the sensation of having him look after her—of depending on him—of being alone with him in a strange, tropical corner of the world.

And yet, far down, she felt a premonitory undercurrent of disappointment. She seemed to know, almost at once, with that intuition which is not intuition at all, but a very minute recording and weighing apparatus in the minds of women, that something was not happening which she had hoped would happen. . . .

The moment for dynamic changes came and went. Already he was finding his tongue—asking commonplaces. Imperceptibly they were settling into being Hal and Sid again—as they had always been. It would take weeks—perhaps months—to get him once more into a state of unbalance in regard to her. And she was only going to be there until Saturday. She felt unshed tears rising behind her eyes and it was with an effort she maintained the gay mood of their meeting.

He saw her safely settled in her hotel, after she had declined his offer of help. She had little use for his services in the writing of a letter to Aunt Hilda; in the unpacking and pressing of clothes, or in acquiring a shampoo, massage, and manicure.

Hal, to the gratified surprise of his force, left the office at five. He asked no questions about Sid's business, and, of course, he did not notice the fine work of the French beauty parlor. Men are such guileless souls.

They sat in the patio at a little green table and Hal, who did not believe in drinking, ordered for Sid a cool native concoction which she had never tasted before.

They talked for two hours. It seemed to Sid she would never have enough of being with him. It was as though something in her, starved for years, were drinking in his presence gratefully through all her pores. Every time his steady, light gray eyes turned on her, that something in her began to tremble. Every time they softened into tenderness (as they did, occasionally) it began to sing. But every time they returned to their normal detachment (as they inevitably did) it began to die. . . .

She halted to tear herself away long enough to dress for dinner. But she knew she would be at her best in a white frock with silver threads woven into a delicately luminous pattern. The mocking light played about her eyes as she pinned a red rose somewhat obviously against a glittering shoulder strap. The good old stuff! But how many men could see through it? Or resist it, if they did?

They dined at eight on the tiled roof of the hotel, where a courteously condescending head waiter made a magnificent gesture of conducting them to a balcony table. Everything was perfect—the food, the service, the music—above all, the dancing. Dancing with Hal. . . . Was he conscious of the scent in her hair? And did it recall things to him as the faint smell of shaving cream and tooth paste about him recalled things swimmingly to her? A light breeze laden with the mingled, warm odors of a tropical evening brought to her a beautiful, melancholy vision of herself looking back through a sterile meaningless life, upon this one perfect night, alone in a distant, exotic corner of the world—with Hal.

Two young Cubans, sitting behind a clump of palms, appeared to be watching with interest everything that went on between the tall man in a dinner coat and the slim girl in a silvery gown. Brothers, unmistakably, although the one in the light linen suit was taller and handsomer than the one in the khaki uniform of a major. Whatever it was they were discussing, it concerned the two Americans, and they were very much in earnest about it. And not until Sid and Hal had gone did they rise and leave the dining room. And then they were careful not to step into the same elevator, but lingered, waiting for the next.

Sid devoted the following morning to further important business. Having ascertained that the shopping streets were O'Reilly and Obispo, she spent two breathless hours among Spanish shawls, recklessly splashed with gorgeous, embroidered roses; Chinese, rioting in even more dazzling contrasted hues; Venetian, rich in the unembroidered warmth of their coloring; kimonos, shy and alluring, and pajamas, unabashed and gay; perfumes in bottles exquisite and grotesque, at half the New York prices; necklaces of warm, seductive coral, or cool, disdainful jade; of slumbrous amber and smug imitation pearls; earrings bizarre and ponderous; delicate ivory cigarette holders, and fans—painted and spangled, of feathers and lace, tortoise and ivory, and mother-of-pearl. She wanted a black lace fan and a yellow shawl, limp with the weight of opulent, full blown roses, and lustrous, golden yellow fringe. She did not have the courage to price the shawl. Perhaps, before she left, she might borrow the money from Hal——

In spite of the hard won morale of his office, Hal left early for a long lunch hour with Sid. While they were having a cooling drink at one of the little tables in the stone corridor flanking the patio, a young Cuban major in uniform passed and, a few paces away, came to a meaning if embarrassed pause.

Hal, catching sight of him, rose and smilingly presented Major Jose Arturo Ortelio Diago y de la Cuesta to Miss Alma Sidney. Although not very tall, he was a distinguished looking young man, with a flash of intense Latin eyes and white teeth behind mobile lips. There was something disarmingly ingenuous about his face when he spoke, and a flushed, boyish eagerness when he looked at Sid.

The major, drawing up a chair, apologized for his so bad English, and craved permission to have Mr. Hayes translate for him what he was to say. Followed a volley of Spanish interspersed with ardent looks, which Hal translated (the Spanish—not the looks. They needed no translating. Women are never blind to that sort of thing—only occasionally deaf). Hal, retaining his expression of tolerant amusement, explained to Sid that the major had been so impressed with her grace and beauty the previous evening that he had appeared at Hal's office with his brother, whom Hal knew in a business way, and a wagon load of credentials, and implored to be presented to the beautiful stranger.

The expression in Sid's eyes was unreadable. The major begged forgiveness for his presumption in hoping that he might have the honor to show her his native city. The Casino, unfortunately, and the races were closed for the season, but there were many other places of interest. His car was at all times at her disposal, and he hoped she would honor him by making use of it. But above all he craved the opportunity to dance once with the most graceful dancer he had ever beheld and perhaps teach her the Danzon which, he was sure, she would enjoy and dance more beautifully than it had ever been done.

Sid replied gaily that she was grateful to the major for his generosity and interest; that she would love to be shown Havana and above all else the Danzon. Upon which Hal remarked teasingly that for a man who had pronounced himself so shy he could not carry on a conversation with a young lady unassisted, and implored Hal not to leave them alone a moment, the major was progressing like an experienced heart wrecker.

"How you say this—heart wr-r-recker—?" The young man rolled a wicked R and wrinkled a high, troubled brow. But when Hal explained, he denied it volubly. He was never like this. He was surprised, himself. But he had been unable to sleep all night for thinking of the lady with lips like the petals of the bougainvillaea. Lips such as he nor any other man had ever seen. Lips which had, overnight, become a madness. Una locura——

Hal hesitated a little over the translation and the major, not entirely satisfied, complained wistfully to Sid, looking hungrily into her eyes, "I wiss I can tell you, no? and espress what is in my heart——"

Hal thought he did very well. But the major denied it. "No, no. I no can say las palabras—how you say—the words, no?"

"I understand you perfectly," said Sid, with an innocence which successfully veiled the expression behind her eyes.

The major, pleased but despairing, turned to Hal. "How I find the words, no? for espress such mouth and so beautiful eyes. Dois mio!" And lapsing impatiently into Spanish, he proclaimed that her eyes were like a moonless midnight where, if you strained yours, every moment you could see deeper into the velvet darkness. And her mouth was like red grapes waiting only for the press——

"Say!" Hal's amused tolerance was beginning to give way to a shade of annoyance. And he evaded Sid's demand to know what the major had said.

"I shall have to learn Spanish," she threatened.

"Si, si," acquiesced the major, the unrestraint of his ardor infecting his pronouns. "I learn she, no? Then I could zpeak more—how you say? loose, no?" He turned once more to Hal. "O my God, this mouth! Please to ask if she will dine with me this night," he begged, "esta noche, no?"

"Ask her yourself," suggested Hal. But Sid made haste to explain that she wanted to spend as much of her short visit as possible with Mr. Hayes.

But, Dios mio! was it not understood that Mr. Hayes was included in the invitation? "No, is my friend? My interpret? My mouth?" He placed his hand warmly over that of his friend, his interpret, his mouth, and inquired: "Where you think beautiful American lady is enjoyable to eat?"

Hal referred the question to her. "Any idea what sort of place you'd like, Sid?"

"Thid?" lisped the major, "this is your name, no?"

She explained it was a nickname. That she had been christened Alma.

He performed a complete emotional somersault. "Alma! Dios mio! You know what means in Spanish Alma? Mi Alma—my soul—no?"

Hal volunteered, with just a shade of impatience, that Alma meant soul in all the Latin languages.

"Then why you no call he?" the major demanded and, with a look which made Sid glance uneasily at the neighboring tables he breathed—"Alma—! O, I wiss I have the right to call you this beautiful name who is suit you so perfect, no?"

The little tightening about the corners of Hal's mouth did not escape Sid, as she gave her permission to the major, who, in his agitation, brushed to the floor the small linen square beside her empty glass. Then, stooping for it, he ignored her outstretched hand.

"You have use this to your lips, no?" And as though they were alone in the world, he raised it gravely and reverently to his, before depositing it in his breast pocket, "for make warm the heart of Arturo."

Sid appeared not to notice the expression with which Hal summoned the waiter. "I wondered," she was saying to the major, "which of your collection of names people called you."

"Major Diago," supplied Hal, in spite of his preoccupation with the check.

"Arturo—" replied the major simultaneously.

"Arturo—" repeated Sid, rolling the R and imitating his inflection, "That's a pretty name."

"I never like this name when some mans say him, no? But now, from your lips, my God! is purty!"

"I hope you will excuse us, major, we have an engagement for luncheon," said Hal, a little wearily, as he led Sid away. The young Cuban watched the doorway of the hotel until the taxi bearing them had disappeared, then sighed and continued down the street.

Hal noted with pleasure the picture she made as she came toward him across the lobby, wearing a yellow dress. But of course he did not say that to her, nor ask whence had come the corsage of tiny, yellow roses which broke the symmetry of its slender, undraped lines.

For the third time in two days he had left the office early in order to show Sid a much frequented place called Sloppy Joe's.

"The major certainly fell hard for you," he commented when they were seated.

"Nonsense," replied Sid, recognizing some people she had met on the boat, as she glanced around the famous sidewalk cafe, where she elicited the flattering but casual notice which is the due of every pretty, dark girl in Havana. "But he's a nice boy, don't you think?"

"If I hadn't thought so, I wouldn't have introduced him. You mustn't pay any attention to those things he says, though," he advised her. "The women down here expect that sort of stuff."

She sipped the whitish liquid in her glass and appeared to attach no weight to her question. "Do you know many women down here?"

He shook his head and Sid drained the rest of her Pina in one swallow. "I haven't the time. Besides, the American girls haven't a thought outside of parties, and the Spanish girls—well—" he shrugged—"we haven't much in common. See that man over there in the light suit?" he interrupted

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—What does a "Union" mean when its men go on a strike for more money and shorter hours? Yours truly—DELLA GATE.

Answer:—That means the men want more money and more time to spend it in.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—When a business concern has a "failure" there are generally two kinds of creditors. Just plain creditors and a preferred creditor. Can you tell me the difference? Sincerely—I. M. STUCK.

Answer:—A preferred creditor knows immediately that he gets nothing, while a plain creditor has to wait 60 to 90 days to find it out.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My husband was saying that he knows a man who uses "smokeless" tobacco. I've known of horseless carriages, wireless telegraphy, seedless oranges, but what in the world is "smokeless tobacco?" Yours truly—IMA YAPP.

Answer:—Chewing tobacco.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I go with a crowd of boys and girls and once a week we meet and those who can sing do so, while others just tell jokes and stories. I tell jokes. There is one girl in the crowd who doesn't like me and every time I tell a joke she always says: "That joke is 40 years old." How can I cure her? Truly yours—JOE KING.

Answer:—The next time you tell a joke and she says "That joke is 40 years old," you say to her: "And you remembered it all this time?" That'll cure her.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—While visiting New York City I was asked what I thought of the so-called "sausage" fashion the girls have of wearing stockings. I could not answer as I did not know what they meant. Can you tell me what they mean by girls wearing stockings "sausage fashion?" Truly yours—M. I. STUPID.

Answer: Wearing stockings "sausage fashion" means "below-knees."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am 44 years of age and a single woman. Met a man last night who has asked to call on me. He is coming to see me next Saturday. I have never had a man call on me before. In case he wants to kiss me shall I call for help? Sincerely—MAY DIN.

Answer:—By no means call for help. If you are 44 years old and have never been married and a man tries to kiss you don't call for help. Call for witnesses.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Is it unlucky to postpone your wedding day? Yours truly—I. M. DOINGIT.

Answer:—Not if you keep on postponing it.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My wife fights with me all the time because I won't get my hair cut. I claim it looks good but she says it is too long. Do you think I should have it cut short? Yours truly—BOB BURR.

Answer:—The only trouble with a man having his hair cut short is that he is often mistaken for his wife.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a cook in a private home. There are no marks on the faucets in the kitchen to show the hot water and cold water. I have scalded my fingers nearly every day. What can I do to prevent this from happening again? Yours truly—I. M. DUMB.

Answer:—Just feel the water first.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My wife and I have saved up $40.00. Now she wants to buy a cow and I want to buy a bicycle. I claim she'll look funny riding around town on a cow. Am I right? Truly yours—WATTEL I. DEW.

Answer:—She sure would look funny riding a cow, but no funnier than she'd look milking a bicycle.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have lost all my money and am broke. A fortune teller told me that when the soles of my shoes wear out, I will be on my feet again. Do you believe it? Yours truly—CLAIRE VOYANT.

Answer:—Next week.

Thro' Royal Palm Park. Arthur Pryor's band. Four slip horn players. Life long democrat leanin' agin th' pustoffice with his whiskers full o' orange seeds.

I WONDER WHAT THER' DOIN' AT HOME?

Marguerite Sylva, one time opera star, lookin' in a jeweler's window. Al Field's Minstrel pe-rade, but not a soul looks up. But load o' prospects startin' fer Coral Gables. String beans 60c per pound. Cords o' cucumbers. Water spaniel tryin' t' locate a tick. A real estate agent fast asleep in a wicker chair with an Elinor Glyn novel in his lap. Mr. Barron, owner of th' wall Street Journal, checkin' out at th' Royal Palm. A former Indynoplus business man standin' in a stairway scrapin' a turnip. Sign, "Shrimp Fer Bait or Table Use." John Golden, theatrical magnate, enterin' th' McAllister hotel. A window full o' mutton. Ruddy faced meat cutters with ther thumbs tied up. Crowded Italian cafe. Beer a dollar an' twenty-five cents per glass. A bulbous nose closely resemblin' a King orange. A Ford coupe haulin' a 40-foot royal palm. I wonder what ther doin' at home? Unguentine fer burned backs fifty cents same as up north. Beauty parlor padlocked because hair brush wuz not boiled in sody. Sign, "Gas & Real Estate." Eight blocks o' autos waitin' fer draw bridge t' let skiff full o' flappers go through. Across th' causeway an' back t' th' Beach. Time, two hours an' forty-five minutes. A Scotch schooner sailin' gracefully out t' sea. No gulls follerin' it. Wonder why? Exclusive shops. Little funny lookin' ladies' hats jest t' knock around in, $65. Market place. Highbrow apartment dwellers buyin' liver an' carrots. Five fellers with peelin' bald heads talkin' golf. Dudley Field Malone in French blue bathin' trunks, surrounded by women. Gene Tunney punchin' th' bag in rear o' St. Johns' Casino. I wonder what a yacht would set one back? A two-acre field full o' bath tubs. Beach photographer photographin' an ole man arm in arm with a giant sail fish. Feller carryin' a string o' dolphins. He don't know they hain't edible. "No vacancies." Colored boy peddlin' used golf balls. Northern society leader seen thro' apartment window rubbin' out her husband's socks. Egg vender disguised as a farmer. A couple o' $20 plasterers registerin' at th' Flamingo. Five trucks loaded with mattresses on Collins avenue. Seven trucks loaded with furniture goin' along Lincoln road. Wonder how northern industries would have gotten along without th' Floridy boom? A $4,500 limousine that's only gone three hundred miles fer sale fer $800. Owner bought it fer family, but family left him. Sign on apartment house, "Bathers an' Dry Cleaners use Rear Entrance." Dinner at Club Lido. Lamb an' a world o' peas. Taking Maidens :: :: :: —BY— PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

LIKE all decent cities, towns, and villages in every part of the civilized globe, New York has its servant problem. When some years ago the great invasion from Erin was at its full height, accompanied by succeeding waves of Gretchens and Hildas, there were two maids for every job and madame could afford to ask for references, antecedents, father's occupation and the color of mother's hair, when a demure and humble little newcomer applied for a position. Such is not the case now.

Madame must act with due deference and respect, offer the position-soliciting maiden a chair in the parlor, trot out a glass of monsieur's best pre-war claret, (made in Jersey) smile as she never did on her husband since their fifth wedding anniversary and show the young lady how to work the victrola and the radio.

* * * * *

While in olden days the female hired help went under such rather prosaic appelations as Bridget, Mary, Wanda and Sally, the young ladies who assist in domestic management nowadays are curiously addicted to more modern names as Ethyl, Helyn, Lulu-Mae, Mimi and Angelique. In a way this may please monsieur infinitely, but what if madame's own first name is something so downright home-like and matter of fact as Annie?

* * * *

The maid, who was content with small wages and one evening out a week has gone out of fashion. She has been replaced by Japanese butlers, ex-French chorus girls and young girls working their way through a course of social science at the night school.

* * * *

The American matron is slowly turning to male help for round the house duties and not alone because of the scarcity of maids, but in some cases also because of the taking dispositions of some of the willing workers.

* * * *

There is the story of the couple, wealthy building contractor and his wife, who went motoring through Pennsylvania and neighboring states last summer. One day they pulled up at a rural inn where the yard was thick with mud and where a girl of about seventeen was driving a flock of geese into the barn. The scene challenged a camera snapshot and the husband duly got the apparatus from the back seat and asked the girl to look around for a moment. She turned around and revealed a face that is by now familiar to ten thousand Broadwayites and night club haunters. The face of the Venetian madonna, nothing less. A lisp of golden hair fluttered from under an old boy's cap, cheeks like ripening pomegranates, shape to make old Venus grouchy with envy and Mr. Contractor gasp in sudden and rapturous emotion.

* * * *

As fate would have it, the contractor's wife, somewhat stiff from the long car-ride stepped out of the roadster, and, walking over to the girl engaged her in conversation. She was, to say the least, a bright kid. Did she like her work? Oh, yes. Would she not sooner come to New York and work in a fine big apartment? She certainly would. A little more questioning and answering and the bargain was concluded. She would come along the next morning, for the tourists intended to put up at the inn for the night.

* * * *

Cherry-Lou came to New York. Mrs. Contractor found her a pair of opera slippers in pretty good condition and as by magic the girl's nether limbs were revealed as to be of Mistinguet texture. She was given a little blouse and Mr. Contractor began to act somewhat confused when she waited on table the first night.

* * * *

Four weeks after the arrival in Gotham, the contractor was missing, spurlos versenkt, as the Germans used to say of a ship sunk without trace. He turned up in due course of time, a much wiser man. Cherry-Lou, who had disappeared with him, turned up also, but in a court of law where she exacted a penalty of twenty-five thousand for breach of promise.

* * * *

That breach of promise suit was the makings of her. A theatrical man saw her picture in the paper and hired her for the chorus training squad. She's in the first row now and cracking jokes about cute little goose women on the farm.

* * * *

Another incident of maid-hiring was enacted only a few weeks ago. A gent, whose wife was exasperated and down-hearted over the frequent change in domestic help, volunteered to go down to a domestic help bureau. He was told there were no applicants that day.

* * * *

As chance would have it, however, coming out of the door of the agency he bumped into a sweet little creature. Something about that girl took his eye. She was pretty. And he paused. So did she. "You are not looking for a maid, sir?" said she. He was. Would she do? Well, ah, eh, let's see. "Have you references?" She had. Plenty of them. He read them and discovered her name was Mary. It ended up by sending Mary up to the house and he proceeding to the office, greatly satisfied with himself.

* * * *

Then, as it always goes inevitably, he came home that night. His wife was waiting for him. "And did Mary come?" he asked. The wife nodded. "She seems a taking sort of a girl," he ventured. Then the wife exploded. "Taking? I should say she is. She came this morning and told me she would have to go out this afternoon and get her trunk brought up. I went out for a little shopping. When I came home Mary had been back and she had taken the diamond bracelet you bought me last year for my birthday. I called up the police and they said it was the third time that week they had been called in on a similar case."

Glimpses of Hollywood :: —BY— ROSALIND SHAFFER

ALL footloose Hollywood, not buried under the burden of making pictures boarded trains, busses and ordered chauffeurs to the Coffroth handicap at Tia Juana Sunday. The crowded grandstand and clubhouse gave some colorful close-ups of the movie folk gathered to watch the great turf classic.

On the roof garden of the clubhouse might be seen the handsome Dick Barthelmess carefully balancing himself on top of the pergola and the climbing geraniums peering over the field of galloping horses with his hand shading a seagoing look in his eyes.

At a table on the second floor near the windows sat Bert Lytell, escort to his wife, Claire Windsor, who wore a striking looking white sport suit with cape coat, a black and white felt polka dotted sport hat and white silk polka dotted scarf. Bert, eyeing her admiringly from across their table at which Clarence Brown, Roscoe Arbuckle and others sat, remarked: "Stunning ensemble on Claire Windsor; hat and scarf decorated by Smith Brothers," meaning the big black polka dots. The ensuing laughter caused a choking spell in one woman member of the party that nearly called for one of the famous black cough drops mentioned.

Below stairs in the bar was collected a rollicking company of screen heroes. Kenneth Harlan and Norman Kerry were taking a lot of razzing on their idea of the natty thing in sports clothes which consisted of inch square black and white checked plus fours, with matching jackets and red and white striped neckties with enormous squashy peaked caps also in checks.

John Gilbert was gleefully romping about with his long hair sticking out from under his cap in humorous wisps. He is letting it grow long for his picture "Bardelys, the Magnificent," in which John plays a sixteenth century gallant with numerous ringlets.

Incidentally the research department at the studio uncovered the fact that whereas we think of the paper curl with its special iron implements as a very new trick with the beauty parlors, the process was done in Louis Fourteenth's time with exactly the same implements, to produce the hundreds of ringlets fashionable at that time on the cavaliers' heads. Such a curl will John wear and as real hair always looks better than a wig he is growing and rolling his own.

Jerry Miley, lead in Mrs. Glyn's new picture, was playing cards with a group at a table in the club. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dempsey, with Floyd Fitzsimmons and his wife from Chicago and Barney Oldfield made another party at the races. Estelle looked smart in a white and black sports outfit and Jack, it was noted, stuck to a simple glass of beer as is his custom when the party strolled in the busy bar in the club.

Clarence Brown, director, was unable to see as much as he desired of the horses with his excellent field glasses and went down on the track between races and took a ride around the track on the scraper used to smooth the way for the horses after each race.

Rupert Hughes was guest of honor at a dinner at the Writers' club in Hollywood on Friday night. As is usual at dinners there an enormously entertaining program was staged. Hughes has issued many diatribes including ones on prohibitions and on the deaconly legends about George Washington. Hence the party was given in honor of George Washington's birthday and the program included a skit entitled "Graduation Exercises of the Rupert Hughes Grammar School."

Donald Ogden Stewart acted as school principal and his graduating class included Patsy Ruth Miller, Bess Meredyth, Maude Fulton, Dewitt Jennings, Donald Crisp and Kathleen Kay. The class song, sung in unison, was "My Drink is Water Bright From the Crystal Str-e-a-ms." Donald Crisp's tenor voice was remarked by all.

Poems on "Thanksgiving, Fourth of July and other subjects" were recited by individuals of the class. And a piano duet "Poet and Peasant," was rendered by Maude Fulton and Bess Meredyth, Bess always two measures ahead of Maude and gaining as the duet ended. Thunderous applause greeted Stewart's advice to the young souls delivered into his keeping and now going forth into the world.

Following the dinner someone asked Patsy Ruth if she ever intended to marry. "I may not," she smiled.

"Well," said the questioner, "you'll be disappointing a lot of young men."

Patsy snapped back: "I'd rather disappoint a lot of young men for a while than one man for life."

Increasing land values in Hollywood have worked many changes in moviedom. Lasky's have sold their old studio and bought United, which in turn means much more moving about to house the companies thus deprived of a home by day. Another side to the proposition is that the property men who are obliged to produce everything from a dinousaur to a Mexican jumping bean at a moment's notice, are having difficulties.

There was the matter of pigs, formerly easily obtainable from any of the ranches in the old days near the studios. Now when Corinne Griffith wanted some for a Russian domestic scene the frenzied property man had to scour the country for a pig and finally located one 50 miles out from town. By the time piggie and his friends had had an antiseptic bath and been taxied into town and back and their rentals paid it turned out that four human extras could have been hired for what one pig cost for a day.

On the set, near one in which the Golden pigs were used stands a duplication of the famous Imperial Russian throne room, one of the most elaborate sets ever built. It is one hundred and sixty-five feet by seventy-four feet with a plush canopied covering, an elaborate lot of gold trimmings and a vaulted ceiling. It was built from authentic photographs made when the room was the scene of all affairs of state under the Romanoffs. Since then the bolshevists have used it, but stripped off all expensive adornment. Corinne Griffith plays the Grand Duchess Tatiania in this setting.

Gretta Grabo, Swedish actress who is now starring at the M.-G.-M. studio is having a great time getting Americanized. She is learning to ride a horse for her new picture, "The Enchantress," and is dumb with admiration of the versatile American actress who can dance, swim, ride horse or anything just like that. She says when asked about the equistrine business, "I am very unhappy on a horse. I am like the Prince of Wales, only I make bigger and better falls."

* * * * *

On Gretta Grabo's set there is a remarkable collection of linguists. The Tower of Babel had nothing on this crowd for Kathleen Kay, who learned Italian while abroad on Ben Hur, talks it to Tony Gaudio, the Italian cameraman. Maurtiz Ztiller, Gretta's Swedish director, talks Swedish with her. Antonio Moreno, who is Spanish, speaks his tilts in Spanish as it is a Spanish picture and he finds he gets good atmosphere that way and Bob Flory, the French technical director, forgets himself and swears in French when the lights pop off or something goes wrong.

* * * * *

Bessie Love, who is doing the title in "Lovey Mary," is the delight of all the studio for she will Charleston by request and an odd spectacle she is in her rags and big shoes doing her Charleston numbers. Bessie complains that she is still feeling the ill effects of a half bushel of apples she had to eat rehearsing and re-taking a gag scene in the picture on Tuesday. "I never cared much for apples anyway," she said plaintively, "but now

Crossed Wires

A Fascinating New Serial

By John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

A wealthy American family, the Craytons, are in Paris. A worthless Frenchman, Pierre de Barsac, tries to win Virginia, the daughter, seeing the dollar sign glittering before him. The mother is agreeable, but Mr. Crayton is suspicious. He becomes wrathy and twice disappears for days, only to return to find De Barsac more and more firmly intrenched with his wife and daughter. He cancels sailing reservations when he learns the count is also booked for the same boat. The count sails alone. In order to divert Virginia, Crayton cleverly arranges to have another young man, an American whom he has met in Paris, sail with them on the Leviathan. Unfortunately, Virginia is not immediately impressed with this substitute for the count, but before the voyage is over his mysterious manner has intrigued her. It is a great shock to her sensibilities, therefore, to learn that he had formerly been a truck driver and also a grocer, in a small way. Nothing daunted, her father offers the young man a position as chauffeur, and it is accepted.

"What's your idea this time?"

INSTALLMENT XII.

Lifting the Mask.

MR. CRAYTON said nothing to his wife or daughter about having engaged Rasher as a chauffeur. He had not entirely given up the hope that a good looking young man, even though acting in a position of social inferiority, might still divert his daughter's interest from Count de Barsac, who, in his opinion was a designing fortune hunter. Rich young girls had fallen in love with good looking chauffeurs, he reflected, so why not in this case? At any rate, it was worth trying.

He had no thought of permitting the affair to develop beyond the point where it supplanted De Barsac, and when that result was achieved he would readily find means to squelch it.

He spoke to Rasher alone.

In the flurry and confusion after the customs examination at the dock he found an opportunity to give some instructions to his newly engaged chauffeur.

"We are stopping at the Ritz," he said. "I shall leave for home by tomorrow's train. My wife and daughter are following in a new car which I have just bought. I want you to be ready to drive them out, leaving New York day after tomorrow."

"Very well, sir," said Rasher. "I have only a few things to attend to here. They'll take only a few hours. I can be ready any time after tomorrow morning." He wrote down a telephone number. "Whenever you want me, a friend at this number will see that your message reaches me. I'll arrange about the uniform."

It would have interested Mr. Crayton if he could have followed the movements of his new chauffeur during the ensuing two hours.

Leaving the dock, Rasher drove at once to one of the older fashioned business blocks in the financial district. A few minutes later he paused at a door marked "The Livingston Estate," and entered. An old clerk stared at him in amazement and quickly arose.

"Well, well," he exclaimed, "if it isn't Mr. Bacon! This is certainly a great surprise. I don't think Mr. McFall is expecting you." They shook hands.

"No; I didn't wire," he said. "Is Mr. McFall in?"

"O, yes! Come right in; he'll be very glad to see you." Bustling ahead and beaming pleasantly, the old clerk led the way into an adjoining room, where an elderly man sat at a desk. He was like a picture out of an old book, ruddy in color, with grizzled hair of sandy gray and with keen, twinkling blue eyes that looked out from beneath bushy eyebrows. This was Andrew McFall, trustee of the great Livingston estate.

"Andrew, here's a visitor to see you," announced the old clerk.

Mr. McFall, after a moment of surprise, beamed over his glasses and then affectionately seized the hand of the young man.

"Well, well, my boy! So you're back at last—and looking fine. Your travels have done you good. Come, sit down, and tell me what you've been doing and where you've been. I wasn't expecting you so soon. You said nothing about returning in your last letter."

"No; I decided to come back rather suddenly. I'm glad to see you both looking so well. You're not a day older than when I left two years ago." He glanced about him. "Everything just the same except the calendar. It's a pleasure to come back and find one place that doesn't change."

"Dear, dear," exclaimed Mr. McFall. "What a lot of places you've been! The postmarks on some of your letters were from places I'd never heard of before. What an experience!"

"Yes; I've traveled around quite a bit in the last two years."

"And now you're ready to settle down."

"Not quite." Here Rasher smiled. "It will interest you to know that I have engaged myself to a rich western gentleman as a chauffeur. I am to be Harry L. Rasher for a while longer. Henry Livingston Bacon is still abroad."

"What a boy!" murmured Mr. McFall, his keen eyes twinkling. "And what's your idea this time?"

"It's an interesting little problem," answered Rasher. "I met this man—his name is William Crayton and I gather he's a man of considerable importance out in his part of the country. He has a daughter——"

"Ah!"

"Don't jump at conclusions," laughed Rasher. "He has a daughter and I discovered quite by accident that a French adventurer is trying to marry her. I learned enough to know that he's something of a crook. So I'm going to try to block him. It will be something interesting to do. And in order to be near the scene of action I took the job of chauffeur. She's a nice girl, and her father's a likeable party, and I think I'll have a lot of fun if I get into the game."

"They don't know who you are? Henry Livingston Bacon?"

"They don't. I told them I had been a truck driver—which was true so far as it went—and I gave them the impression that I was a poor but worthy young man."

Mr. McFall leaned back in his chair and shook with mirth.

"That's rich!" he cried. And then, upon a sudden impulse, he opened a drawer of his desk and drew out a sheet of paper, which he handed to the young man.

He bought a chauffeur's uniform.

"Glance over that," he said. "You will find that the last two years have increased your fortune considerably. All the money you've spent in your travels has not made the slightest dent in your balance. Why, your Lannard Steel stock alone is worth two millions more than when you left, and that's only one of your lesser properties. So you see you are not quite penniless, even though you paid the government over six hundred thousand dollars last year in income taxes. This year, with the reduction

The Birthday Party That Caused

Daring "Girl in the Champagne Bath" Orgy Results in a Series of Misfortunes and Scandals Affecting All Who Were There

BIRTHDAY parties are usually the heralds of a hearty, happy and successful new year to the people for whom they are given. They are occasions of joy and comradeship, good wishes and expansive geniality long to be remembered by host and guests.

However, the birthday party that Earl Carroll, the New York theatrical producer, gave for his wealthy financial backer, William R. Edrington, a few weeks ago very decidedly did not turn out that way.

It was a gay party while it lasted.

Indeed, it was one of the very gayest ever staged in the annals of New York's history of expensive and scandalous festivities. It was a rubric in the calendar of Broadway's reputed Babylonian carnalities.

But almost as dire was its aftermath for all concerned as was the cataclysmic day that followed Belshazzar's royal feast. Had "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin" suddenly appeared in fiery letters upon the interior walls of the Earl Carroll theater on the uproarious night, it could scarcely have forwarned more unhappy consequences to all concerned.

Reputations damaged, business prospects threatened, careers ruined, jail threats, damage suits, scandal, grand jury investigations, public opprobrium, fright and shame followed with the dawn after that hilarious night.

People who went to the party entirely ignorant of the sort of entertainment that was to be offered them cringed in fear for weeks that it would be discovered that they were there and that they would be called to testify before the grand jury as to the nature of the proceedings.

Husbands who attended it without their wives faced suspicious grillings and knotty problems of explanation and protestations of innocence.

Joyce Hawley, dressed in the dainty silken combination in which she was dancing just before she discarded it and got into the bathtub that was said to be filled with wine

Vera, Countess of Cathcart, held for deportation at Ellis Island on a charge of "moral turpitude," had won her release through the sympathy and support of clubwomen, but after it became known she had attended the notorious party her defenders deserted her and her play was received with sneers and scorn

As for the host, he saw his friendly competitors in the theatrical business turn against him with condemnation for his conduct, and a war waged against him in newspapers and pulpits to end his career on Broadway. He soon found himself facing a grand jury that indicted him for perjury, and may add to the charge.

The Countess of Cathcart, whose detention by immigration authorities had aroused club women to her support, was deserted by her well-wishers and her play shunned by the public when it was learned that she was among those present at the party.

The unfortunate man for whom the daring party was given thereby lost much of his prestige in bank and church circles in his home town, Fort Worth, Tex., and hurried away to Europe, breaking off with his host, to escape the storm of scandal.

For when the shocking news leaked out that one of the peppiest girls at the bibulous party had undressed and got into a bathtub, from which men present had drunk glasses of alleged wine, the public was horrified at such a shameless flaunting of the decencies. And retribution quickly followed upon all of those who were in the least connected with the affair.

Wiseacres on Broadway assert that Mr. Carroll's inordinate craving for publicity led to his undoing on the occasion of the party.

"Carroll had got away with so much," so say the wiseacres, "that he thought he could put over anything, no matter how raw. He overstepped himself this time. This last stunt was just a little too brazen for blase Broadway to stand."

About 300 guests, both men and women, were invited to the party. Along the back wall of the stage a long raised banquet table was loaded with delicacies of all sorts and in the center of it was a huge birthday cake in Mr. Edrington's honor. In the course of the evening the birthday cake was cut with appropriate ceremonies by Dorothy Knapp, the famous beauty prize winner of the Atlantic City pageant, now a member of the cast of a very advanced revue, and portions of the cake were served by the Countess of Cathcart.

To one side of the stage, a hot dog stand had been erected, where hot dogs and boiled ham sandwiches were served to the guests, along with bumpers of cider, ginger ale and what looked like beer. To the other side of the stage liquid refreshments were served.

The stage itself was reserved for dancing. Music was furnished continuously until the early hours of the morning by two orchestras, one on each side of the auditorium.

As another feature, a platform had been built, with a backdrop painted to represent a Hollywood motion picture studio. A motion picture camera was set up under Klieg lights. Each guest was urged to step upon the platform and pose for about five feet of film, which were developed immediately. Each guest got as a souvenir a strip of film for which he had posed. And since the party each guest has destroyed or quite carefully concealed these telltale bits of celluloid.

About two o'clock in the morning a screen was lowered and colored portraits were thrown on it of George Washington, Calvin Coolidge, Earl Carroll and Mr. Edrington.

Shortly after that Mr. Carroll mounted the stage and introduced the Countess of Cathcart who had been detained at Ellis Island on her arrival in this country from England and was about to be departed for having admitted guilt of an "act involving moral turpitude," that is, of having admitted eloping with the youthful and married Earl of Craven to South Africa. Many influential women had rallied to her aid and by pressure upon the authorities in Washington had succeeded in turning public sentiment in her favor and thus securing her release from Ellis Island and her admittance to this country.

The countess had just obtained her

Trouble to All Who Were There

freedom the day before the fateful party. She had been to the Earl Carroll theater that evening, and because Mr. Carroll was negotiating with her about producing her play, "Ashes of Love," she had been invited to the party.

The Countess of Cathcart was followed in the center spotlight by Harry K. Thaw, who had been sitting quietly in the back of the theater most of the evening. Thaw protested against being introduced to the audience and even after he was finally almost dragged into the spotlight, he refused to make a speech of any sort.

Irvin S. Cobb and some other celebrities who were already getting nervous about the trend of the evening's gaiety, were in turn brought forward and publicly presented.

There were some impromptu burlesque entertainments by professional comedians, and after that a Charleston contest was announced. After four sets of elimination contests were held, the prize was awarded to a young girl, who, according to Mr. Carroll, was going on the operating table the next day for the removal of a tumor in her breast. No minor details were spared to make the party lively.

While he was introducing the Charleston winner, Mr. Carroll opened several boxes of silk and lace underthings. The lingerie, he said, was for the winner; and then he asked the audience if they would like to see her in them.

A roar of "Yes!" whereat the girl disappeared behind the scene and shortly reappeared clad only in one of the scanty items of underwear.

Lest it take too long for one girl to put on and take off the numerous garments, the host said he would buy her some more, and called to other girls in the audience, telling them they might have the garments if they would put them on.

Five pretty girls responded and presently were duly posing under the spotlight. Not bothering to change later, they danced in these garments. Among these five girls was Joyce Hawley, an artist's model.

Harry [illegible], who, after evading adverse publicity for many months, directed attention to himself by being present at the scandalous orgy, and brought renewed demands that he be locked up as a menace to the community

The dancing which followed the entertainment continued until about four in the morning, during which time many of the guests had departed, including the Countess of Cathcart.

Excitement flared up when a bathtub was rolled in to the center of the stage, mounted on a platform about three feet high. Waiters brought kegs from the wings and filled the tub with a liquid. Word flew around that the liquid was champagne.

Joyce Hawley, who broke the storm of scandal over the heads of all who attended the Carroll party, by reclining nude in a bathtub, supposed to have been filled with champagne, into which men present dipped glasses and drank

When the tub was full, Mr. Carroll asked if there was any girl in the audience who wanted to take a bath in the bubbling liquid. Joyce Hawley was standing in the wings and Mr. Carroll called to her. She demurred for a second and then came forward. She was about to undress before the audience when Mr. Carroll halted her, dashed into the wings and returned with an evening wrap he had borrowed from the shoulders of one of the women guests. He held the wrap spread out between Miss Hawley and the audience while she removed the slight bit of lingerie she had on and got into the tub.

Dorothy Knapp, the beauty who cut the birthday cake at Carroll's party, and suffered criticism for having been there

While she was reclining in the tub, Mr. Carroll told the men in the audience to line up to the right and single file past the tub for a drink. But instead of going on, they gathered about and, soon a milling mob was scrambling around the tub trying to get a glimpse of the bacchanalian bathing beauty.

The drink, whatever it was, apparently was cold and Miss Hawley was faint with exposure. Excitedly Mr. Carroll called attendants to run the tub back into the wings and pulled and pushed the men away from the tub. It was all over in less than five minutes and Miss Hawley, fully clothed again and warm, was back on the stage dancing with the other couples on the floor.

The party dwindled toward dawn. Next day the scandal spread like wildfire. Prohibition authorities demanded a grand jury investigation as to the alleged alcoholic content of the liquid in which Miss Hawley had bathed. Denunciation followed denunciation.

Mr. Carroll, hitherto a hot publicity seeker, had himself accompanied to court by a bodyguard who smashed a news photographer's camera and got trounced by newspaper men in return.

Joyce Hawley, the girl in the case (or in the tub), alleging that she had been promised a job by Mr. Carroll for the indecorous stunt, brought suit against him for a very large sum, charging that he had damaged her name and had failed to carry out his promise.

The Countess of Cathcart had come to America to sell a play she had written and to see it produced. She has since gone back to England flat broke.

William R. Edrington, for whom the party was given, came in for much scornful treatment from the press and public of his native state, Texas.

Among Us Georgians

—BY—
W. C. WOODALL

JUDGE GEORGE P. MUNRO, of Columbus, tells of a bright young man of Marion county who was looking around for a job and got himself appointed bailiff.

One of his first official duties was to levy on a certain herd of goats on a farm some miles out from Buena Vista.

The owner of the goats came to the door, accompanied by a sawed-off shotgun, which he exhibited rather prominently. The new officer produced the papers and said that he had come to get the goats.

The proprietor of this valuable collection of live stock looked the young man over with an evil eye, in which there was a considerable degree of sarcasm.

"Young man," he said, "I'll give you exactly ten minutes to get off my place. As for the goats, forget them."

"Mr. ——," said the new bailiff, as he reached for his hat, "you have given me exactly nine more minutes than I need!"

Aud, sure enough, he was in the big road in one minute by his Waterbury.

* * * * *

AT a civic club entertainment in one of the Georgia cities the other evening they invited two prominent lawyers of the town to speak. To one they assigned the subject, "Why All Lawyers Are Liars," and to the other, "Why All Liars Are Lawyers."

The laugh was supposed to be on the lawyers. But they developed their usual ingenuity and put up a defense both novel and strong.

One of them declared that in Sacred Writ, itself something was said about all men being liars; and, of course, he added, lawyers are but men.

The other barrister said that lawyers lied because their clients first lied, thus paving the way.

One of the lawyers declared that perjury was committed by at least one witness in more than half of the litigated cases tried in this country.

* * * * *

AN earnest student of the subject declares:

"The history of kaolin mining in Georgia, which really started during the colonial days with the Indians, for the English governor of Georgia, would make an interesting story. There was a lapse of one hundred years, but at the time the kaolin was discovered in Georgia, which was a few years before the English clays were found, the Wedgewoods and the English officials thought there was great promise in the Georgia material."

W. C. MUNDAY, Jr., popular Atlanta sports writer, has succumbed to the lure of the diamond and will play on the Columbus baseball team this season, having secured a leave of absencse from his paper until September. Bill's family formerly lived in Columbus and he is delighted at being back in the old home town for the summer.

Mr. Munday arrived in Columbus the other day, enchanted with the prospect of living baseball awhile instead of just writing it. He plunged valiantly into practice work, hitting the field a-running.

Columbus will have league baseball this summer for the first time in a number of years and the fans of the city are all fired up over prospects. It is interesting to note, in this connection, that Columbus has twice been in the Southern league and twice in the South Atlantic league. It was in the Southern league 30 years ago when the other members were Atlanta, Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile and New Orleans.

IT was 25 or 30 years ago. There had been a fire at a South Georgia town and the —— County News had burned up. The paper had just been issued for the week and six days more intervened before it was to come out again.

I do not recall the name of the earnest-minded young man then publishing the —— County News, but he was impressed with the necessity of continuity of service, and the fact that the general public should be notified. So he went to the nearest city and made official statement of the situation.

"You are authorized to say," he told the representative of the Associated Press, "that the —— County News will come out on time next week."

"The mechanical difficulties may be great," he continued, "the barriers may be almost insurmountable, the task may be herculean, but you may announce, without fear of successful contradiction, that the —— County News will come out on time."

"This is official?" he was asked.

"Absolutely," he said. "I will sign the statement if you say so—sign it with pen and ink. Put it on the A. P.! And give permission to associated and allied press associations in Europe to spread the news, so that all possible publicity may attend it."

"Tell it in the streets of Gath, announce it in the highways of Atlanta, repeat it in the bazars of Askelon, give currency to it in the boulevards of Kansas City. In short, my friend, assure the world, explicitly, and by my authority, that —— County News most positively WILL come out on time next week!"

And it did! For the young man got off his jag the next day, hurried to Atlanta, got hold of a handfull of type and a press, and did bring out a four-page issue on exact schedule.

MEMORY still plays around in the thirty-years-ago, for the moment. Comes to mind a desperately busy night in the office of the morning newspaper at Columbus.

A young man, kind, amiable, friendly and most comfortably illuminated, strolled into the midst of that strenuous scene. He knew nothing whatever about the newspaper business but out of the great depths of kindness and good will in his heart wanted to help. And so he got generally in the way until after a while he became very sleepy and asked for a place where he could take a nap. One of the boys, to get rid of him, told him to go up the adjoining stairway, leading to the chamber of commerce quarters, and stretch out on the floor of the hallway there. The busy workers heard him blundering up the steps until finally he reached the top—and then proceeded to forget about him, as every nerve was being strained to do about two nights' work in one.

That very night a cold wave landed on the Georgia coast! The temperature dropped with startling rapidity, and one could almost see the column contract as it sank in the tube. By two o'clock it was freezing. By three o'clock 15 degrees was registered. By four o'clock the temperature was down almost to zero. The boys in the newspaper office, their work over, huddled over a red-hot stove, striving desperately to keep warm.

And then suddenly a bump-bump-bump was heard as the young man who had been tucked away in the adjoining stairway came to life—and came down the stairs. He awoke in pitchy darkness, having not the slightest idea where he was, and felt half frozen, the whisky having died out long before. And then, blundering around, he struck the top of the steps and rolled and bumped down. By the processes of gravitation and centrifugal motion he was whirled into the newspaper office.

It was an awkward moment as they gazed at that dazed, bruised and half-frozen young man, for they all liked him and were conscious-stricken that they had turned him out into what proved to be such a refrigerator. Then, to relieve the tension, somebody remarked:

"John, we got a press dispatch a while ago that the peach crop had been killed tonight."

"I can well believe it," he declared earnestly, as he literally hugged the stove pipe. "Not only the peaches, but the pears and the plums and the persimmons, the blackberries and the blue birds and the maypops. In fact, it will be a great surprise to me, my friends, if this freeze didn't kill every tree in Georgia!"

THE Georgia road bond issue is killed for the present. But as thoughtful editors point out, the state is nearer road paving on a broad scale than ever before, for public sentiment is becoming more and more aroused to the necessity for real highways, and out of this intense desire for paved roads, why paved roads must come, sooner or later. In the meantime, contracts were let the other day for substantial road and bridge building projects in Georgia. No doubt the state highway department will strain every nerve to make the best possible showing with its present financial resources, for it certainly realizes how keenly the people of Georgia want paved roads, even if they don't have opportunity to vote on a bond issue just at present.

PARIS, France.—Preparations for an even greater migration of American students to Europe this spring and summer than they benefitted by last season are being made by all steamship lines in the North Atlantic service from New York. Nearly 40,000 students took advantage of the special rates offered by these companies during April, May, June, July, August and September of 1925. Advance bookings of passage indicate that between 50,000 and 60,000 will visit Europe this year.

Six college orchestras have been engaged by the United States lines to furnish jazz for the dancers on its ships. Two of these orchestras will come from Princeton, while Yale, Harvard, New York university and the University of Pennsylvania each will be represented by its best musical talent. The Cunard lines will operate exclusive student ships. The season will begin on April 7 with the arrival at Cherbourg of a large group of students.

A record figure of 5,000 American college and university students was reached in the April 1 reports of American students in France, according to educational authorities, including the American University union in Paris, the report of which at this time last year showed 4,000. These figures do not include hundreds of Americans attending public and private primary schools or summer visitors.

Mme. Roux Petain, sister of Marshal Petain, entertained with a luncheon at the American Women's club of Paris last week. Her guests included Mrs. Troup Howard, of Atlanta, and Mrs. William Koenig, of Rusk, Tex., wife of the assistant military attache at the United States embassy in Paris.

The American Luncheon club, of Berlin, gave a brilliant farewell celebration in honor of Jefferson Caffrey, of Lafayette, La., counsellor of the United States embassy, who has left for his new post as United States minister at San Salvador, and a welcome festival for DeWitt Clinton Poole, of Washington, D. C., until recently consul general at Cape Town, South Africa, who is to succeed him as counsellor. Among those present were United States Ambassador Schurman and Duncan M. White, of Alaska, United States vice-consul at Leipzig, Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker, of Atlanta, who have been visiting the various Swiss resorts, were recent guests of the Palace hotel in Lugano on the Italian border. The owner of Trevano Castle, the principle estate in Lugano, is, by the way, an American, Louis Lombard, the famous composer and author. Mrs. Lombard formerly was Miss Alice Maud Allen, of St. Louis, Mo.

William Odom, formerly of Columbus, Ga., now director of the Paris ateliers of the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts, has returned to the French capital from a visit to London.

Alexander Roscoe Yeats, of Atlanta, who has been traveling in the Central European countries, was a recent visitor to Vienna, the Austrian capital, where he spent several days at the Hotel Bristol and visited the annual Spring Sample Fair at Vienna.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker Gilbert, the latter nee Todd, of Louisville, Ky., entertained at their apartment in Berlin last week. Among their guests was Mrs. Carl Fuehr, of Berlin, who expects to pay her family in Savannah, Ga., a visit this spring.

Advising His Nephew

—BY—
DORIS BLAKE

This Uncle Stresses Five Points He Thinks Necessary for a Successful Life.

FROM one who says he has had long, wide, varied experience and unusual opportunity for observation, there came to me the other day a copy of a letter written to a beloved young nephew in college.

"As I watch the boys and men I have known," the uncle addresses the college youth, "I am impressed with a few things I am going to pass on to you to think about.

"First, it is worth while to have the long view ahead—to consider your work, your studies, your friends, in the light of what they will mean ten years in the future. Will the work you are doing now be useful then? Will the studies you are now taking be mastered so thoroughly they will be helpful then? Will your friends of today be men and women of position and standing then, whom you will be proud to call your friends?

"Second, measure your friends, the women especially, by this test: 'Would I like to introduce her to my parents and others whose esteem I value? Is she a girl of good appearance, with good taste in dress, and with the stamp of character on her countenance?' If not, pass her by, for the world is so full of worthwhile girls that have vivacity and all the above characteristics that it is folly to waste time on those that lack the same.

Power in Speech.

"Third, the chief rewards in life come to those who can sway others by word or written thought. Lose no opportunity to improve your ability as a writer and speaker. No matter how great your ability may be, if you can not express yourself clearly, forcefully, and convincingly you are handicapped as surely as if you had a ball and chain locked to your feet. Join a debating club. Get on the staff of the college paper. Get into class politics, and train yourself to shape events. Especially do you need to develop ease and conviction in speaking.

"Fourth, the human brain can register only a certain number of persons; therefore, seek to make the acquaintance and win the friendship of the strongest, keenest, brightest and most capable members of your own class and of others, for the mind is sharpened by contact. You only learn from those who know more than you do. You gain nothing save self-conceit by mingling with those who know less, or who are more stupid than you. Hence, seek those of ability because you not only will learn from them, but you will make friends among those who are to be the leaders in the future, and who may be able to assist you in making progress.

"Fifth, avoid going with any one girl exclusively. Rather seek to broaden your acquaintance among young women. You will learn from each something worth while. It is best to avoid forming an attachment for any particular one until after you have graduated and have a start. There are two good reasons for this. In the first place, allowing yourself to become fond of any one girl while you are yet in school may lead your emotions to override your judgment, with marriage as a result before you have completed your course. In the second place, your judgment is more mature when you have finished and you will be better qualified to select a wife really worth while. When you do begin to think seriously about a girl be sure to ask yourself: What kind of a mother will she make? What kind of children can I expect from her? And in the meantime, shape your life so you will be asking no more of her than you are able to give yourself.

"I believe you will rise high if you will bear these main things in mind, for you have ability, a strong physique, and you have shown excellent sticking qualities. And this last is most essential.

"You will make mistakes. All boys do. But try not to make serious ones. Do not take them too much to heart.

"Buy a good autobiography of Benjamin Franklin and read it frequently. It will not only improve your English, but will spur your ambition.

"Last, but not least, never give up. The man who never concedes defeat is the man who wins in the end.

"With best wishes, your loving uncle."

We Take Issue.

On the whole, I think this advice to a young man on the threshold of life is good indeed. But because I loathe anything that has the slightest taint of snobbery I read the fourth paragraph of the letter without enthusiasm. I don't believe I'd urge a nephew of mine to cultivate friendships with a view to their being of assistance later. I can't dissociate "fawning" from the idea. I'd tell him to learn to stand on his own feet, to lean not at all on others.

And while 'tis true one learns more from persons of greater mental capacity than one possesses himself, and that one's mind is sharpened by contact, life teaches us that there is hardly a living soul from whom one can not imbibe some knowledge that serves in rounding out character.

Life, too, has a way of juggling actors. The brilliant college student has

Broadway Banter

"RAINBOW ROSE" is a well-bred, well-behaved musical comedy for which but few apologies are necessary. Bubbling, bouncing and boisterous, it almost succeeds in covering up its deplorably bad book. Will there ever come a musical comedy which won't have to be ashamed of its plot? Earlier in the season, "Rainbow Rose" was a very bad non-musical play called "A Lucky Break." Someone got the idea that music might make a good show out of it, but even music, you know, has its limitations. So if you can forget "A Lucky Break" and the plot, and think only of the tuneful music and delirious dancing, you'll be quite willing to spend the money on "Rainbow Rose" you meant to save for shoes.

The music is good. While largely of the "da-de-da" type—if you know what I mean—it is good. "If You Were Someone Else" and "Rainbow" are melodies well above the average, while "Let's Get Married" is far from annoying. Unlike most musical comedies, the score of "Rainbow Rose" doesn't completely collapse after its hit number has been played.

Now I shall be cruelly frank and tell you I saw very few prize-winning beauties in the ranks of the "Rainbow Rose" chorus. But there's never been anything written about dancing that they don't know. They throw themselves into one unbelievably difficult routine after another, and never come out the worse for wear. As for high-kickers, well, there are two girls in that chorus who can sling their legs over, behind and around their heads easier than I can walk. I don't know where they were when joints were being given out.

Furthermore "Rainbow Rose" has a carefree young juvenile who gets you on his side from the start. This Jack Whiting goes in for his musical comedy in a light-hearted natural sort of way, and not with the tragic grimness some youngsters seem to think essential to keep the world going round.

WHEN this reaches you the Schoen-Duggan nuptials will have taken place here at the Park Lane and you'll be reading in another part of the paper just who wore petunia-pink and why. And you now know definitely just what Atlanta social celebrities were drawn to New York to attend the wedding. At this writing I can only guess, but let's see how near right I can come.

Certainly Sara's duplicate set of aunts, Willie Calhoun and Floride Calhoun Martin came up for the proceedings. Did they, I wonder, motor up in their powder-blue Oakland? I feel reasonably sure that they waited at least until the ceremony was over before they turned to a Park Lane servant and said, "Where's the card-room?"

Did Nellie Dodd Orme, by chance, throw a few things into her suitcase and trot up to see Sara make the grade? For Nellie, you know, has never cut a slice of cake, without Sara being right there, so she should get in on this wedding if anybody does.

I wonder if Alberta Lewis Campbell dragged herself away from Atlanta long enough to come up and see it done? For by Mrs. Campbell's side, the former Miss Schoen has ridden over many a mile of bumpy roads. Did Aline Fielder Phelan, perchance, dash up from Carrollton, pick up Margaret Adams at Atlanta, and the twosome come on up for the ceremony? Charlotte Meador Fletcher was of course already on hand to attend her maid-of-honor's wedding. Charlotte and Sara attended school together, you know, and if they didn't find the time to do a great deal of studying, they did have a grand time, anyway. I presume that Willie Peck Meador, Charlotte's mother and a great traveling companion of Sara's, was surely on hand.

Obviously Grace Goldsmith, the maid-of-honor, came up, and I do hope she got here in time. It should have been her plan to leave Atlanta fully a week ahead of the others, for this delightful delinquent can be late where it would seem humanly impossible to be. Was there with her, I wonder, her mother, Grace Boyd Goldsmith, St., who has always had a say in Sara's affairs?

Henry Walker Bagley, a teething companion of Sara'h, is also in New York and as for "Broadway Banter"—well, I have decided my presence here might answer once and for all that frenzied question "Why is she marrying in New York?" I understand this latter refrain has been sung so often in Atlanta, that Irving Berlin is planning shortly to put it to music.

And all this speculation for nothing. For we both now know to just what Atlantans all that noise in the Park Lane yesterday should be attributed.

"Broadway Banter" wishes Miss Schoen and Mr. Duggan a charming married life, which at least is one present they can't exchange.

"CYRANO DE BEGERAC" is again being enacted by Walter Hampden at the Hampden theater. And a more stirringly beautiful play is not to be found in New York. Nor a more marvelous piece of acting than Mr. Hampden's rendition of the title role. Of his supporting company, the least said is the kindest.

It does seem a shame, however, that the exquisite pathos of this play should be so blatantly imparied by the mortifying behavior of some of its cast. Some of those to whom the most important parts have been given, frisk about as though under the impression they were in a musical comedy. But not even the disheartening deportment of these talentless ones can mar the play itself—nor the masterly work of the Hampden.

In the earlier part of the season, it was Mr. Hampden, you know, who performed Hamlet, quaintly enough, in the same entangling robes which have always surrounded him. And in his earlier activities this year, Mr. Hampden had Miss Ethel Barrymore with him in whatever was going on. The two of them later did "The Merchant of Venice" with a great deal of success. And now temporarily shorn of Miss Barrymore, Mr. Hampden has reverted to his celebrated and adored "Cyrano."

The production is mounted in the most perfect taste. That memorable third-act balcony scene and the death scene in the last are perhaps the high spots of a blissful evening—an evening which not even the annoying antics of certain incompetents can spoil.

THERE chances to be in the cast of "Tip-Toes a divinely beautiful blonde girl who with a dark-haired one teaches Allen Kearns how to

Lives, Dances and Wil

The Young Persian Astral Dancer's Mystically Revealed Destiny and How She Will Fulfill It in New York

THE little Persian beauty, Valentina Kashouba, left her faraway home in Samarkandt and came halfway around the globe to dance on Broadway because, according to her divination of age-old eastern mysteries, that was just the destiny fixed for her by the position of certain stars that presided over her birth.

In addition to the usual tourists' maps, New York guide books and bilingual dictionary she has procured to simplify her new life in a strange land among people whose customs and language are so different from those she has hitherto known, Valentina cherishes a great sheet of drawing paper filled out with all kinds of cabalistic signs and notes of an Oriental astrologer—a Persian horoscope.

After she had at last registered at her hotel here, she hurried to send a cable to her parents in Samarkandt. It read: "Arrived well, waiting further instructions from my star. Valentina."

In the midst of materialistic New York, Valentina Kashouba is a unique figure. Her father, a guard officer, was long a disciple of the mystical teachings of the east, and her mother, a Persian princess, is a well-known theosophist and seeress in Camarkandt. At the age when most little American girls are beginning to read and write, little Valentina was already starting the study of astrology, magianism and esoteric philosophy, delving into the mighty wisdom of the Orient by which she now orders her life.

The night little Valentina was born, a hoary old Persian astrologer climbed into his turret to scan the heavens, and when the cry of the new born babe came to his ears, he cast her horoscope. Directly overhead shone brilliantly a tiny star in the constellation of the Scorpion, and that was Valentina's guiding star. By its juxtaposition to other astral bodies, in ascendancy or decline, the Persian magi read her strange destiny.

He predicted Valentina would dance and love ecstatically if she but followed astral guidance and obeyed implicitly the rules for her life set down in the infinite star pages of the sky. And so Valentina has lived. And so now that she has come to New York, she intends to dance. As for love, when the stars reveal that important message to her, so she will open her heart.

Before she herself was old enough to be initiated into the teachings of astrology, her mother always guided her little life, actually changing her foods and hours of play and sleep, according to astral instructions.

After her childhood in her native Persia, Valentina went to Moscow to study dancing and the drama, still keeping up her study of philosophy and astrology.

Feeling that her destiny lay in rhythmical expression, she soon became a noted pupil at the Russian art school in Moscow. The strange, mystical dances she evolved were something entirely new to her ballet masters. She soon had developed an entirely new dance.

This was her interpretation of the "rhythm of spheres." Many poets have written of this but the little starguaded Persian beauty is original in incorporating it in the dances which she is now introducing to New York.

Many outsiders have lived for years in the east, peering into the mystifying knowledge of occultism that the Persians have practiced since time immemorial, and have come away knowing no more about it than when they went. Will this little Persian maid be able to reveal anything of it in an atmosphere so vastly in contrast to that in which it was cradled?

"My life's mission lies in discovering and displaying new celestial rhythms of my body, rhythms that I acquire only from my astral knowledge and my astral inspiration," Mlle. Kashouba declares.

A pose from the "Dance of of Polaris," a star-inspired lesson Mlle. Kashouba would teach New York.

"But there is no place for your classical rhythmic expressions in New York, as our audiences prefer the new vaudeville dances," she was told.

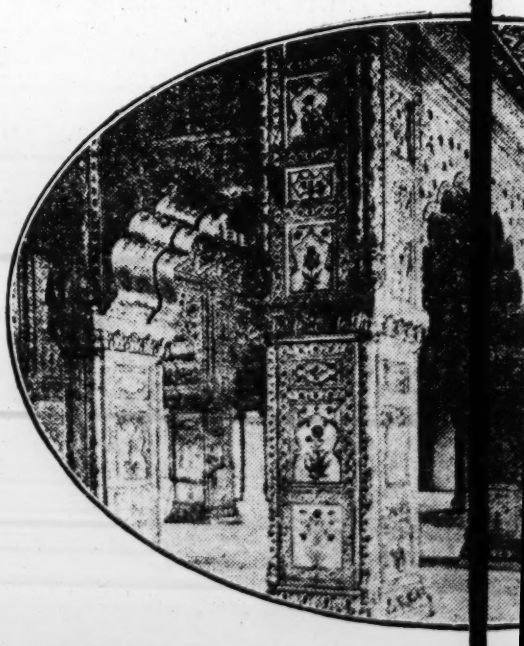

"Never, never shall I dance in a vaudeville," she exclaimed, and drew a picture resembling some interior of an ancient Greek or Chinese temple. 'I will dance only in a solemn atmosphere like this—an observatory, lecture hall, temple or, perhaps, something that I will build myself. But I will give performances to the New York audiences of new unknown celestial dances, dances which I see in my visions and hear in the sounds that come from the higher dimensions."

Mlle. Kashouba's immediate intention is to stage a series of astral dances and display them to the illuminated minds of the New World. Her idea is not to dance for money, she maintains, or even to dance for pleasure, as the usual dancers do; her aspiration is to dance her inspiration in the form of a serious lecture and message. For that reason she is considering a series of introductory demonstrations of her art, in which she will appear to New Yorkers as the Oriental story tellers appear to the travelers in the desert—give the performance free of charge to all those who are able to grasp its symbolic meaning, and remain indifferent to "what the public wants."

"I will dance spiritual phases of the human soul-life, phases of purely subjective nature," she explains. "I will dance agony, ecstasy, fear, wisdom, love, hatred—briefly, emotions in the most abstract forms to a music that a great Chinese savant wrote for me and which has to be played by Orientals.

"The sound of the music and the plastic motion of my body and mimicry must melt into one absolute chord of art which thrills and inspires, but does not amuse.

"Just as banal as the jazz and syncopated social dances of the New York stage and society are today, just as sacred and noble will be my dances."

The hall of ancient Khans in Samarkandt

l Love as Stars Direct

She has so far arranged seven dances. the first is dedicated to Polaris, the north star. In this she reveals much cosmic wisdom, rhythmical secrets that the stars in their orbits and the flaming meteors have disclosed to this little Persian.

The rhythm, it is said, has been exploited by the dancing dervishes and wandering yogis to hypnotize their onlookers and let them see all kinds of miracles. Miss Kashouba in this dance will use all her eastern mysticism and let her onlookers see falling blossoms from the sky—but only for a few moments.

Her second dance is the "Dance of the Sun," described as the display of vital emotions and the beating of the human heart. In this are passion, fire, joy and agony.

The third is the "Moon Dance," the dance of dreams and romances. It displays the human subconsciousness in its dormant phases, beginning with sleep and various hypnotic stages and winding up with the last calm of death.

The other four are on the same order.

Mlle. Kashouba intends to begin the career of her "plastomimic preachings" —that is what she calls her dances—on the roof of one of New York's buildings, so that it will be plainly visible to everybody who wishes to look on. Here she hopes, like the muezzins chanting their calls to the services of Allah on the tops of the mosques, to summon the people to think of the astral and the psychic phases of their existence and not be so much excited about the trifles of their daily affairs.

"I have come to this town of business and hurry," said Mlle. Kashouba, "not for money or applause, but to awaken the people from their hypnotized state of rush and push. I am not a dancer in the ordinary sense—I am not a missionary in my rhythmic art. I am going to dance science and art combined. I am here to fulfill my mission for which my star sent me."

Mlle. Kashouba says she firmly believes that just as her horoscope ordered her to come here and dance, it further directs her to disappear eventually just as mysteriously as she appeared.

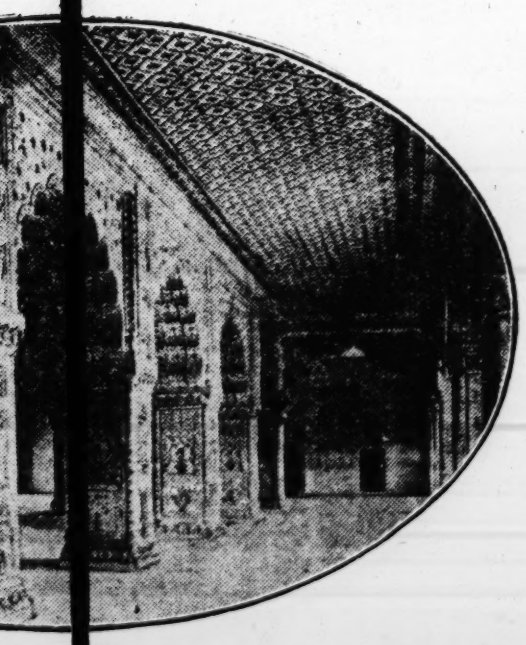

She has already danced in various ballets of Russia and the Diaghiloff ballet.

"When I left the ballet company and returned to my home in Samarkandt," she relates, "I did not know I was to come to America. Suddenly I realized that I must leave my home and follow my little star in the constellation of the Scorpion. My mother provided me with the required money and a ticket for a trip around the world, if necessary.

"Thus I traveled over to Constantinople, Venice, Paris, until I landed finally in New York, where my star points out my journey's end.

A fascinating photograph of Valentina Kashouba, the Persian star-dancer, revealing her strange serenity in eastern mysticism and astral philosophy

Samarkandt where Valentina danced as a child

"I have been traveling like one in a heavy trance, indifferent to everything except what the horoscope and my intuition would suggest.

"I even cannot explain yet how I came to this country, though I rather intended going to Mexico. But one day I found myself in New York, and my horoscope told me this was the very spot I should begin my missionary work of preaching a new philosophy by means of my rhythmic expression."

Bright lights may have lead many another young dancer to leave her home and come suddenly to New York —but not the bright lights of the stars in the sky. Bright lights and stars have long been a part of stage jargon, but in a far different way that Mlle. Kashouba has grown to understand them. Astrology is so deeply regarded by all Persians as to be almost a religion.

Mlle. Kashouba would even have a hard time finding another lightly tripping maiden in the great city that she has now come to who would know the Scorpion, the constellation which means so much to the little Persian, from a remote electric sign.

Valentina Kashouba danced as a child in the beautiful hall of the ancient Khans, where the great nomadic chieftains and the important civil officers gather in Samarkandt. She brought colorful Persian costumes with her from her faraway home.

Her dances are similar to the ancient temple dances, and the other distinctly Persian divertissements which have always held such a high place in the estimation of the connoisseurs of the dance. Pavlowa and her ballet, after a sojourn in Persia, brought variations of some of them to America.

This mysterious little daughter of the east grows so serious when she discusses her beloved astrology or dancing that her dark Oriental eyes often fill with crystalline tears. And when she dances her star-inspired "preaching" her friends declare she is veritably a hypnotizing eastern priestess.

What Has Happened to Justice?

Fanatical Love Spurred Him to Seek Revenge

Proverbial is the strength of mother love. Repeatedly has maternal affection caused women to fight and die and slay for their offspring. And yet just such a frenzied, fanatic sort of love seemed to drive a father into an insane murderous rage when Eugene Purdy lost the baby he worshiped.

It was this fighting, paternal love which transformed him from a quiet, religious, meek little man into the slayer of a fellow human. And it mattered not that the other man was wealthy and successful. Gene Pardy had lost his wife, his home, his happiness—and his baby. And therefore he took the law into his own hands and went looking for the despoiler with a shotgun. When he found him he pressed the trigger with a hand that was steady and unwavering.

And so three lives were wrecked.

Slain Man Planned Elopement In Motor-Palace

The land yacht in which Ernest Hutchinson, slain Tulsa lumberman, planned to elope with Mrs. Helen Purdy, divorced wife of his slayer, was a magnificent vehicle, with capacity for fourteen passengers. It was to have cost $10,000 and would have been magnificently equipped.

In this vehicle, witnesses say, Hutchinson planned to carry off Mrs. Purdy and her two children, first to Mexico and then possibly for a trip around the world. But Gene Purdy's shotgun put an end to the scheme.

A MEEK little man, with wild eyes, strolled casually into the office of the Tulsa county sheriff at Tulsa, Olka., on the morning of January 13 last year and calmly addressed the two deputies seated there.

"I've just killed a man up at Third and Boulder streets," said the meek little man.

Deputy Sheriff Ramey Miller sat up with a jerk. Then he thought he understood.

"Did you run over him?" he queried.

"No, I shot him," replied the quiet little man. "He broke up my home and stole my boy. I killed him."

Then Charles E. Purdy, church deacon and trusted oil firm employee, collapsed in front of the desk, as Deputy Jack Quast ran to pick him up. Meanwhile Miller telephoned for an ambulance and then started for the street corner the little man had mentioned.

There on the sidewalk, in the heart of the business district, they found the body of a man, his face literally blown away by the charge of a shotgun which had struck him squarely between the eyes. It lay in a little puddle of blood, beside an empty automobile.

Nobody had disturbed it. Not one of the many passersby had approached to investigate or give aid.

Important Victim.

The ambulance clanged up and a white-clad surgeon leaped out. One glance told him that the man was dead, and the authorities had another murder case on their hands. The importance of the victim made it a noteworthy one, even before the story of the sale of a wife, broken home and a father's almost fanatic love for his children united to give it color.

He was quickly identified as Ernest S. Hutchinson, wealthy Tulsa lumberman, president of the Hutchinson Lumber company, head of the local Retail Merchants' association and a financial power in the community. Everybody knew the Kansas farm boy who had worked his way through college and then come to Tulsa to become one of the richest men in that city of oil millionaires.

Gradually, as the gigantic cogwheels of justice began moving to bring his slayer to trial, the inside story of the killing became public—and a weirdly romantic tale it was.

* * * *

The age-old triangle: Helen Paul, Charles Eugene Purdy and Hutchinson—a beautiful woman, and two men, drawn on the wheel of fate with grim, stark tragedy in the background. But it began as a romance.

It was love that first brought Helen and Gene together; he a rising young employee of the Gilliland Oil company, and she a successful business girl and member of the local Y. W. C. A. board. She worked for Hutchinson as his private secretary and he looked at her and found her fair.

Charles E. Purdy and his two children

Enters Business.

There was an ardent courtship and love's young dream culminated in a marriage that promised well. Helen and Gene were married on June 8, 1921. Two beautiful boys came, Robert Eugene, 2 1-2 at the time of the killing, and Charles Edwin, 1 1-2. And Gene Purdy worshiped his babies with a fierce intensity that was almost maternal. All his acquaintances were impressed by it.

Purdy was prospering, but babies cost money, more money than he could afford, and the beautiful young mother decided to go back to business. She applied for and secured her old position with the Hutchinson Lumber company. And so the serpent entered Purdy's little bungalow Eden.

The storm broke in November of 1924, when Helen left Tulsa for her health. Her husband suspected something and followed her to Oklahoma City, where she told him she was going to visit friends.

He found her there, on the 9th day of November—found her in jail, with Ernest Hutchinson. They had been arrested in a West 13th street rooming house the night before and booked on a charge of disorderly conduct.

That blow killed Gene Purdy's happiness. But it did not kill his love for his wife. For her sake, he got them out of the trouble. He had them cleared and dismissed before Judge O. P. Estes in municipal court. Then they all went back to Tulsa.

It was here that the business deal, which the papers called the sale of his wife, entered the story. For $5,000 in cash and property estimated as worth $45,000 more, Gene Purdy signed an agreement not to prosecute Hutchinson for alienation of his wife's affections. It was so set down in the bond.

He declared that he still loved Helen, but he agreed to a divorce, four days after the third Mrs. Hutchinson had secured her freedom. It was very quietly arranged. Purdy simply went into court and testified that he didn't know where his wife was, and was granted a decree. The father was given custody of little Robert and the mother received that of baby Charles. The judge gave both parents permission to see each of the children.

Then Helen left for McAlester, Okla., and Gene went to live with his old mother, Mrs. Mollie Purdy, who resided at 519 South Cincinnati street, in Tulsa. With them lived his pretty 19-year-old sister, Josephine, employed at the Y. W. C. A.

But the father grieved ceaslessly for his baby. He didn't know where Helen was. He wanted to see Charles—and when he heard that Hutchinson was at McAlester, with Helen, something in his brain snapped. And the tragedy followed.

Purdy borrowed a shotgun. He was noted among his friends as a duck hunter and there was nothing strange in that. But he was out after larger game.

It was on the morning of January 13 that Hutchinson drove up to the Federal building in Tulsa, with two women in his car. They got out and went inside and the lumber man sat waiting for them. While he leaned across the wheel, a quiet little man, carrying a shotgun, came up and walked over to him.

It was Gene Purdy, bent on revenge.

Nearby stood L. W. Hirsch, an ice man. He heard the conversation.

"I've got you now," declared the meek little man, standing beside the car, and speaking in an ordinary, conversational tone.

"Yes, I guess you have," smiled Ernest Hutchinson, "but you haven't the nerve to shoot."

Hirsch ran then. But as he turned the corner he heard the roar of the shotgun. That was the story Tulsa read in its newspapers, and it had a strangely familiar sound. It wasn't the first time a desperate husband had pulled a gun on Ernest Hutchinson for trifling with his wife.

Tulsa remembered the story of Lloyd Mayo. Mayo had tried to shoot the lumber man in July of 1922. He was a young automobile mechanic, who said Hutchinson had stolen his wife, then employed as a stenographer in the lumber company's office.

E. S. Hutchinson, the murdered man

Mayo had said that, when his wife

No. 16—The Story of Chas. E. Purdy

left him, he went to Hutchinson's office to beg for her—and that the millionaire had beaten him up. As a result of the fight they filed suits against each other, but Hutchinson didn't fight Mayo's demand for $50,000. Instead, he settled out of court.

Helen came rushing back from McAlester, where she had been the guest of a minister, and defended her own name with fire and vigor.

Defends Name.

She insisted that there had been nothing wrong between her and the dead man. She had loved him. She had been engaged to marry him. She had a right to wed him, because she was divorced and a free woman—and she declared with almost frenzied vigor that there had been nothing to criticize in her relations with her fiance, even on the Oklahoma City trip.

Tulsa put its tongue in its cheek and smiled at that—until a voice almost from the dead rose to vindicate her honor. When it read the letters of Hutchinson, thanking her for repulsing him on that occasion, Tulsa changed its mind.

* * * * *

Helen did not see her former husband, but the following day friends took Charles to the cell and there was a touching scene. The almost frenzied devotion of the father to his baby was exemplified in the way he hugged and kissed the baby, who played contentedly in the barred cubicle.

Helen arrived in Tulsa just in time for Hutchinson's funeral. When they told her that they had found a bundle of her letters on the dead man's body, soaked in his blood, and that they were full of affectionate terms, Helen Purdy flashed back at the reporters:

"Certainly a woman has a right to use endearing terms in writing to her fiance without the least impropriety. Remember, we were to have been married within a week."

The day after the funeral Hutchinson's will was made public. Half the estate he had left to Helen and named her executrix. In her public statements she was very loyal to her slain fiance, but refrained from criticizing Purdy.

District Judge W. R. Williams refused Purdy bail on a write of habeas corpus. At this hearing the state introduced eight letters taken from Helen at the time of the Oklahoma City arrest. They were all very ardent in nature and each was signed "Ernest."

The trial was set for March 29. The case for the state was in the hands of County Attorney Byron Kirkpatrick, who was assisted by his predecessor, John M. Goldsberry, as a special prosecutor. The prosecution was aided in every possible way by L. L. Hutchinson, brother of the slain man.

Purdy was represented by George Reeves, who had been his attorney throughout the divorce action and other events leading up to the murder. Reeves was assisted by Flint Moss, perhaps Tulsa's most noted criminal lawyer, and it was evident from the beginning that their case would be based on an insanity defense.

The state was expected to stress what it called the $50,000 wife-sale, maintaining that the contract Purdy had entered into reacted against him. The paper was introduced in court.

Having proved the facts attendant on the murder, the state closed suddenly on April 3. Then the defense began the long drawn out presentation of its case.

One day the Oklahoma City raid occupied the center of the stage. A private detective painted a graphic word picture of Purdy pacing distractedly up and down the street, outside the rooming house, where he arrived just as the police were raiding the place.

He testified that all the lights except one were soon extinguished and that the raid was staged about midnight. He said that when Gene met Helen he was very tender and affectionate toward her, even when she told him, frankly and plainly: "I love Mr. Hutchinson."

Next day the defense introduced some of the letters taken from the slain man's body. They were still stained with his blood, and were tender, loving missives, breathing devotion. A typical one dated January 12, the day before the killing, read:

"When I think that perhaps a week from tonight will see us one, it gives me a very happy feeling, sweetheart, very happy." There was nothing salacious in these missives.

Mrs. Purdy had insisted all along that her relations with Hutchinson had been platonic, and one of his letters was introduced, in which he told her that she had repulsed him and he was glad of it.

Mrs. Charles E. Purdy, over whom the killing occurred.

The next day began the real battle of the defense,. Vice President J. H. Maxey, of the Gilliland Oil company, who stood by Purdy from the beginning, took the stand and declared that in his opinion "Purdy was not sane for thirty days before the murder."

Purdy's secretary, Mrs. Phyllis Johnson, said that she had thought him insane for a month before the killing. Then came President Patrick J. Hurley, of the Gilliland company, describing how Purdy came to see him the Saturday before the killing.

"He told me a settlement had been made with Hutchinson and that Hutchinson had then stolen his baby," testified Hurley. "He wept and I had the feeling that he was deranged."

An unexpected sensation resulted when Helen's mother, Mrs. Tessie Lester, a remarkably good looking woman, took the stand for her son-in-law, on April 7. She declared that Hutchinson and his attorney, Wash Hudson, had plotted to send Purdy to the penitentiary for tapping wires, on perjured testimony. She said they asked her to swear to this story.

The plan was for Hutchinson to then take Helen and both children and flee to Canada by plane, according to Mrs. Lester. He feared the Ku Klux Klan and was also afraid that Purdy might kill him—and at times even kept Helen under lock and key, "away from her own mother."

Mrs. Lester characterized Purdy as "the finest, most clean-minded man I have ever seen."

The insanity theory was backed up the next day by Dr. F. H. Brown, of Billings, Mont. "Purdy suffered from psycholo-neurosis when I examined him during the war," he said. "All his family was neurotic."

Mrs. Lester was recalled to the stand for cross-examination and admitted that Hutchinson had told her, after the Oklahoma City episode:

"Gene's lawyers are trying to break me. They want $50,000 and some real estate."

Motor Love Nest.

The defense promptly countered introducing the contract, providing that Purdy received only $5,000 in cash and some real estate.

The next witness was Josephine, Purdy's girl sister, who broke down and wept convulsively as she told how "Gene tried to read, but he never could. He tried hard to conceal his nervousness from mother and me." His mother wept quietly at the end of the table as Josephine testified.

Then the slayer himself took the stand and told his story.

"I don't think any couple was ever more supremely happy than we were," he said. Then his voice broke. In July of 1924 she went to work for Hutchinson. He then told how four months later she went for a drive in the country with her husband. "That morning she told me she didn't love me any more," wailed the husband.

Next day the defense introduced the plans of a motor palace love nest, which was to be prepared for the elopement of Hutchinson and Helen. He said Purdy had found it in her Oklahoma City apartment in November. It was a veritable land yacht, with a fourteen-passenger capacity. C. V. Reeser said Hutchinson planned to tour Mexico and perhaps the world in the vehicle, with Helen.

However, testimony opposed to the insanity plea was offered by Dr. D. W. Griffin, superintendent of the state insane asylum at Norman, and Dr. F. M. Adams, in charge of the similar institution at Vinita. They both declared their belief that Purdy was sane.

The case went to the jury at 7:59 p. m. The verdict was not announced until 8:30 the next morning. A large crowd waited, and Purdy leaned forward anxiously as the foreman rose. He spoke two words:

"Not guilty."

Purdy fell forward, sobbing convulsively.

Next day President Hurley offered Purdy a vacation, which Gene promptly refused, explaining that he was anxious to get back to work.

He returned to his position and his divorced wife, soon after, went to Kansas City. She made an agreement with Purdy, on July 13, whereby he was to have custody of Baby Charles for six months out of each year.

Meanwhile Hutchinson's other heirs were contesting his will, and Helen finally effected a compromise on September 17, by which she received $20,000.

in the upper brackets, it will be something less, so you may go away on your chauffeuring job knowing that you will not have to depend entirely upon your weekly pay."

After a casual glance at the array of figures on the sheet, Rasher handed it back. His interests lay in other directions.

"Now don't forget," he said seriously. "Hereafter—for the present at least—I am Rasher. Don't intimate to any one that Bacon is back. If you have occasion to write to me, use cheap stationery and bad writing on the envelopes, and be careful not to say anything in the letters that might give a clew to my real name or anything."

"Certainly, I understand. Just like the other time." Mr. McFall continued to beam upon this strange young man. "Ah, it's great to be young and to have the spirit of adventure," he sighed. "Most young men in your position would be out burning up the money in yachts and country houses and racing stables and alimony and such, with a few scandals on the side."

"Every fellow to his taste," said Rasher. "I can have more fun in my way. And now," he added, laughing, "where do I get a chauffeur's uniform? I may be leaving in a day or two. I have given Mr. Crayton your telephone number. If a message comes, send it at once to my hotel. I'll keep you posted as to my movements so you can always locate me."

After he had left Mr. McFall sat for a long time staring out of the window to where, in the river seen between the towering skyscrapers, ships and tugs and ferries were weaving to and fro. Some were the little stay-at-homes, others were clearing for China, Java Head, Maracaibo, Madagascar! His eyes were wistful, for there still lingered within him some of the longings and restlessness of youth. At last he sighed, frowned slightly, and turned to his desk again.

Often in the course of the day he found that his thoughts were wandering from the affairs at hand to the young man, heir to the vast Livingston estate, who was now out buying a chauffeur's uniform and preparing the way for the fascinating double life he was planning to lead. He was faring forth to save the beautiful princess from the ogre, like a knight of old.

Objections Urged Against Divine Fatherhood.

Rev. W. P. King

I.

IN continuance of the objections urged against the fatherly love of God, much emphasis has been given to the objections which arise from the natural evil of suffering in the world. A fresh outbreak of infidelity follows in the wake of great calamities, whether in the form of earthquakes, cyclones or a destructive war, or the wide scourge of a pestilence.

J. S. Mills made a famous arraignment of nature: "Nature impales men, breaks them as if on the wheel, casts them to be devoured by wild beasts, crushes them with staves like the first Christian martyr, burns them to death, starves them with hunger, freezes them with cold, poisons them by the quick or slow venom of her exhalations, and has hundreds of other hideous deaths in reserve, such as the ingenious cruelty of a Nero or a Dominitian never surpassed."

The dilemma is set forth that either God is limited in power or limited in goodness. We are reminded of the universal sway of physical pain and mental anguish, of the suffering not only of the guilty, but in many instances the keener suffering of the innocent, the suffering as a result of evil heredity, and the suffering which form our social solidarity.

John Fiske writes: "Is not then that method of nature, which achieves progress only through misery and death an exceedingly brutal and clumsy method? Life, one would think, must be dear to the everlasting giver of life, yet how cheap it seems to be held in the general scheme of things."

This distinguished writer suggests a consideration which looks toward a solution of the problem: "As we recognize in the universal strife and slaughter a stern discipline through which the standard of animate existence is raised and the life of creatures variously enriched, we become to some extent reconciled to the facts."

There is the further consideration that when we imagine that the Creator had created a situation entirely opposite to things as they are, we are plunged into deeper and darker difficulties. A vast amount of suffering springs from evil heredity, but the only alternative would have been a strict individuality of life in which each human being would be a distinct and separate creation. This would deprive us of the advantage of good heredity and all the love and tender ties of kinship and family relationship.

There is the large sum of misery which springs from our social solidarity and contacts. But when we try to imagine a complete isolation and separation, we see the loss that would come from being deprived of all the helpful influences which enable some lives to exercise an ennobling ministry on other lives. Again, if humanity were protected from disease that follows a violation of the laws of nature, the human race would remain in infantile ignorance and weakness and the marvelous conquest of medical science over diseases would have been a heroic chapter omitted from the annals of human progress.

A final consideration which throws light on the problem of human suffering is seen in the fact that human character only progresses toward the goal of perfection through severe trials and bitter disappointments. If character is the summon bonum of human life rather than comfort, we are to be reconciled to the discipline which brings us through great tribulation. Suffering is educative. "Our light affliction which is but for a moment worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

"Then welcome each rebuff,
That turns earth's smoothness rough,
Each sting that bids not sit nor stand
but go,
Be our joys three-parts pain!
Strive and hold cheap the strain,
Learn nor account the pang; dare, never grudge the throe."

II.

A final objection against the fatherly love of God is that which results from sin and moral evil in the world. The evil that is beset by the deepest perplexity and darkest mystery is not natural but moral evil. It is not true that all suffering is the result of sin. It is true that if all the suffering which sin causes were removed the burden of human woe would be immeasurably lightened.

There are those who criticize the world, with an expression of regret that they were not called into consultation, since they could have offered valuable suggestions touching the method of God in the world.

Why should it be possible that the sin of one villain should cause such widespread suffering from so many interconnected lives?

To revert to a former illustration, you can only imagine another alternative, and you cannot really imagine that, in which human lives are marked by separateness and isolation. And in a world where there would be no possibility of man's sin enhancing the misery of the world, there would likewise be no possibility of men's goodness enhancing the happiness of the world. A world in which each person would be a Robinson Crusoe without even his man Friday is not a world that makes an attractive appeal.

Since the sin of man brings to him wretchedness, and on account of social contacts, inflicts suffering upon the innocent, then why does God allow men to sin?

We find this familiar dilemma: Either he would have prevented it but would not; or he would have prevented it but could not.

If we accept the first, we must conclude that God is a being of imperfect goodness, if we accept the second the conclusion must be that he is a being of imperfect power.

I see nothing whatever derogatory to the nature of God in freely admitting a limitation of his power, call it if you will a self limitation. God cannot do the impossible and the contradictory. Then why does God allow men to sin? Because God could not help it. God could not give to men freedom of will, the innate power of choosing between two ways, and at the same time prevent man's choice of evil. Since this is true, then why did God give to man that freedom with its perilous possibilities?

There could have been no other way of making a man. There is no possibility of sainthood without the possibility of sin. We can conceive of God making a machine in human form, but such a creation would not have been man.

Amid the devastating effects of sin in our world, we can discern the working of fatherly love, overruling by His power and providence, and making the wrath of men to praise, and bringing good out of evil.

Again, against the dark background of sin we see the cross of love, and man's sin occasioned the manifestation of God's love with a clearness and certainty that could not otherwise have been possible. "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound."

"Oh yet we trust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of ill,
To pangs of nature, sins of will
Defects of doubt, and taints of blood;
That nothing walks with aimless feet;
That not one life should be destroyed,
Or cast as rubbish to the void
When God hath made the pile complete."

Since "we are members one of another," there are four factors which make for all of our happiness and all of our misery; physical law, progress, free-will, and social fellowship. But without these factors, there could be no possibility of the development of character.

In brief, there could be no attainment of character and happiness without the other possibility of degredation and misery.

Sunday Health Talks

Noted Physician and Author

Time to Sort Doctors.

PEOPLE often ask how they can tell whether a given physician or specialist is reputable and competent. For instance, how may a stranger select a good doctor and avoid falling into the hands of the ubiquitious quack or faker.

This is a more serious matter today than it has ever been before, because our population shifts more now than ever before and the comparative stranger in need of medical service is too numerous and important to be dismissed from consideration today.

Although some chambers of commerce and business men's associations recognize the practice of medicine as an industry or something, at least to the extent of granting membership to an occasional doctor, these commercial organizations do not, so far as I know, set any standard of qualification for membership, except personal or social acquaintance, and they ignore the whole question of professional probity by granting membership also to prosperous quacks and the most blatant fakers in the business. Worse, in some instances they permit such charlatans to exploit their membership in separating gullible folk from their money. The organizations of business men are therefore of no assistance to the stranger in quest of a doctor. They should be the logical bureaus for him to consult for guidance. If these business organizations did not admit physicians to membership one could scarcely reproach them for this failure in a public service.

The doctors themselves as represented in their medical organizations certainly owe an apology to the public for this deplorable situation. Just how far backward the regular profession leans in its absurd and stilted adherence to the letter (not necessarily the spirit) of medical ethics and obsolete customs, it is difficult to perceive unless you have had much to do with doctors.

In my work I have occasion to advise readers about the standing or qualification of physicians throughout the country, as I receive many such requests every day. In cities where I do not happen to know who is who in medicine and the various specialties I procure the information from the best source I know of, the medical organization. Does the organized medical body provide such information freely, even for me? No. I have to pay for the information or do without it. This fairly represents the narrow, blind, unprogressive policy of the regular medical profession today. I sincerely believe the profession owes the lay public an apology for this attitude.

Even in the lists of physicians and specialists compiled by the organized medical profession the same spirit of ponderous lordosis is in evidence. The bureaucratic medical organization is slower to start than the most reactionary old fossil in it. I refer to the American Medical association, of which I am a fellow or member—yet. The bureaucrats in this organization arbitrarily "recognize" certain specialties and only certain old-established specialties, and they as arbitrarily refuse to recognize certain modern specialties which are at least as respectable and as legitimate in every way as are any of the specialties the bureaucrats recognize. The effect of this abuse is that there is no official or universally dependable source to which one may turn to seek information about a heart specialist, let us say, or a stomach specialist, or a plastic surgeon, or a specialist in hygiene, for these are modern specialties and therefore unrecognized. If a doctor be a stomach specialist in real earnest, limiting his practice to the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the stomach or even diseases of the digestive organs, the great medical organization knows him not and declines to accredit him in that specialty. The doctor has no choice in the matter; he may be listed as a general practitioner or as an "internist."

"Internist" is an alleged specialist who devotes his attention to internal troubles—thus clearly distinguishing himself from the mere skin specialist who devotes his attention mainly to external troubles. That the medical organization designates this indefinite field of practice as a specialty is a compliment to the influence and power wielded by a few all-around "specialists" over the bureaucrats in the organization. A good many beneficiaries of this ridiculous arrangement engage in general practice, not excluding the treatment of skin diseases, and also enjoy the fruits of such prestige as they get from being called "specialists."

Well, our friends often say we doctors are queer, and I suspect they may be right about it.

There is just one little test of a doctor's fitness which an occasional patron may find useful. Try him on a periodic health examination. If he shies off, laughs at you, questions the need of it or voices some half-baked opinion against the wisdom of such examinations of the healthy, cancel him and look up a doctor who belongs in the present century.

Not me, however. I belong in the twenty-first century and persons in search of a doctor or specialist will not find me in my office until the twenty-first century gets here.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Calcium in Water.

When the water contains so much lime is it best to use it without boiling it? The spout of the tea kettle becomes so encrusted with lime that only a thin stream of water can be poured. I found it difficult to scrape out, so I boiled slowly a quart of vinegar in the tea-kettle for an hour, then poured the vinegar off and found I could scrape considerable of the lime out. By repeating the process (with the same vinegar) I have finally made my tea-kettle almost as clear of lime as when new. (Mrs. C. H. R.)

himself. "That's the American consul."

"He has nice teeth," remarked Sid, after a moment.

"The consul?" demanded Hal incredulously.

She caught her lower lip characteristically under a penitent tooth. "O—I forgot we weren't still talking about the major——"

"Sid—you're not falling for him, are you?"

"Don't be silly," she reassured him. "Just because I noticed he had a nice mouth."

"He certainly noticed yours."

"Yes," admitted Sid and there was something elaborate about her guilelessness, "didn't he?"

"You know, Sid," Hal leaned across the table earnestly, "he seems like a nice enough chap—and his family is one of the best down here—nobility, I believe. But I wouldn't like to see you get mixed up seriously with any Cuban. They look at things differently."

"I thought," said Sid, her eyes inscrutable, "that you were his friend—a sort of ally."

Hal denied it. "He said he'd like to take you around and show you the town, and I thought it might be nice for you. I couldn't see any reason for refusing. But after all, he's just a stranger. And you know what I think of you, Sid."

Did she? She wondered. . . .

The major took them to dine on the roof of an old Spanish hotel, and thence to a fashionable dancing place. Hal had had enough dancing, the night before, to last him. Besides, it was too warm. "But you two go ahead. I like to watch."

The major apologized for his dancing, for it appeared when he felt her lithe body within his arms, he had difficulty thinking of the steps. And the perfume in her hair bewildered him. What was the name of it? And might he send her a bottle so that daily she might be reminded of that unfortunate major whose every breath was fraught with the perfume of her exquisite being?

"Come on, dance with me," interrupted Hal, who appeared to have changed his mind. And when they were out on the floor, "I wouldn't let him buy me things if I were you," he suggested.

"But there's no harm in perfume, is there?"

"N-no, but I wouldn't begin. If you want perfume I'll send my secretary out and get you all you want. That stuff's awfully cheap down here."

She managed to control the smile which dimpled the corners of her mouth, but not the echoes which rippled to the placid surface of her eyes.

They moved to a noisier resort in the heart of the town, where Sid danced the Danzon with the major. When Hal had her in his arms again he commented, "You really are an awfully good dancer, Sid. I always could dance with you better than any other girl."

"Thank you." She moved, if possible, a shade closer so that the yellow roses were flattened mercilessly against his coat.

"Yes," he went on, "I think it's because you have such long legs. Nobody'd believe you'd never done the Danzon before."

"Oh, but I have!" She felt rather than saw his expression. "There was a tea dance at the hotel this afternoon, and the major came over and taught me."

There was a little silence and then Hal said, a slight tightness about the edges of his voice, "Oh! You didn't tell me."

"It didn't seem important. Besides, I thought you'd realize he must have seen me to know just the right kind of flowers for this dress."

He stopped dancing. It was too warm. The major, who thought of everything, drew from his pocket a long leather case in which reposed a black lace fan, twinkling with tiny gold spangles between delicate, tortoise shell arms.

Sid looked at it longingly before putting it back in the box. "I told you," she said firmly, "you were not to buy me a fan."

"Your wiss is my commandment, no?" protested the major, his hand on his heart. "I have no buy. He have been in my family much years. My mother is send to beautiful stranger-r with his compliment, no?"

How could Sid refuse a fan which the major's mother had sent to her with his compliment? Hal fingered the box skeptically.

"Your mother must take very good care of her things," he said with a queer expression for a man paying so gracious a compliment. "Why, even the label on the box looks like new."

But the major had lost interest in the fan, now that it had passed out of his family, and turning solicitiously to Sid, "Are you very well here," he inquired, "or you prefer to go other-r place, no?"

"It's rather warm here," suggested Sid, looking at Hal.

"How you like to make a walk in automobile?"

Hal looked at his watch, whereupon Sid proposed, "Why not let us drop you and I'll take a ride with the major——?"

"Call me Arturo," pleaded the latter.

Hal went along in spite of the lateness of the hour. They rode out into the country, Sid sitting between the two men, and, on the way back, stopped at a roadhouse where a roulette wheel accounted for a long line of waiting cars. The major plunged at once into a winning streak. It took their combined persuasion to make him consent to let them depart and send his car back for him.

Sid snuggled close to Hal, who put his arm about her.

"He's certainly lucky at cards," she commented of their host.

"A pretty slick worker at everything," Hal thought.

"Why, Hal! I thought you liked the major!"

"I did—I do . . . but there's no need to go into transports, is there? As a matter of fact, I should think you'd be a little fed up on transports."

Sid said nothing. But later she asked, "Hal, do I say this right?" And slowly, like a carefully conned lesson, she repeated, "Mija de los dioses, que et amo!"

"Where'd you get that?" he demanded, sitting up abruptly.

"I'm teaching the major English and he's teaching me Spanish. We got on awfully well for one afternoon.."

Hal grunted. "I'll say you did."

"I don't know what this one means, either," she went on and enunciated painstakingly, "Que dulces deben ser tus besos."

"Look here, Sid, I wouldn't have him saying that sort of thing if I were you."

"But how can I stop him if I don't know what it means?"

"I don't think you're very anxious to stop him," said Hal, and lapsed into silence. But it was ridiculous, of course, for Sid to keep thinking he was annoyed about anything. To prove he was not he dropped his arm once more, and she rode home snugly within its curve.

The major's plans for Thursday included a trip to the beach, because Sid was fond of swimming, and he confessed a desire to spend an afternoon with her, lying in the sand. Hal, reconsidering, decided to take the afternoon off, too.

The major, happening to leave his office early, encountered Hal (who also happened to have left early) and suggested they take Alma on a little shopping tour, to see the shawls which had so captivated her the day before.

In the shop he persisted in demanding the particular shawl which had caught her fancy. And finally the shopkeeper brought it out—the yellow one, all weighted down with red roses and heavy golden fringe. Sid could not resist a little ecstatic gasp. It was more than merely an unbelievably lovely shawl. There was between her and it a sort of affinity.

But, unfortunately, the price was fabulous. Even after Hal had bargained with Spanish fluency and Yankee tenacity, it was quite out of the question. And so she had to content herself with buying some perfume and a fan for Aunt Hilda.

They lunched at the Telegrafo, where Sid discovered that Morro crabs were the most delicious shell food in the world. The major insisted on ordering a bottle of sparkling wine to celebrate his saint's day. And for once Hal had a noble sacrifice of his principles. It was quite a jolly lunch until the major remarked that his mother had a shawl which had been in the family many years—a yellow shawl with red roses—very similar, in fact, to the one——

"I hope you aren't thinking of depriving your mother, Major Diago," interrupted Hal, gripping the slender stem of his glass.

The major assured him his mother never used the shawl.

"Nevertheless," Hal regarded with narrowed lids the liquid in his glass, "I believe Miss Sidney's heart was set on the particular shawl in the shop, and women usually get what their hearts are set on." He drained his glass deliberately before replacing it on the table. "I don't think any girl would want two yellow shawls, do you, major, honestly?"

The major realized that if Miss Sidney were to have the shawl in the shop she would have little use for the one which belonged to his mother.

Sid kept her eyes on her plate. She could not trust herself to raise them. Things inside her were a bit swimmy.

She felt very reckless driving to the beach between the two of them, openly holding a hand of each. The major sighed that he would give half his life to have that ride go on forever. To which Hal suggested that sparkling Burgundy had a tendency to make one a little giddy.

"Si, estoy borracho," agreed the major. "I am dronk, no? But no with wine." And he took from Sid's lap a little square of yellow which matched her knitted sport dress, and inhaled it ecstatically.

"You have receive the perfume, no?" he asked, and Hal, who had forgotten to send out his secretary, bit his lip. The major pocketed the handkerchief. "I steal this, no? But I eschange you something." And, taking from his collar his judge advocate's insignia, he fastened it through the flap of her tan felt hat, an operation which made it necessary for her to lean towards him. While it was in progress Hal watched the scenery, one corner of his mouth drawn in.

The men on the beach stared approvingly at Sid's purple one-piece suit. The major resented it.

"I am jaloos," he confided, "that other mans shall even look on you, no?"

Hal plunged into the ocean and Sid followed, picking her way carefully over the stones which cut her bare

POEMS OF THE CONFEDERACY

MRS. C. A. DANNELLY.

Mrs. C. A. Dannelly, who wrote under the pen name of "Cachus," was a native of Georgia. She graduated from college in 1856. She was with her husband, who was a Confederate surgeon, during a part of the time of his service in the army and was present when Columbia, S. C., was destroyed by the federal forces. She afterwards published in pamphlet form an account of the destruction of the city.

THE CONFEDERATE DEAD.

A simple board of rough ill-shapen pine,
O'errun, perchance, by some tenacious vine,
Placed by some friendly hand above each head
Is all that marks our brave Confederate dead.

No epitaph, rare now and then "Unknown,"
Carved rudely on some unpretending stone.
No towering shaft, with flattering words inlaid,
Casts o'er our slain its proud, imperial shade.

But can the skilled hand of polished Art
To worth unsullied one more charm impart,
Beneath to hallowed dust a sweeter rest,
Or make their names more honord or more blest?

Though monumental stone should never rise,
To tell the world where fallen valor lies,
Each heart erects its own immortal shrine,
And there inscribes him attributes divine.

One need no piles of sculptured marble gray
To tell us where the Southern soldier lay;
For roses cluster o'er his grassy bed,
And round the spot their sweetest fragrance shed.

Embedded there by woman's virtuous hand
Sweet emblem of our own bright, sunny land,
Cloud flowers fair for better purpose bloom
Than to adorn the southern soldiers' tomb?

Brave hearts of a lost, but sacred cause,
Though now withheld their well-deserved applause,
Imperial history must, in time, grow cold—
Their virtues and their deeds will yet be told.

Poets will linger on the blood-dyed plains
And chant above our lost, their sweetest strains;
Confederate dead will yet survive in song,
Nor shall their glorious deeds be hidden long.

Fair daughters of our balmy clime will bring
Their floral offerings with each coming spring,
Entwine a wreath around each humble grave,
A loving tribute to our sleeping brave.

Though in the struggle triumph crowned the throng,
'Tis not to strength that honor should belong;
He most deserves it who most nobly gave
His life, his all, his country's rights to save.

Their cause was noble and their deeds sublime,
Their just reward is held in trust by time;
She must and will, at least, bestow the prize
For worth immortal never, never dies.

BARRACUDA : A Blue Ribbon Serial : By Will Payne

INSTALLMENT XII.

HE WAS about to interrupt, but she waved him aside. "Just wait a minute. The truth is, something's happened to Billy. He came down here to get some papers. I supposed he'd left town with them Saturday morning—until Lou came down to the house Sunday to tell me his suitcase was still in his room at the hotel. I can't imagine why he should have left it here, unless he recognized somebody here; saw that somebody was after him and those papers, and left his suitcase to throw them off the track. I've thought of that. It might have happened. Those papers might be worth a great deal of money to somebody. Somebody might be ready to pay a fortune for them. And if you're ready to pay a fortune in New York you can get men to do anything. Has there been any stranger around here—anybody that seemed interested in us or in Billy?"

Of course, there had been such a stranger. In his attitude of guilt before her he made a cautious confession: "Yes, there has been such a man."

Presumably he ought to tell her nothing. But here again was the confusing fact that his villain was such an attractive person, and he felt enormously guilty before her; so he answered plumply, "He was down at your house with Lem White as an electrician to do some repairing—freckled man with prominent eyes."

SHE remembered the incident: "O, that man. Selma thought Lem White was too inquisitive about the house. I remember the man he brought down. I'd never seen him before, but that doesn't matter. He must have been set on the trail all the same." She thought it over a moment: "He knew this brief case was in your uncle's bank?"

Latham cast back in his memory, such a question not having occurred to him before, and replied, "He may have known it. The landlord at the hotel saw Miss Sheldon and the young man carry the brief case over to the bank and hand it to my uncle. This was on Friday afternoon, you know—almost as soon they got to town; before they went sailing." He considered a moment. "Of course, if Donahue, the man we're speaking about, was interested in that brief case and questioned the landlord any time Friday evening or Saturday, the landlord would have told him about its going over to the bank. Any child could draw the landlord out in a case of that kind. So he may have known that the brief case was in the bank."

With conviction she replied, "Then he killed your uncle, doctor. He wanted those papers. He may have been offered a lot of money to get them. He may have expected to get a million in blackmail out of them. He killed your uncle." A line came in her forehead and her earnest voice appealed: "I'm awfully afraid for poor Billy, too." A momentary agitation discomposed her.

"He was too careless! He did put the brief case in the bank for safe keeping, but he should have looked out more for himself. You see, Lou left him alone in the boat at the dock after ten o'clock—everything shut up and still in town. She hurried to the car and drove away, anxious to get home. Nobody's seen Billy since. This man may have been laying for him—supposing he had the brief case with him. They'd borrowed an old valise at the hotel. This man may have seen that—thought the papers were in it."

Something of her excitement subtly communicated itself to Latham, and he remembered what had happened. "Donahue did see them going to the dock, with some wraps and that valise," he said. "He told me so himself. You see, it was Donahue who drove that car into the woods—the one that was stalled on the road. He walked back to town. He saw them going to the boat; he told me so himself."

Startled, but competent, Mrs. Snyder thought this over, her brown eyes shining with excitement. After a moment she exclaimed, "That explains it, then! This man came into town and saw them going to the boat. He thought Billy had the papers with him, and laid for him. First, probably, he went through Billy's things in his room at the hotel; but the papers weren't there. Then he thought Billy had the papers with him, and laid for him at the dock. But the papers weren't there, either. This would be ten o'clock Friday night. Saturday he found out the papers were in the bank. He killed your uncle to get them."

Latham had followed her along, carried on by her agitation and air of conviction. But here was a stone wall. He waited an instant and shook his head. "But he's right here now, Mrs. Snyder. You say he killed my uncle to get valuable papers that were in the bank. Then he must have got those papers. The bank was ransacked and the brief case was gone. That would have been some time Saturday night. This is Tuesday afternoon and he's still here. Why would he be hanging around? He could have left town any time without exciting suspicion; nobody was thinking of him. Why does he hang around, taking reckless chances? The papers are valuable in New York, not here. Why wouldn't he have left for New York long ago?"

That evidently confused her. "I didn't know he was still here."

"I saw him this morning. Surely, on your theory, he would have left with the papers long before. If he's guilty, every moment he stays here must be a risk; something might turn up to disclose him."

She put a finger to her lip, regarding him abstractly, obviously at a loss. Finally she repeated, "He killed your uncle," but there was less conviction in it. Her thoughts wandered from that subject; her eyes came back to the doctor's face.

"I don't know why I should still like you, but I do," she observed. Her grave air and the circumstances of the case gave this confession a singularly candid sound. Her bosom swelled with an unmuttered sigh. "I'm single handed now. Do you know where my husband is?"

"No," he answered truthfully.

She went on with complete candor, "He drinks sometimes. I told the sheriff it was a toothache, but it's drink. It's his disease. He started drinking Saturday night after he thought the affair of the papers was all ended. That's why Lou came to town Sunday morning." Something evidently recurred to her. "The day you came up to our house, when the stingray bit her, you heard her talking to him through the window. She was begging him not to take a drink. It's a disease—a fit now and then. Sometimes I can help, and sometimes not. It disgusts most people. They say 'Pig' and turn their backs. It disgusts Lou. She can't stand it, and I don't want her to. It doesn't disgust me any more. I'm just sorry. I'll always do what I can. I'm telling you a lot, doctor. I like you and I'm terribly lonesome now. There's nothing anybody can do for him till the fit wears off—four or five days—maybe a week. He'll shut himself up somewhere. Keep watch, will you, and let me know?"

She left him in a deep emotional stir of sympathy and admiration—and loyalty to her, at least as far as trying to find her husband and stepsister went.

Might Snyder have gone over to Crab Island? The doctor went down to Cap Dolliver's aquatic livery. The amphibious captain himself had gone home to supper and Bud was leaving. But the stripling at once recalled having rowed a man over to Crab Island about seven o'clock Sunday evening—a smooth shaven stranger in a brown suit with shirt, collar, and tie almost the same color and shiny brown shoes. That was Snyder. He had asked to be left at the little dock on the island, giving Bud a dollar and telling him to row home.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

The World's Greatest Pictures

"THE ANNUNCIATION" :-: :-: :-: By Fra Angelico

This is the ninth of a series of 52 Greatest Paintings, which represent the choice of the Art Directors and Connoisseurs throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotagravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY

Again we have the adorable, angelic faces which Fra Angelico loved to paint. "The Annunciation" hangs in the Museum of San Marco in Florence, Italy. It is not many feet away from his other great masterpiece, "The Resurrection," which appeared in this paper on Easter Sunday. "The Annunciation" is better known, and for this reason, perhaps, is generally regarded as his greatest painting. The picture, facing the entrance to the corridor on the upper floor, measures seven feet, four inches high by nine feet, nine inches long. The figures are a little more than half the size of life.

In "The Annunciation," he shows the Virgin, seated on a rough wooden stool, among the columns which support the cloister. Her arms are folded as if to prepare herself to bear the news she seems to be expecting. Suddenly a messenger of the Lord appears before her. She gazes longingly into his eyes as he delivers the divine message. The wings, delicately designed, glow with various colors. The hands are gently folded, and the messenger is in the act of kneeling in respect to the chosen one of God. The little grassy plot just outside the cloister is spotted with daisies, and separated from the tall cypress trees by the board fence. The same careful attention the artist reveals in the saintly countenances of his angels is also shown in inanimate objects. So painstaking was he in painting this fence that not only are the nail heads visible, but the graining of the wood is discernible as well, and shows that extreme care has been given to the minutest details.

Fra Angelico was probably more exacting with his work than any other artist. Ever obedient to the will of God, he firmly believed the ability to express divine thoughts on canvas, with brush and paint, was given to him to be used in further spreading devotion, much like the gift of oratory is given to the great preachers. Thinking that his ideas were being inspired by a heavenly body, he made it a strict rule never to retouch a single part of any picture once it was finished.

His name will stand forever as a worthy synonym of the very highest attainment in religious art. Most of his really great work was done between the years 1436 and 1450. This was before the real beginning of the Renaissance. While it is noticeable that there is a certain stiffness in his figures when compared to the figures painted by Raphael and Michelangelo, yet it is well to remember that he was limited by the knowledge of his time. Many years separated his career from theirs. They had the opportunity to study his style and the styles of other great masters that followed him.

He was one of the last of the old style—(Middle Ages)—painters, and one of the first of the new (Renaissance) painters. He greatly improved the stiff, lifeless style of the Giotto period.

This good Dominican father, sacredly observing the bonds of monastic discipline, lived a life that was just as sincere and noble as the piety expressed in his art. While little Leonardo da Vinci was making the most of his third birthday, in the year 1455, Fra Angelico passed on to the golden afterwhile to mingle with the angels he so loved to paint, and by which he will always be known.

The Noblest Cuban of Them All ::

feet, then striking out through the warm water. The major, trying to keep up with her, swore she did everything better than any other woman, no?"

"You are a good swimmer," Hal admitted, when they had left the major far behind. And he seemed in a good humor for the first time in hours.

Later, as they lay in the sand smoking, the major begged Sid to draw one puff through his ivory holder. For then, ever after when he used it he would be drinking in un aliento de su alma—"a breath of your soul," he translated without help.

"You're getting on very well with your English," Hal commented.

"O, yes," admitted the major, pleased. "I have very passionate teacher. She have great pash-ence with me."

Hal glanced uneasily at Sid, whose face, however, was hidden in the sand. And there she remained until she began to find the afternoon sun too hot.

'Aren't you afraid of burning?" she asked the others.

"O, yes," replied the major, ardently, "but no with the sun. Is your eyes, no, who borrn me."

Hal thought they had better dress if they were to stop at the Country club before dinner. Sid liked dancing on the tiled terrace of the club, and she found the girls chic and charming.

"You like Havana, no?" the major asked.

"Better than any place I've ever been in my life," she answered with honest enthusiasm. "I shall hate to go home."

"You are no going home," announced the major. "I have idea. You give me your ticket, no, and I sell for you?"

"To your mother?" inquired Hal, his narrowed lids belying the pleasant casualness of his voice.

Sid broke the slightly strained pause which followed. "I have to go home and earn my living," she explained.

"O!" The major was shocked and outraged in the depths of some of his very finest feelings. That such a daughter of the gods should have to work for a living!

"It is a nuisance," Sid did not deny it. "But I have to eat."

"O!" He appealed to Hal. "Do you no think it pity for such womans no to have mans who is work for he?"

"Miss Sidney prefers to support herself," replied Hal, primly.

Sid basely deserted the defender of her independence. "I don't know. I think it'd be rather nice not to have to work every day—to be able to lie around on beaches—or go out into the country—and dance——"

"Why, Sid!" Hal cried. "I never imagined you felt that way!"

"A woman is feeling many things, no, which mans he is never imagined. No es verdad, Alma mia?" and he took her hand meaningly.

"Es verdad," she replied, without withdrawing her hand.

They had dinner at a very old restaurant overlooking the harbor, where two negroes strummed guitars and sang songs in Spanish and English; and the menu spoke broad-mindedly of Fish Cooken in Paper Baked; of Red Snapper Steack and Has Bran Potatoes. Sid found the fish delicious.

Afterwards they had a box for the Jai Alai, which Sid thought the swiftest and most exciting game she had ever witnessed. Then they went to a roadhouse to dance.

The major confided to Hal. "When you take Alma in your arms, no? is feel difference as all other womans which dance with you, no?"

Hal shrugged unresponsively. The major apologized. "Pardon. I forget American mans is difference. You no feel these thinks like Cuban mans, no?"

"Have you ever been in love, Hal?" Sid inquired.

Hal set his jaw. "I suppose not—in the sense they mean it down here."

"Then how," demanded the major, "you can zpeak of these things, no?"

When she asked for her key at the desk, the clerk handed her a bulky parcel. It bore the name of the shop they had visited at noon. For a second Sid's head swam. What could it be . . . except the shawl, the yellow shawl? Her fingers trembled so she could make no headway against the knotted string.

Hal stood by as though the affair did not concern him, while the major helped her undo the wrappings. There it was—red flowers—yellow fringe—a heaped measure of unbelievable loveliness. Here, away from the others, it was handsomer, even, than in the shop. Quite the handsomest shawl in the world. Her throat swelled and the tears came up in back of her eyes. She dared not raise them, because she did not know what to say. Nor, with absolute certainty, to which of the two to say it.

The major took it from her and draped it around her shoulders. "I wiss," he breathed, "that I am this shawl, no?" And running his fingers over the largest rose, "Is unique, these colors," he acknowledged; turning to Hal. "I have never see one similar in Cuba."

"Except, of course," protested Hal politely, "the one that has been in your family so many years.

Hal had sent it. Hal! She could not grasp at one gulp all the joyous significance of that. Hal had given her this lovely—this precious thing—this altogether priceless thing, since he had gven it to her.

She stepped closer to him, her eyes brimming.

"It's too beautiful," she murmured, not knowing how to begin.

"Nothing could be too beautiful for you," he replied, and for a moment Sid thought she was going to do something ridiculous.

The major was to take Sid, on her last afternoon, for a drive out into the country. But at noon Hal appeared alone with the surprising information that he was going to take her instead, because he had something to say to her. And the major would meet them later at the club. All through luncheon he seemed ill at ease. Sid, too, was nervous and she could not meet his eye.

As they drove out of the city Hal indicated the points of interest.

"This section was built up by an old Spaniard who lost a fortune in the sugar crash. He killed himself because he thought he was wiped out. But when they opened his safe they found he was worth a couple of millions."

She made some appropriate noise. But she scarcely heard him. What had made the major change his plans without letting her know? And what was it Hal wanted to speak to her about? She tried not to let her thoughts run ahead. Yet she could not keep them in check.

At last they came to a park and Hal stopped the car near a lake where they could watch the leisurely antics of a flock of geese. It seemed an eternity before he spoke.

"I brought you out here," he began, in a stiff and self-conscious way, "so we could talk without interruption. It's rather an important question and I haven't any idea how you'll take it. Not that I expect it'll be any shock to you. A woman always knows about those things before a man realizes them himself——"

(She must not let her mind race ahead!)

"You may have wondered why Diago didn't show up. I persuaded him not to. I wanted to speak to you alone."

They were sitting so close that by an almost imperceptible motion she was able to rest her head against him. How stupid men were, cluttering things up with words, when, if he simply took her in his arms, they would both understand everything! She was choked with impatience. If he would only hurry!

His voice went on. "Marriage is a pretty big thing, Sid, and I wouldn't like to see you rush into it blindly. This isn't a bad place for a girl, if she's happy. But I don't know anywhere she can go to hell quicker if she isn't. Of course, I imagine you'd find something to occupy your mind. You're too sensible to let all this drinking and stuff get you."

Everything in her was locked, waiting to be released from immobility by him. She was conscious of his voice, but in a detached way.

"I knew this wasn't going to be an easy job," he complained, wiping his perspiring brow, "but I want you to see it from all sides. You'd never want for anything in a material way. You'd have lots of money—an assured social position—and that counts down here. It all depends on whether you care—whether you could care—for the major."

"The major!" In spite of herself the words escaped her as she drew herself sharply erect. He had been speaking all this time about the major! "O, my God!"

Hal, busy with his own thoughts, did not notice her expression.

"He's gone about things fairly enough," he admitted, as though reluctantly, "coming to me—because, he said, I was sort of your guardian down here and he wanted you protected in every way. That's how he got me to put the thing before you."

"He's very crazy about you," he resumed at last, dutifully. And, when she still said nothing: "Sid, do you like him?"

She roused herself to answer, without enthusiasm, "Why, yes."

There was more than a hint of eagerness about the way he asked, "But not enough to marry him?"

She looked up at him with eyes which told nothing. "I don't know. What do you think?"

"After all," his opinion was, "you have only known him three days, and you can't really tell whether you care enough about a man to marry him—in that short time."

She smoothed out a crease in her short white skirt. "You're not exactly pressing his suit, are you?"

"I never said I would," he replied with heat. "In fact, I tried to get out of the whole damn thing. But he made me think I ought to—for your sake. That's all I'm concerned about, Sid. You mean an awful lot to me."

"Do I really, Hal?"

"What do you mean—do you really? You know very well you mean more to me than anybody in the whole damn world. And that's why I can't sit by and see you make a mess of things——"

"Mess? Why , Hal, anybody'd think you didn't want me to marry the major!" And she looked up at him out of wide, thirsty eyes.

"I don't!" he had blurted out before he knew it.

"Why, Hal." She drew her face so close to his that her mouth—the mouth that was like the petals of bougainvillaea, was within reach of his lips. "What have you got against the major?"

"Not a damn thing, except that I don't want him to have you. I don't want anybody to have you. I want you myself." And without realizing what he was doing or how he had come to do it, he had her in his arms and was kissing her—as he had never kissed anybody before—on the mouth to which the major had so pointedly drawn his attention.

It was half-past five when they recalled that they were to be at the club at five-thirty. At the thought of the major waiting for them Hal began to realize the enormity of what he had done. God! He had double-crossed a man who trusted him. Why, that was unspeakable—hideous, terrible. Although, to be sure, the major would get over it. He couldn't possibly care, after three days, as he, Hal, cared. "Why, you've been the one girl in the world for me for over thirteen years."

"Why didn't you ever say so?" demanded woman, the insatiable.

"I guess I never realized it till I began putting it in words for somebody else. And the thought of somebody else getting you—that just about finished me. Of all people in the world," he burst out bitterly, "he had to pick me to translate for him—and me to propose for him!" He laughed harshly. Then, sobering suddenly, "God, what a dog I am! I don't know how to break it to him!"

"Let me, dear," suggested Sid gently. "A woman can always do those things better. You can say what you like after I've talked to him."

And so, while Hal was putting up his car, she walked with the major down to the deserted swimming pool and there, beside the transparent green water, she told him.

"O Arturo, you darling! And she threw her arms about his neck and kissed him.

"Es verdad?" he demanded, holding her away and looking into her starry eyes, "is all fix?"

She nodded eagerly. Then, as she felt the tears in back of her eyes, "I'm so terribly happy. O, Arturo, you don't know what you've done for me!"

He shrugged. "I tell you on the boat I do my best and I have do."

"I can't realize it yet—You were too wonderful. Sometimes I thought I couldn't go through with it. And today—Why didn't you tell me what you were going to do instead of letting it hit me all in a heap? I might have spoiled everything——"

She drew a deep breath, as the miracle once more swept over her. "I'll never be able to thank you, Arturo."

"No thank me. Is nothing. Have I no promise I will do what I can for make you happy?"

Her eyes misted. "I think you are the noblest man in the world, Arturo, and I'll never forget what you have done," and she held out her hand to him.

He took it gravely. "I am no noble, Alma mia. I am promise myself I will do what I can for make this Hal Hayes ask you for marri-age. But if he no do so, I have arrange with my brother for keep you in he house until you agree to make marri-age with me. I make this gamble and I lose. And when Cuban mans is gamble and lose—even the blood of the heart—he is pay and no complain. I wiss you will be very happy for all the time, Alma de mi Alma."

And raising her hand to his lips he kissed it. But first he turned the palm upward.

I will place 500 men in well-paid Drafting Jobs in 1926

Read my Guarantee!

The Draftsman Is the Invisible "Boss of the Works" and Gets Paid Accordingly:

Drafting is the most fascinating work imaginable. It's white collar work for HE-MEN. The Draftsman sits in his light, comfortable office — miles away, perhaps, from the job — but his plans control every move of hundreds of workmen.

I will make you a real DRAFTSMAN and then place you in a good job at 50 per cent more pay!

I want to get in touch immediately with men in this and neighboring cities who are interested in becoming high-salaried Draftsmen. This offer is limited to men now earning less than $40 a week. They need not have high school or college education—the grades will do. But they MUST be willing to devote part of their spare time at home to a course of training prepared for the AMERICAN SCHOOL by 16 noted Engineers and Architects. Within 60 days after completing this training, every man will be placed in a permanent Drafting position at a starting salary of at least 50% more than he earns today, or the small amount charged for his training will be refunded to him.

More Jobs Open at $60 to $125 a Week Than We Can Fill!

We offer every Student and Graduate an efficient Free Employment Service which keeps in touch with the employers of Draftsmen all over America. As soon as I accept you for training, this department registers you for your future job. We have placed hundreds of men in fine positions in the past few months. This Employment Service absolutely free to employers and the Draftsmen we train.

3 Drafting Lessons Free to Prove You Can Learn at Home in Spare Time!

Sixteen of America's leading Engineers and Architects have developed a new one-step-at-a-time method of Drafting instruction, which, for the first time, does away with merely "copying" and "tracing." They've made Drafting easy to understand. They start you off with standard Drafting room jobs right from the first lesson, and they have condensed and simplified the work so you make rapid progress. Under their wonderful system of training you can get ready for a beginner's job in Drafting in just a few months!

These letters prove we prepare men for good jobs and place them

Deputy Commissioner

Gentlemen: The same day I received my diploma I got word that I was one of the two candidates who had successfully passed the examination for Deputy Commissioner of Buildings of the City of Chicago, a position paying $3,500 per year.

There were eight applicants examined besides myself, all men well known to the architectural and engineering profession. Seven of these failed to obtain a passing grade of 70 per cent. My grade was 84.69.

Inasmuch as I failed to pass this same examination three years before, my present success is mainly due to the knowledge gained through your School.

Yours-very truly,

dance in the "Teacher, dear, when do we dance" number. And more than one of you have commented to me on what a gorgeous pair of—er—well, not arms—you thought she had. As a matter of fact, this Miss Gertrude McDonald has quite the most pulchritudinous legs on Broadway, and believe me, that takes in a lot of legs.

And what's more, now that she's got these legs, she knows what to do with them. May I continue by saying Miss McDonald is the most enchanting dancer I have seen on Broadway? There is a freshness about her work in "Tip Toes" which is delightful. You saw her a few years ago in Atlanta in "The Whirl of Whatever-Year-It-Was" but you didn't know it, for the part she played in that revue was not the prominent one she has in "Tip Toes."

People like to say she resembles Marilyn Miller, others that it's Mildred Harris or Jewel Carmen she looks like. To my mind, however, she resembles no one so much as she does Gertrude McDonald.

* * * *

AND now it's "The Half Caste" which is making theatergoers wonder how some plays manage to get on the stage. This is a combination of all the Hawaiian girl, American boy, and "white lady" romances of the past few years. How much the half-caste loves him, even if he does drink! How much better she understands him than his haughty fiancee and her social climbing aunt! Numberless movies come from plays but this is the first show I am sure they got from the movies.

Then, too, the characters in "The Half Caste" have a way of saying the most bromidic and hackneyed remarks with the air of their being original. I'm sure my ears didn't deceive me when I heard one character say, "After all, money won't buy love," and then look up to see if everybody didn't consider him tremendously clever for having thought that up. I then settled back to wait for "All that Glitters Saves a Stitch in Time," but fortunately nobody ever got around to saying that.

The featured player is a young miss who calls herself merely Veronica danced better than she acted. Of course you know the first American custom she learned was "cussing" and like all these stage heroines, became unbelievably cute with her "damn fool" this and that. In the first two acts, Veronica wore the kind of costumes I imagine these half castes really wear. But in the last act she wore a snappy orange-like native costume which would go big at a fancy dress ball, but the like of which I'll bet was never seen on an island in the Pacific. Instead of the usual grass skirt, it was all orange fringe, and it was when Veronica wore this, that I wished they'd give up the drama idea and turn it into a Hawaiian revue. Dancing is so much less dreary than drama.

PRACTICAL jokes, will, I suppose, continue to the end of time, I don't know whether the Atlanta papers carried the story or not, but on April 1st several New York papers proclaimed on their front pages, accompanied by photographs, that Ramon Navarro was engaged to marry none other than your old side-kick, Katharine Wilson. By the time I could reach Miss Wilson the "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em" theater, she had barricaded herself in her dressing-room to ward off eleven patiently-waiting reporters. Only Mr. Wyly, of The Atlanta Constitution, would Miss Wilson see, and then to say she'd never even met Mr. Navarro and under those conditions could hardly be engaged to him. Mr. Navarro wired from California that he was sorry but that he hadn't met Miss Wilson either. There are a thousand and one angles to the story, but the whole thing can be explained when you recall I told you the story came out on April 1st.

Advising His Nephew

sometimes turned out a "dud" later. The quiet chap, not so long on convincing and fiery speech, not infrequently eases his way up to that top rung of fame.

I'd tell a nephew of mine to look for character in his school companions, that, first and foremost. And, then, I wouldn't want him to ignore the lighter side of companionships entirely. Ambition up to a certain point is to be encouraged, but one has to be careful that it does not turn into an incurable case of dominating, grasping egotism.

Learning From Others.

If one wants to remain human and get a little fun out of life as you go along, association with those less fortunately placed, every now and then, will help to form a sweeter philosophy. To-wit, a Wall street broker was caught in a recent market slump. He stayed on late one evening figuring how he could recuperate so his boy could remain on in an eastern college and his girl in boarding school. In came the scrubwoman. She gave him a broad smile when he looked up.

"Mary, how can you smile like that when you have to work so hard?" he asked.

"O, I've got lots to smile about," she answered.

"What?"

"O, my boy is home from the hospital today. He had a bad accident."

"Mary, you're a wonder!" said the broker as he took his hat and coat. "Heaven must have sent you to cheer me up."

The human brain can register a world of people, if there is in the same body a heart to feel.

That's why I'd urge my nephew in college to let in everybody. Discard those that prove useless—but give them all a chance to "educate" him for battle with the world.

so far as I am concerned Eve has no alibi at all."

Rudolph Valentino is now doing "Son of the Sheik," his new picture with Vilmy Banky and expresses satisfaction at once again appearing in a sheik role, because he feels he can now do that role more justice than in the days when he did "The Sheik." Rudy figures he can deliver some hot and palpitating thrills not included in the first production. He seems in a happy mood and talked volubly about his Irish wolf hound which seems more on his mind than his love trial and its deferment because Pola can't get her passport and go to Europe to test her love by absence.

A stunning Moorish costume adorned the stalwart form of our hero including a pair of cerise satin zouave trousers plentifully braided and embroidered in gold. These had been secured in Algieres originally for "The Hooded Falcon," which Rudy never made and which was the high spot in the Valentino contention with the Ritz-Carlton company, which sent him into the United Artists fold. Natacha Rambova was the one who designed the costumes to the tune of one hundred thousand dollars which now lie on the wardrobe shelves. This is the first use that has been made of any of them.

not be bathed every day, that so much bathing is injurious, that once a week will suffice. Also that skimmed milk is as beneficial as whole milk. B contends the child needs a daily bath until capable of bathing herself. The child is healthy and active and has never been sick. (Mrs. J. S.)

Answer—A bath once or twice a day in hot weather is all right for a bimbo. Two or three times a week in winter is ordinarily sufficient. Skimmed milk is only half as nutritious as whole milk. Regular kids should have whole milk, fresh, preferably raw milk. Some of the old folk may get along very well on skimmed milk.

English Teacher Says.

Now that you are teaching English through your column will you kindly explain why you invariably say high school pupils and college students? A student is one who studies. May not one study in high school? A pupil is one under the care of a tutor. A person studying music, whether he be young or old, novice or operatic star, is a student of music and a pupil of his instructor. (Miss A. D.)

Answer—One may study in high school, I suppose, but the phenomenon is so rare that I prefer to think of high school children as mere pupils, as you define the term. I think a student is one who sets himself to the task, whereas a pupil has a taskmaster. Even in the colleges there are not so many students nowadays.

Mme. Blanche Arral, Opera Star, Finds in Java New Way to Reduce Fat

Javanese Woman

The secret of the Javanese women's slender beauty is out at last. The method by which Madam Arral reduced so surprisingly has been used in Java for years.

It is simple an dharmless yet thoroughly scentific. No medicines, starvation, diets, violent exercise—no Turkish baths, dangerous purging nor reducing garments.

This method, it is said, removes fat at the rate of about one pound a day and at the same time strengthens the body and benefits the general health.

"The results were astonishing," says Mme. Arral. "Just this pleasant simple native treatment took away my surplus flesh, restored my voice and my health. Today my mind is clear and buoyant, and I truly feel as though I had stepped from a hazy darkness into bright, glorious sunlight.

"I had previously tried, I believe, every method of flesh reduction known to medical science. I used drugs, starvation diets, purging, rolling, padding, exercising, long walks, special garments, etc., but they did me more harm than good."

Grand Opera Star Reduces

34 Pounds in 4 Weeks Without Drugs, Diet or Exercise.

When Blanche Arral appeared in this country sometime ago she was so stout that only her marvelous voice kept her from being actually amusing in such roles as Carmen and Juliet.

She has returned from abroad with a figure as beautiful as her voice. The transformation is amazing. She has reduced 34 pounds, lost a double chin and looks fifteen years younger.

"I had gained flesh, oh, so rapidly," says Mme. Arral. "I was ashamed to appear on the stage. Fat made my health miserable and affected my voice. I was dull, heavy, stupid, unable to digest food or sleep.

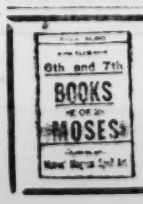

"Finally, while touring Australia, my health broke down completely, my voice failed and I was ordered to take a long rest. I went for a vacation to the little island of Java, where, at the hands of a Javanese priest, I found a complete cure.

In response to a deluge of requests for information regarding this wonderful method, Mme. Arral has written a charming little book about her experience in Java and how she got rid of excess flesh by this method, which can be practiced at home by anyone.

For a short time a copy of this book will be sent free to anyone who desires to reduce. Send name and address to Blanche Arral, Suite 697 E, 35 E. Flagler St., Miami, Fla. —(adv.)

No more "appointments"
No more "wave" expense
No hot irons on your hair

Now you may have as lovely a marcel as the finest beauty parlor possibly can give—in your own home—when you want it, and at a trifling cost

Where is the woman, in this busy day, who can afford from her little leisure all the time it takes to make appointments, arrange her convenience to suit someone else's schedule, go through the usual experience of waiting many minutes, and then submit to a long drawn-out process?

Women will do that, to have their hair marcelled, so insistent is the real need for loveliness.

But that exasperating method is no longer necessary. It is rapidly becoming obsolete — wherever this amazing new invention called the Marvelous Marcellers makes its way.

Just 30 minutes with the Marvelous Marcellers, once a week—in your own home—and your hair is always at its wavy loveliest and best.

Before putting this Marcelling Outfit on the market, we asked fifty women to try it out and give us their opinion. Without exception, they were most enthusiastic about it. Here are part of some of the letters we received.

Miss M. S., Chicago: I recently had a permanent wave put in my hair and since then have had lots of trouble making my hair look right. But with your Marvelous Marcellers I no longer have to bother with water combs and now my hair is always beautifully marcelled.

Miss K. W., Chicago: I have had my hair marcelled so much that it was beginning to get terribly dry and scraggly. Since I have quit applying heat to my hair, it is quickly regaining its old lustre and beauty. I think your marcelling outfit is wonderful.

Mrs. A. K., Memphis: I am cursed with thin, straight hair that is unusually hard to wave. I have tried many home marcelling outfits, but have always been disappointed until your Marvelous Marcellers came. Now I can easily keep my hair in a dandy marcel, just the way I want it. I can't say too much for your new invention.

A $1.50 Marcel Any Time for a Few Cents

Moreover, how many women really can spare the money, $1.00, $1.50 or more, for waving done the ordinary way? Isn't it a fact that even on a liberal allowance, these inroads are too heavy, with the usual result that you forego many a marcel that you know you ought to have?

Here again, the Marvelous Marcellers are literally one of the greatest boons ever conferred on womankind.

The Woman who owns a set of Marvelous Marcellers may keep her hair at all times in the full glory of its beauty, at a cost of a few cents for each complete marcel.

And the Menace of Hot Irons Eliminated Forever

Finally, this invention is the most protective of hair quality, texture and lustre ever introduced into modern hair culture.

It does away with the old-fashioned curlers and so-called "wavers" — with dangerous curling irons that sear the hair and dry the scalp—with all the muss and fuss of the old-fashioned water-waving combs.

In eliminating the hot iron peril alone, the Marvelous Marcellers are worth their weight in gold to any woman who prizes the natural health and beauty of her hair.

Your Mirror Will Tell You This is True

Nothing we could say about the results which thousands of women today are obtaining with the Marvelous Marcellers would tell so complete a story of their value as the photographs above. Note them well. Then read carefully the sworn affidavit of one of Chicago's most reputable photographers, as to the circumstances under which those photographs were taken. They could be duplicated anywhere—and are being duplicated everywhere the Marvelous Marcellers are in use.

Marvelous Marcellers will give you any kind of marcel you want—shingle bob, Ina Claire, horseshoe wave or pompadour, center or side part. They will do this whether your hair is soft and fluffy, coarse and straight, long or short. Regardless of the kind of hair you have, they will give you the most beautiful marcel imaginable. We guarantee this absolutely, and you are the sole judge of your own satisfaction with them.

Our Most Liberal, Limited-Time Offer to You

In order to establish this revolutionary invention in the favor of women all over America, we offer the first 10,000 sets of Marvelous Marcellers at a price which hardly covers the cost of making, packing and advertising—only $2.98, plus a few cents' postage.

This includes a new and authentic marcel fashion chart, and a complete set of Marvelous Marcellers. Nothing more to buy. Just dampen the hair with water and place the Marcellers in your hair according to directions.

Take advantage of this special offer right away, because it may be withdrawn at any time.

Send No Money—Just Mail the Coupon

Even at this special price, you need not risk a penny. Just sign and mail the coupon. In a few days, when the postman brings your outfit, just deposit $2.98 with him (plus a few cents postage). MISSING FROM TROOP SEVENTEEN

Encampment Adventures of Two Eagle Scouts

BY JACK GIHON

SYNOPSIS

This is the story of two Eagle Scouts, Tom and Chuck, as told by Tom. Troop Seventeen is preparing for its summer encampment in the Mississippi woods, on the Whartoon river, and Tom and Chuck are sent on a day ahead to pick a camping site. As they reach the river, they give their patrol yells, and are surprised to hear a weird cry in answer from the other side of the river. After lunch, they take an old boat to cross the river and investigate the strange cries. They are caught in the rapids, however, and are carried two miles downstream, when they jump to safety. Again they hear the weird cries, and seek safety by climbing a high hill, where they find a house which is popularly supposed to be haunted. Going into the house, they again hear the cries, while on the second floor, there arises a terrific clamor that sounds, as Tom puts it, like ten thousand madly dashing footsteps.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

INSTALLMENT III.

Instinctively we turned to the door—and then stopped. What would be the worst of the two evils? Upstairs was the noise of all those footsteps that clattered like the beating of a snare drum, while outside were those awful cries. Still, we could see no one—the noises seemed to come out of the thin air.

"We better get out of here," Chuck whispered to me, and I nodded. Anything was better than this. Scoutmaster Hughes admitted that when he came on this house last year, he didn't come in. He had more sense than we did.

So holding wands, and running at top speed, we dashed toward the front door.

I don't know whether it was the jarring of the footsteps upstairs, or whether it was the work of some ghostly agency, but just as we reached the doorway—or a moment before—there was crunching sound, and the lintel above the front door fell with a crash.

We might have been killed, if we had been a step closer. As it was, a good sized splinter struck Chuck in the face and scratched him. We drew back in a hurry. It was as though these unseen ghosts were plotting to keep us in this house.

Off the room that had been the library, there was another door leading out to the veranda; panic-stricken we rushed toward it—and stopped on the threshold.

To tell the truth, we were scared to go out! Then we heard a noise of footsteps coming down the stairs, and turning, were just in time to see a small, white form almost flying through space. That was enough to decide us.

Not caring whether the whole building fell down on us, we took to our heels and fled from that awful place. We reached the veranda and without stopping to find a stairway, jumped over the rail, and down to the ground, a distance of about five feet. Without looking behind us we continued running down the hill, until our arms and faces were scratched by the swinging vines, and our clothing torn by brambles.

We must have run for miles. We reached the bottom of the hill, and then continued straight ahead, expecting to come to the river and swim across, if necessary. We were convinced that this whole side of the river was bewitched, and we wanted to get back to the other side—back to our camp, where we could build a fire, and find a refuge in our pup tents.

But we did not come to the river—nor did we reach it for many, many hours after! We had been expecting to for the last mile, and finally we stopped, our fright sort of worn off, to try and get our bearings.

"Do you know what we've done?" demanded Chuck. I shook my head.

"Well," he said, "when we ran out that side door, we came down the wrong side of the hill. We've been running in the opposite direction from the river all this time!"

I kind of groaned. Believe me, I was geting tired, and I was hungry, too—but further, I had no desire to go back there where we'd just come from. Not on your life!

"We've got to do it, though," said Chuck. "We can sort of skirt around the hill so that we won't come too close to it, and try to find a place where we can swim across the river."

But how to get back to the river was another question. When you're in the woods, all directions seem the same.

We figured that the river, roughly speaking, ran north and south. We had traveled south for two miles, about, and then gone east for maybe half a mile. We didn't know what direction we'd been traveling in for the past half hour, but if we went straight west, we'd be pretty sure of hitting the river, sooner or later.

Right then we were glad we were Scouts, and had Scout training. If it hadn't been for that, we never would have been able to find our way back to camp again. There wasn't any sun, and neither of us had a compass with us, but we figured which direction was north by the moss on the trees. Moss pretty nearly always grows on the north side of trees, you know.

So we started walking west. If the going had been tough before, it was worse now. The vegetation was as dense as tropical jungle. There were all sorts of bushes and vines, and we were using our Scout axes constantly, trying to clear a path for ourselves.

We had gone a matter of two miles, I guess, when Chuck stopped and silenced me with a wave of his arm. He was listening at something, and I heard it, too. In the distance there was a sort of rumbling sound—it was the river. We'd gotten through these woods all right!

It's easy to tell about it, but believe me, it was no little job to get through. If you've ever been out in a dense forest with no compass, you'll understand what we were up against.

We felt now that we had escaped but we didn't know what we had escaped—and we were pretty elated about it. We started running toward the river, which we couldn't see yet, of course.

But then we heard one of those terrible cries again—and this time it was almost upon us.

Then we hadn't escaped, after all! All this time, the horrible thing, whatever it was, had been following us, and waiting its chance to close in on us—sort of like a cat that plays with a mouse when it has it cornered.

Chuck and I stopped dead still. We were worn out, and it seemed we couldn't run away any longer. And then we heard a crackling of the bushes in front of us. Something was going to happen—and looking at us right in the eyes, came a big black bear!

That bear seemed as big as a house to us. And Chuck and I were absolutely unarmed. We thought our goose was cooked!

To Be Concluded Next Week.

Animals ought to be mighty careful what they say about one another.

They ought to be very sure of what they say and then they should only say half of what they want to say.

If Johnny Wattels had been sure of what he told Grandma Swiggley instead of what he thought, it would have saved Mr. Nickeldick a great deal of worry.

It all came about when Johnny happened to see a policeman leading Tilly, Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat cook, along by the arm.

"She's been arrested!" thought Johnny, and, being somewhat of a gossip, he told Grandma Swiggley without ever stopping to find out whether Tilly had been arrested or not.

"Tilly Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat, has been arrested," he told Grandma. "I saw the policeman taking her to jail. He was leading her by the arm."

"Was she cryin'?" asked Mrs. Swiggley.

"Maybe she was," answered Johnny. "I didn't notice that, but she was carryin' a basket of groceries and she was limpin'."

"I suppose she had been in a fight and got hurt," said Grandma, who knew Tilly was quick to lose her temper.

"Probably she was stealin' the groceries and she fought when she was caught," suggested Johnny.

"Maybe she did," answered Grandma. "It's hard to tell."

It might not have been so bad if Johnny had stopped right there and quit talking about the matter, but that's just what he didn't do. He skipped right over to the Woppelgops with the news.

"Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat has been arrested," he told Miss Woppelgop.

"For goodness sake!" cried Miss Woppelgop. "What for?"

"Tryin' to kill the groceryman after he had caught her stealin' groceries. Granma Swiggley says that Tilly has a terrible temper and it's hard to tell just what she might do.

"Was the groceryman badly hurt?" asked Miss Woppelgop.

"I think he was. Tilly probably hit him with a baseball bat," answered Johnny, who considered a baseball bat a dangerous weapon. "She probably cracked his skull."

"Oh, this is dreadful!" cried Miss Woppelgop, and running into the house she dabbed a bit of powder on her nose and rushed over to give the news to the Sligs.

Mrs. Slig was in the bathtub when she arrived, so she shouted the news through the keyhole.

"Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat is going to be hung!" cried Miss Woppelgop, who was greatly excited.

"Hung!" exclaimed Mrs. Slig, kicking the stopper out of the drain pipe. "What for?"

"She was stealing, and when the groceryman caught her she knocked his head off with a baseball bat."

Mrs. Slig hurried into her clothes without even drying her body and came out of the bathroom.

"When are they going to hang her?" she gasped.

"She has most likely been hung by this time," answered Miss Woppelgop. "Johnny Wattels saw the policeman fighting with her. I suppose he was taking her out to hang her."

"This is dreadful! Positively dreadful!" moaned Mrs. Slig. "Poor Mr. Nickeldick—this will be dreadfully hard on him."

"Yes, this will be a terrible thing for him," answered Miss Woppelgop.

"He'll probably be in bed and have to call the doctor. Well, I must step in and tell Mr. Hoggelgog the news." And dashing through the door, she disappeared in the direction of Mr. Hoggelgog's house, just as Mr. Slig came home.

"They have hung Mr. Nickeldick's colored cat for stealing baseball bats and killing the groceryman," Mrs. Slig told her husband.

"Snortin' dragons!" exclaimed Mr. Slig after he had listened to the story. "I'll go right up to the barber shop and tell the boys. This is terrible."

Mr. Slig ran up the street, and just as he was crossing over to the barber shop he spied Mr. Nickeldick coming along.

"My dear Nickeldick!" cried Mr. Slig, laying his paw sympathetically on the rabbit's shoulder. "I'm terribly sorry to hear about the awful thing that has happened to your colored cat. You have my deepest sympathy."

"W-w-why, I-I-I d-d-don't know what you mean," answered Mr. Nickeldick, turning gray around the whiskers.

"About her being hung," said Mr. Slig. "Her killing the groceryman. Johnny Wattels saw her being led out by the police to be hung."

"Hung!" gasped Mr. Nickeldick weakly. "I didn't know anything about it."

Before Mr. Slig could catch him, Mr. Nickeldick's knees gave way and he fell in a faint. Mr. Slig and a fox squirrel carried him into the drug store, where they laid him on the counter. The drug clerk threw a chocolate soda on his face and put rubber bands on his toes. In a few minutes he opened his eyes and, jumping to his feet, he dashed for home.

"My poor Tilly!" he moaned as he ran along. "Hung for murder! I can't believe it."

He was so excited he could hardly open his front door. Presently he unlocked it and pushed it open. A voice was singing in the kitchen. It was the colored cat's voice; she was singing one of her favorite songs.

"Take do ol' skillet
An' enough po'k to fill it,
O me, O my, O yum!
Cook it till it's brown,
Wid de gravy all aroun',
O me, O my, O yum!"

The colored cat finished as Mr. Nickeldick staggered into the kitchen.

"Tilly!" he gasped. "The police haven't hung you?"

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, no suh," answered the colored cat. "Ah is suttenly as unhung as Ah evah will be."

"But Johnny Wattels saw you being led out to be hung?" cried Mr. Nickeldick.

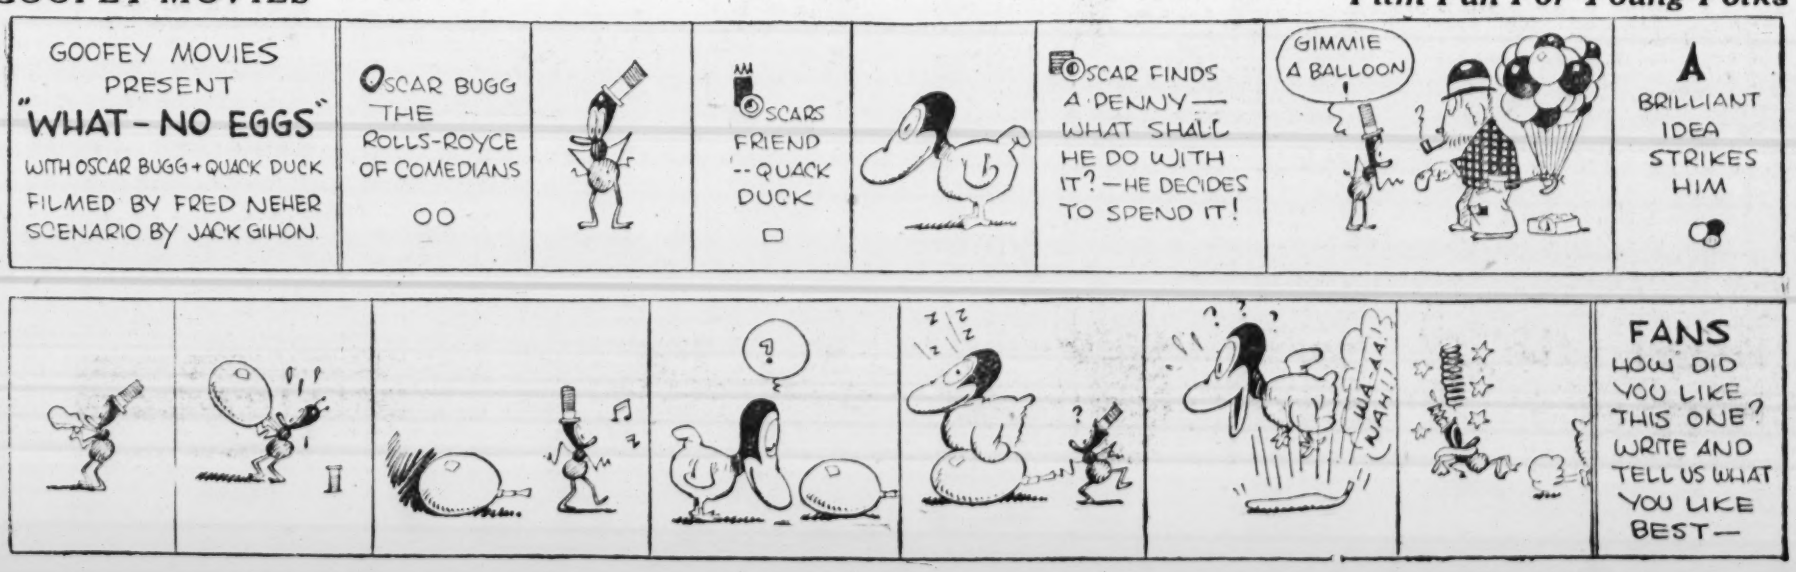

"Dat Johnny Wattels is de orneriest no account story tellah what dey is," shouted Tilly. "Ah was comin' from de grocery wid a basket of supplies when Ah done strain mah ankle a bit. De policeman done come along and take mah arm an' help me fo' to walk home. Ah saw dat no account badgah looking at me an' Ah jus done reckon he'd be tellin' Ah was in de hands of de police."

"Then it's all just gossip?" gasped Mr. Nickeldick.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, yes, suh," smiled the colored cat. "Nothin' 'tall hard on him."

Dear Editor and Kiddies: Will you let two Georgia girls join your club? We have been reading the letters for a long time and certainly do enjoy them. We have been saying we would write to the kiddies' page but just kept putting it off. (Gladys), five feet, four inches tall, 14 years old, have brown eyes, light hair and fair complexion. Who has my birthday, October 12?. (Hazel), five feet, two inches tall, 13 years old, have brown eyes, light hair, fair complexion. My birthday is May 7. If anybody has the same please write to me. What sports do you all like best? We like horseback riding and hiking best of all. We are fond of music, too. All of you boys and girls write to us and please send mail separately.

HAZEL HERRIN,
GLADYS McCLENDON.

GRIFFIN, GA.

Hello, Boys and Girls: Oh! I'm in such a hurry to join your Letter Writers' club before I get too old that I'm reckless. Will you allow a good girl to join your club? I have brown hair, gray eyes and have fair complexion. I am exactly five feet tall and weigh 101 pounds. I'll be 16 years old April the eighth. I just narrowly escaped being an "April Fool," didn't I? I'll tell you now, I have no beauty to bonsts of except a dimple in my chin and you know, that tells everybody I'm bad. I'm going to tell you a secret: I'm not like other little boys and girls, I'm good. You mustn't tell that to anybody who knows me for they might tell you I had a mistaken idea about myself. My worst and never-to-be-forgotten faults are talking and giggling. I talk and giggle here, there and everywhere. Please all of you girls and boys write to me and I'll answer every letter, even if I keep busy on the job until midnight.

Your new friend,
KATHERIN MESSER.

CALHOUN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your Letter Writers' club? I am fond of reading and I read the letters in The Constitution every Sunday. I am a blonde, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am five feet, four inches high and weigh 111 pounds. I am 12 years old and am large to my age. My birthday is July 4. Who is my twin? I go to school and enjoy it fine. I like my teachcer, too. Are you fond of outdoor sports? I am. I skate every afternoon. We have races on skates and lots of other things. I like to play baseball and volleyball, too. I think it is just too good to let us have two pages for the letter writers. If anybody wishes to I wish they would correspond with me. But do not write if you don't send me your picture. I am almost sure I will answer every letter I receive.

Your new friend,
GLADYS PAYNE.
Box No. 205.

FRANKLIN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please let a Georgia girl join your merry letter box? I think you should as my papa has been taking this paper for 13 years. What do you all say? Wonder what you boys and girls do for pastime. Go to school, I'm sure. I go and have a fine time. Our school will be out the second of April. I have brown hair, long eyelashes, blue eyes, and fair complexion, am five feet and four inches tall, weigh 110 pounds and am 16 years old. Guess I had better ring off for this time, as there's no news much. Hoping to hear from all of your.

Your friend,
WILLIE ECHOLS.

CRANDALL, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Have you room for another Georgia girl? I am a little girl seven years old. I have fair complexion, brown hair, blue eyes. Who has my birthday, February 13? Some of you boys and girls write to me. I will answer every letter I get.

Your unknown friend,
SARAH LOUISE SMITH.

LEXINGTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I am a little girl eleven years old and am in the sixth grade. I go to school at Lexington, Ga., and I have many friends in Lexington. Have lived here all my life. I have not written to the Boys' and Girls' Page before and I hope this letter will be in print. I would like to hear from any of the boys and girls and I will answer all of the letters I get. I have had three or four friends to write to the page, and they have received letters from others, and I hope I will, too. I like Winnie Winkle, Orphan Annie and Moon Mullins best in the funnies. I am four feet, two inches tall, have brown hair (bobbed), brown eyes. I read the letters every Sunday. I have one sister and one brother. Please some of you write to me.

Your unknown friend,

GAINESVILLE, GA.

Dear Girls and Boys: This is my first letter to your gay club, but I hope to write many more.

I am 13 years old and go to high school and I am a freshman.

How many of you have pets? I have the sweetest black kitty that I have ever seen. The old tradition is that a black cat means an "old maid," but I hope it isn't true this time.

I guess you think that I ought to describe myself, but you would not know what I looked like when I got through, so I won't take the trouble.

My birthday is December 6. Who is my twin?

I will answer every letter I get. So don't forget to write.

Your friend,
MARY LUCY MILLER.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Friends: May I join your happy band? I read the Letter Writers' club every Sunday. I sure do enjoy them.

I have dark brown hair and dark brown eyes, 4 feet 8 inches tall, weigh 65 pounds and 11 years old. Who has my birthday, November 26?

I go to Grove Park school, and am in the fifth grade.

For pets I have one dog.

I am expecting a letter from all the boys and girls near my age.

BAINBRIDGE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you open your door and let me in, too? Please do.

I am 13 years old, have brown, wavy hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am a freshman in high school.

I'll declare, I don't see how the Romans ever talked if they had to speak Latin and write algebra; English and arithmetic are hard enough.

Please everybody write to me and I will be sure and answer your letters.

Hello Kiddies: This is my first attempt to write to your happy band and it makes me rather nervous. What do you kids do for pastime? I am up to having good times all the time. I have many friends, and true friends are good to have. I am a member of New Rocky (Baptist) church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I attend the Methodist Sunday school every Sunday morning and Baptist every afternoon. The churches are a quarter mile apart and I live between the two. I am always up to mischief and am fond of outdoor sports. It seems like all of the kids are. I live in Jasper county, the best in Georgia. I live on a farm a few miles from Monticello. I haven't any sisters but have one brother younger than I. I am 15 years old and in the ninth grade. I have red hair (some folks say red-headed folks are high-tempered, but—er—er, I guess they are), brown eyes, fair complexion and freckles. Rope no one has fainted. If you would like to have a pal, let your letters fly. I will answer all the letters I receive from boys and girls.

Knock! Knock! Knock! Move over and make room for another little Georgia girl. I am thirteen years of age and have blue eyes, dark hair, fair complexion and am in the eighth grade at school. I read the letters every Sunday and enjoy them very much and now I see what I have missed by not writing sooner. For pets I have a horse, her name is Golden. I like horseback riding. How many of you ride horseback? I would be glad for members of the club to write me as I am the only girl in the family. Your letters would cheer me when I am lonely.

Your new friend,
FRANCES HOPKINS.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Well, what do you say? I have come to join your joyful troop. I have writtep once before, but I guess the letter writers' enemy must have botten his dirty hands on it and spoiled the news. I am five feet, two inches tall, have blue eyes and fair complexion. I have light brown hair cut like a boy's, bell bottom trousers. I have one sister, but no pets, only wish I did. I play the piano, too. Say, how many of you girls will send me your picture? Well, I must go now and will answer all letters received.

Your new friend,

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here I come again. Am I still welcome? I have a pet calf and its name is "Star Light." Yesterday we went up to my aunt's to see if she would like to have it, as we cannot very well keep it here in the city. She lives in the country and owns a big farm. She said she woulud be glad to have it. She is such a good aunt that I am sure she will be good to my little calf. She has a little black pig and it sure is cute. I had a big time up there but I always have a good time at her house. I am a little girl ten years old and am in the fifth grade at school. I like school very much. Every Sunday I read the letters. I read the funnies, too. I like Little Orphan Annie the best of the funnies. Some of you write to me soon and I will answer all letters I receive.

Dear Friends: I read your letters every Sunday and enjoy them very much. May I become a member of the writers' club? I am a boy 12 years old and am in the sixth grade. My sister, Mary Nelson Brown, is 10 years old. I am about 4 feet, 6 inches tall. I am a blonde and weigh 86 pounds. I like all kinds of games. I hope some of you will write to me, because I like to write letters. We take The Constitution and enjoy it very much. I like the stories in the paper. Mother and dad are both reading The Constitution now. Some people may call me a sissy for taking music lessons, but I enjoy it very much. I am anxious for my letter to be answered.

WILLARD, N. C.

Hello New Friends: If you will give a couple of boys a little room, we won't stay long. I (Jacob) am about four feet short, weigh about 98 pounds and am 11 years young. I (Edward) am about four feet tall, weigh 72 pounds and am 11 years old. We are twins and, of course, brothers. We go to the Franklin high school at Harrels Store, N. C. Of course, we don't like to go to school, as no boys like to, but we like our teacher. We go on a truck to school and like it fine. We don't have much to do after we get home from school except to feed a pig for we each have one. We live in the country and like it fine, for we can get to town about 10 miles away every Saturday, if our father will let us go with him. He generally does. If anyone wishes to write our mail box is open.

JACOB & EDWARD THORNTON.

TRIO, S. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Would you all admit a South Carolina girl to your club? I hope you will anyway, because I want to join your club. This is my firsts letter to write. I am a girl of 13 years, will be 14 the 25th of September, have I a twin? I have Chestnut brown curly hair, fair complexion and am four feet high, weigh about 98 pounds. I have three pets, ons is the baby, he is 17 months old, his name is Jayroe, and one is a cat, and the other is a big tan dog, his name is Pilot. I have one sister, her name is Myrtle. She is five years old, two brothers, Herman and Billy. Well, will close. Everybody write to me. Will answer every letter.

LOU BERNESE MOORE.

LEXINGTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your Letter Writers' club? I am seven years old and about four feet tall, rave yellow curly hair (bobbed), weigh 67 pounds, have brown eyes, fair complexion. I go to school at Bethesda and am in the second grade. Well, as this is my first time to write, will close.

FAR AWAY.

By RUBY V. KELLEY.

I.
Far, far, so far away,
When I was a little girl,
And wore pretty brown curls,
I was the happiest little girl in the world.

II.
But when I grew to be older and bolder,
My life grew to be sad;
'Cause one day as I was beginning to say,
There came an angel one sad day
And took my dear mother away.

III.
Up above the blue sky,
And oh how I did cry
To see my dear mother pass by;
I could say nothing but goodbye.

IV.
Oh, I know my mother has gone to rest,
Where it is best;
Where we will all go some sad day,
Far, far, so far away.

V.
Across the misty sky,
Where we will never die,
To the land of joy and peace,
Where we shall all meet.

VI.
And I hope the Lord will bless me with my dear father,
And let him stay.
With me day by day.
And do not take him
Far, far, so far away.

END.
RUBY V. KELLY.

COPPER HILL, TENN.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little Georgian and have brown hair and brown eyes. I am nine years old and I go to Copper Hill school. I have missed school two months. I have been sick. I don't guess I will get to go back any more this term. I like outdoor sports. I am glad spring is here. Did you think Mike Mulligan and Winnie Winkle would marry? I would like to hear from you boys and girls.

ROY RHIORDON.

STARRSVILLE, GA.

Hello Boys and Girls: May I join your happy band? I have written once but it was not printed. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, have dark hair (bobbed), and dark blue eyes, dark complexion and weigh about 100 pounds. All of you write to me and I will answer all letters I receive. I am 16 years old. I will close with a riddle. Guess it!

Dear [redacted] Unknown Friends: I guess most of you have forgotten me, for it has been almost a year since I've written. I'm just a country girl in the eighth grade and enjoy going to school very much. I have been living out here about two years. We moved from Colquitt. I like country life better than I do city life. I like to visit in the city but not live there, for the country is so much prettier.

Love to all,
BEATRICE WILLIS.

CONCORD, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I am wondering if you are going to let another Georgia boy join your happy band. I am going to school and am in the third grade. I have blue eyes, black hair and fair complexion. I weigh about 77 pounds. I have a nice time at school playing marbles, hide and seek and spinning tops. My pets are some little chickens. I have three sisters and two brothers. One of my brothers, also one of my sisters, is married. My other brother is in Virginia in the navy. Some of you write to me and I will answer all the letters I get.

Dear Friends: Gee! But I had a terrible time coming in! Every time I turned a corner Mr. W. B. would turn up! I do hope now after my escape you won't run me away. I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, have blue eyes, fair complexion and am a blond. I am 14 years old. My sister and two friends are writing also. We think it will be lots of fun seeing who can get the most letters from boys and girls telling us about their town, school and self. We four go to Jonesboro high school. We have a good baseball team. And the other baseball teams had better beware of our team if they plan to win!!

Glad to have met you all!
LOUISE FRANCES McMULLEN.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY APRIL 18th, 1926

"ALLAY OOP"

These students of Washington seminary probably did not believe they ever would be this far in the air and all at the same time, but they were caught at it by the camera. Left to right, they are: Helen Candler, one of the Asa G. Candler, Jr., twins; Martha Keys, Modena McPherson, and Martha Candler, the other twin. (Kenneth Rogers)

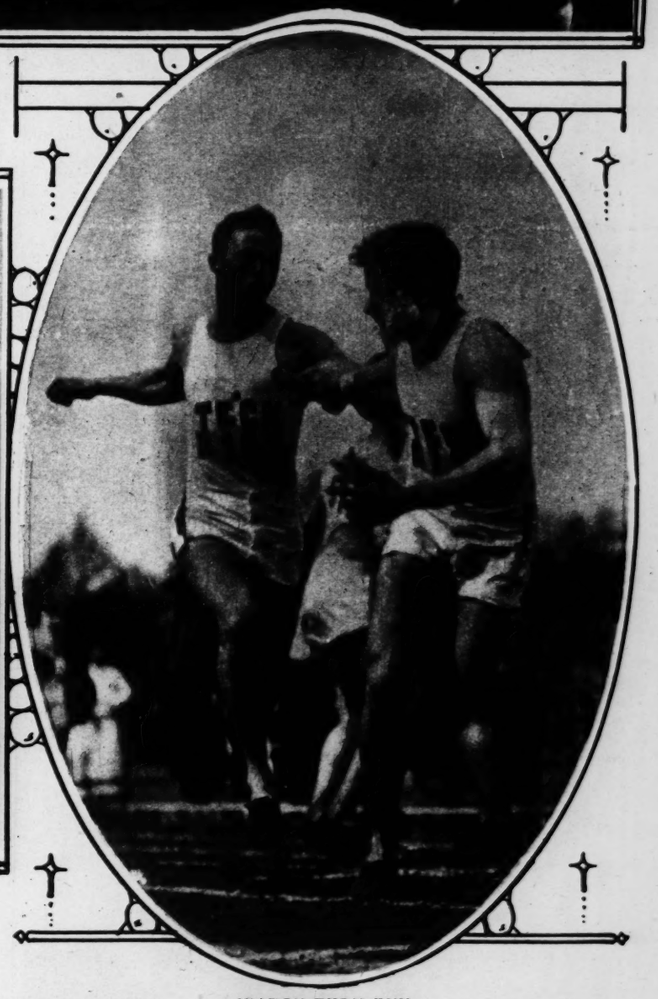

A WEDDING IN MINIATURE

Here are Marguerite Nickloy, of New York, the bride, and Matjius Martina, the bridegroom, who figured in a marriage of midgets at Savannah recently. A crowd of 10,000 persons saw the ceremony. Mayor Hull of Savannah performed the ceremony. (Tracy Mathewson)

THE MIDGETS AT HOME

Mayor Hull, of Savannah, shown congratulating the little folk after their marriage. Marguerite Nickloy, of New York, and Matjius Martina, tiny people, are the bride and groom. (Tracy Mathewson)

WATCH THEM RUN

Here are two members of the Tech high relay team photographed during the games at Georgia Tech. One man plainly is seen handing the baton to another member of the quartet. (J. T. Holloway)

NOTHING TO GET MAD ABOUT HERE

Mrs. H. C. Wagner, wife of Colonel Wagner, at Fort McPherson with her two prize mounts at the horse show at the fort. (Francis E. Price)

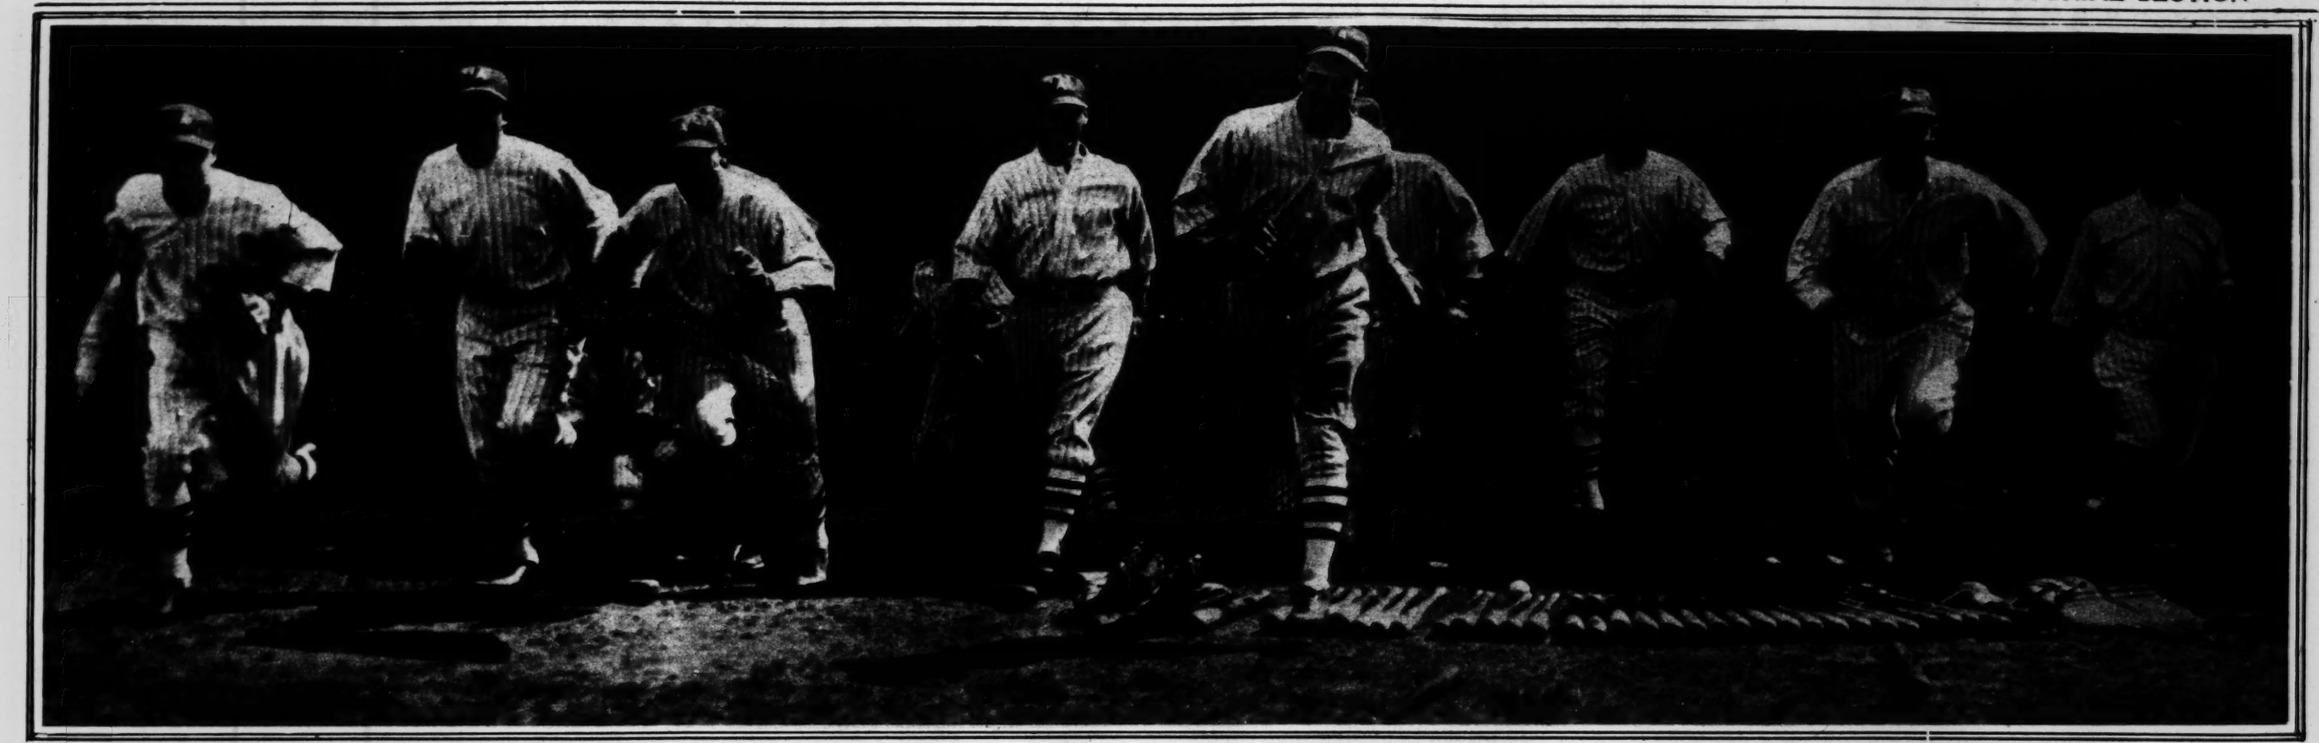

ONE WAY TO TAKE A JUMP

Lieutenant L. C. Derry, of Fort McPherson, took the jump sideways, but he got over. The photograph was made during the horse shows at Fort McPherson. (Francis E. Price)

NO WORRY HERE

This group of Frenchmen are waiting for the barge which will take them to Saint Martin de Re island, where they will be imprisoned for a time and then will be sent to Devil's island, French Guiana, to spend the remainder of their lives. (International)

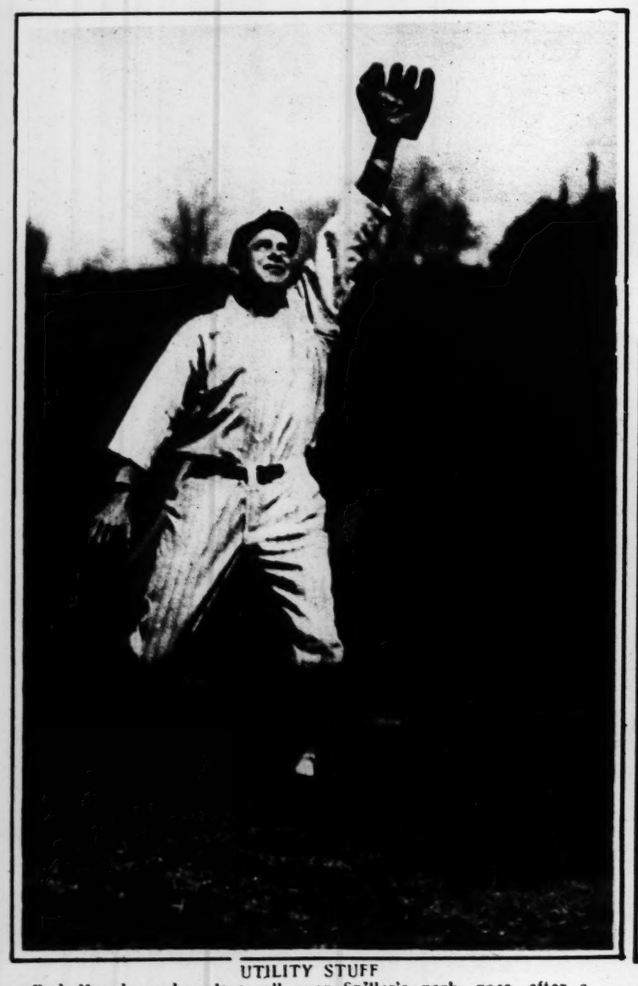

Fighting for Another Pennant

Here are some of the Crackers, photographed by Kenneth Rogers, of The Constitution staff, at the opening of the Southern league season.

AFTER THE LEAD FOR HITTERS AGAIN
Uncle Wilbur Good, veteran outfielder, appears headed for another great year.

UTILITY STUFF
Rod Murphy, who plays all over Spiller's park, goes after a high one.

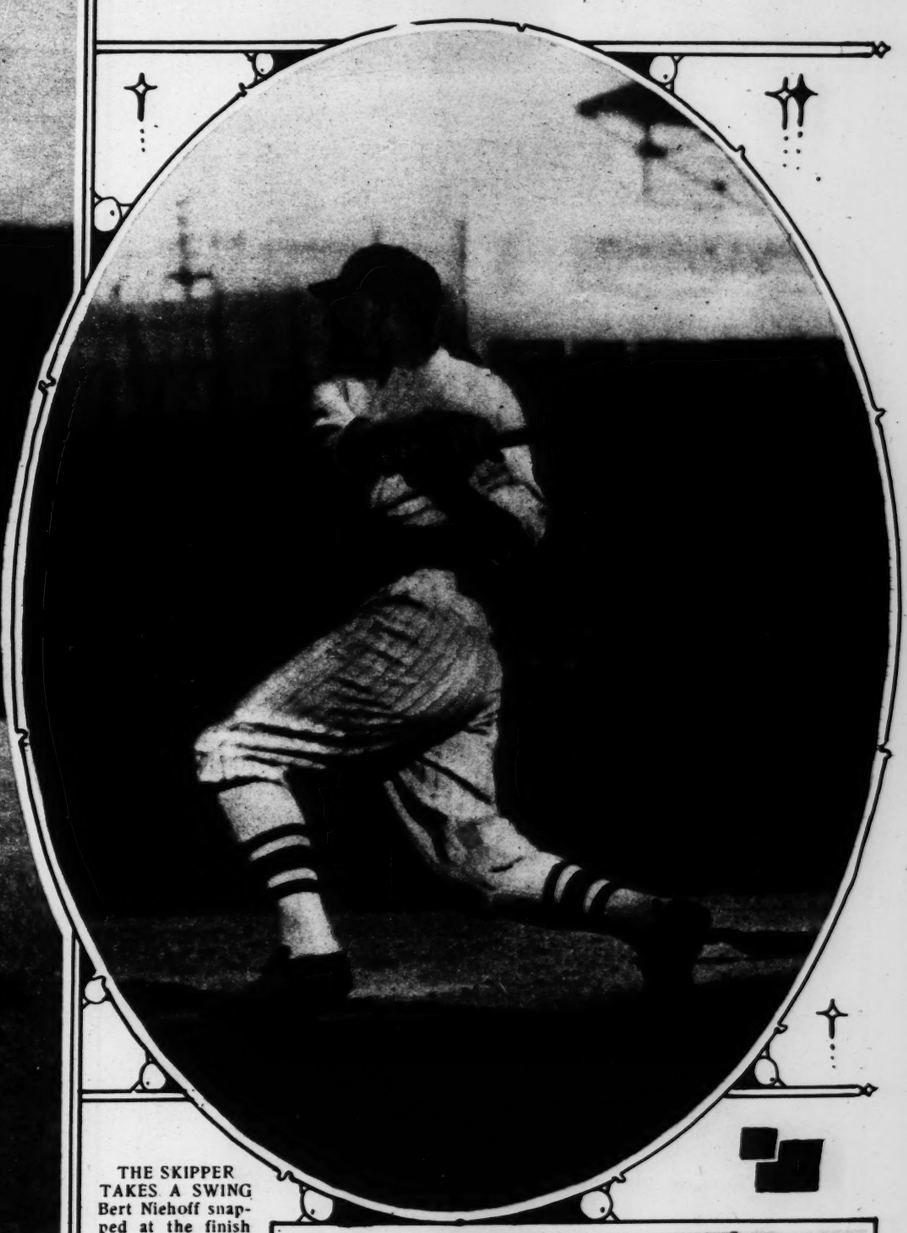

DUROCHER SOMETHING OF A BIRD MAN
The new Cracker shortstop snapped in the air as he dived toward a base to tag a runner. Durocher is one of the fastest shortstops in baseball.

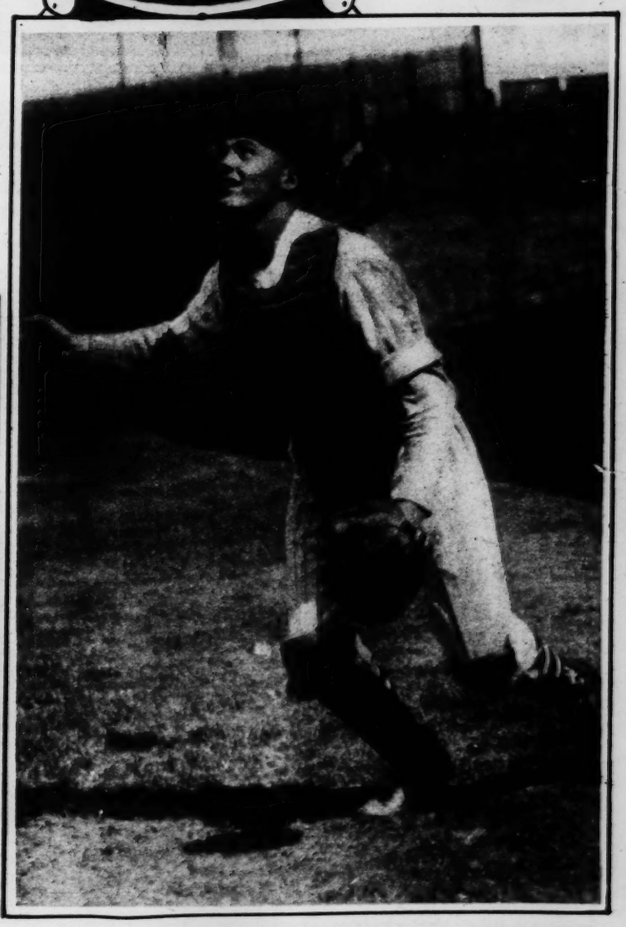

THE FIRST SWING OF THE SEASON
Sumpter Clarke, outfielder, leaning on one.

YOU MIGHT CALL THIS THE KICK-OFF.
The Crackers as they took the field to start the season. From left to right, they are: Marquis, pitcher; Clarke, outfielder; Jacobs, pitcher; Love, pitcher; Durocher, shortstop; Niehoff, infielder; McLaughlin, pitcher, and Brock, catcher.

THE SKIPPER TAKES A SWING
Bert Niehoff snapped at the finish of his swing at the ball.

ACTION BY ROY LUEBBE
The young catcher going into stride in a dash after a foul ball.

A DRUID HILLS FOURSOME
S. L. Hurt is shown about to swing on the ball. The others are, left to right: Robin Adair, C. E. Freeman and H. P. D'Courcie.

STARTING THE QUARTET OFF
L. P. Hinman at the tee, J. L. Dickey behind him, W. F. Spalding and W. F. Glenn, photographed at the Druid Hills club.

SPRING SURELY IS HERE

The fact is self-evident in these photographs snapped at Atlanta's principal golf courses by Francis E. Price, Constitution staff photographer.

"NOW THIS HERE BALL—"

THE INDISPENSABLE PART OF GOLF
is the caddy. This happy one is known as Jack, or "Tadpole," at the Druid Hills club, where he carries lots of bags and chases lots of flying balls.

WATTS GUNN AND KEITH CONWAY
photographed on the fairway at the East Lake club. Gunn is tuning up for his trip to England next month as a member of the Walker cup team.

GETTING READY TO SINK ONE.
Dr. Claud N. Hughes, left; George A. Bland, center, and W. F. Gillooley at Druid Hills.

A LITTLE SAND TO START
J. T. Jennings getting tee out of the sand-box at the East Lake club.

DOWN THE ALLEY
Harry Stevens leans on one at the Druid Hills club.

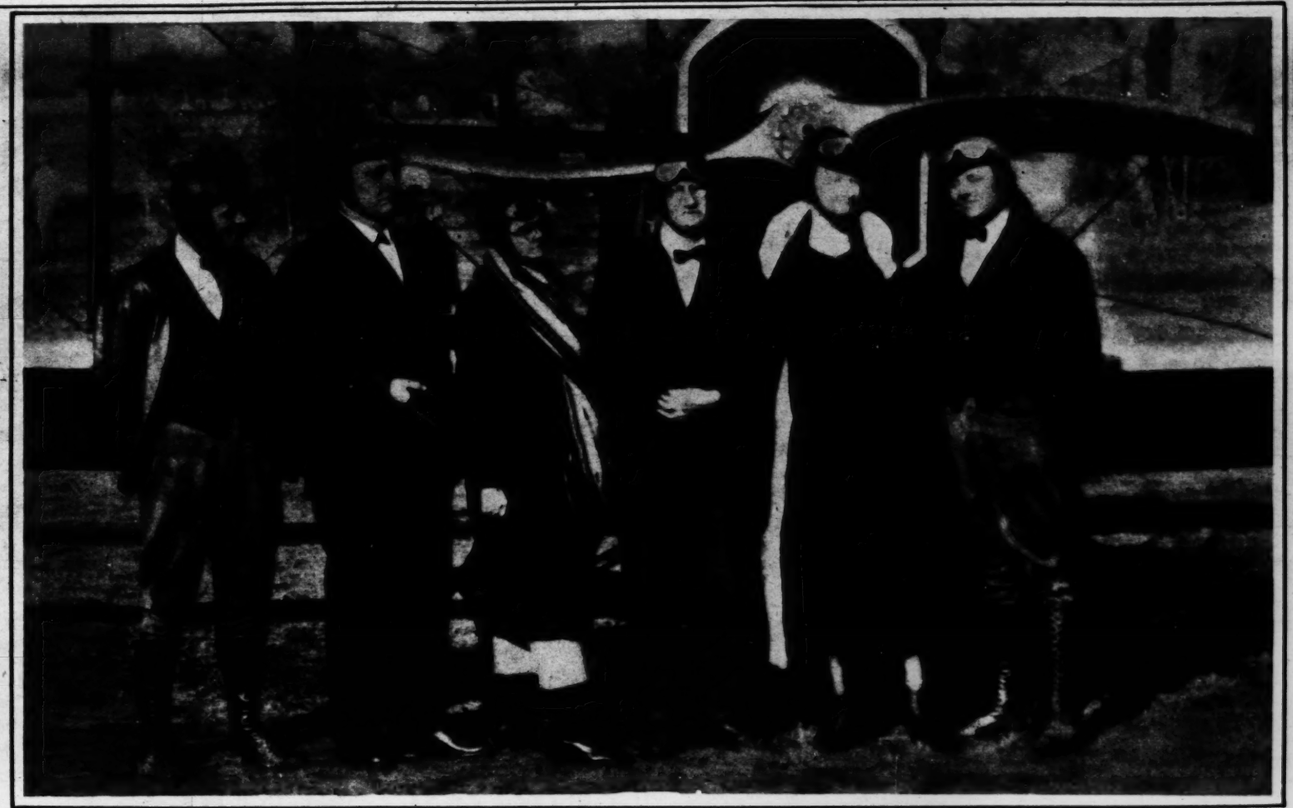

"SOME DRIVE"

SOON TO TAKE A RIDE
James J. Hodnett teeing up at Druid Hills while J. W. Alexander, of Dallas, Texas, looks on.

HE SURE IS STRONG MAN.

GEORGIANS WED IN THE AIR.
J. R. McCord, 81 years old, bridegroom, and Mrs. W. R. Arlington, standing under the propeller of the airplane in which they were married recently at Albany, Ga. McCord formerly was blind, but had his sight restored by an operation. On his first sight of an airplane he decided to be married aloft. (International)

ROYAL FUNERAL.
Left to right are Prince Harold, Crown Prince Gustav, of Sweden, King Haakon, of Norway, and Prince Arthur, of Connaught, representing the king of England, photographed at the funeral of the late queen of Denmark. (International)

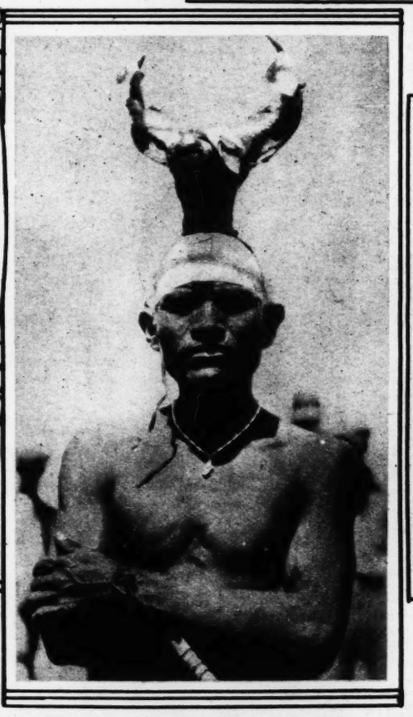

CORONATION OF SIR HARI SINGH.
This photograph shows the royal elephants and royal trappings used at Bombay when Sir Hari Singh was crowned maharajah of Kashimir. The howdah or seat is entirely of gold. (International)

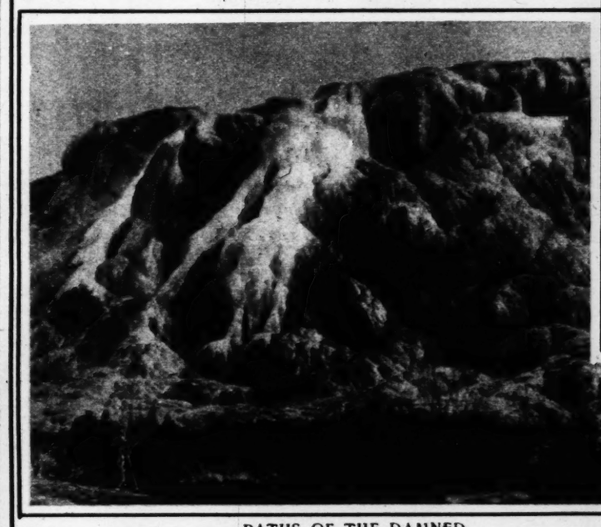

SIR THOMAS HAS WON A FEW
Sir Thomas Lipton, the noted British speed boat enthusiast, photographed at London with the trophies he has won in various competitions. They were accumulated over a period of 30 years. (International)

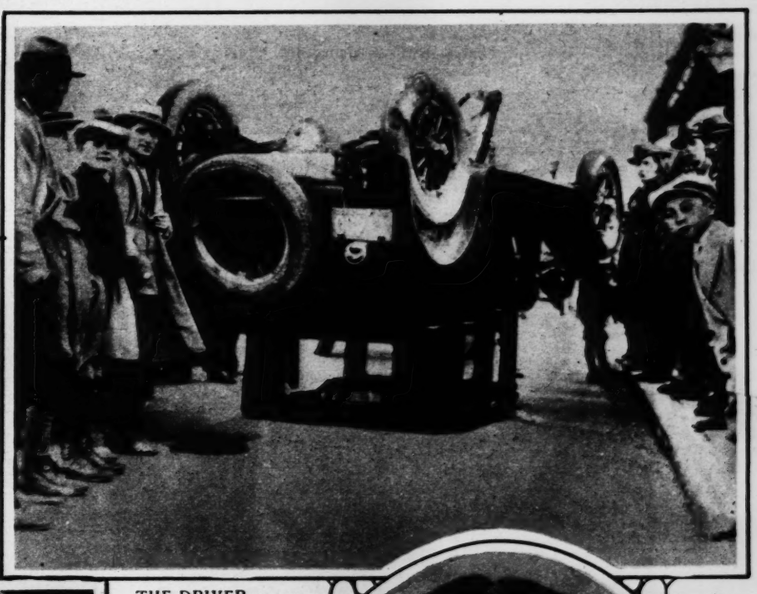

ROYAL RUMANIAN BEAUTY.
The Princess Helena, of Rumania, recently celebrated her 17th birthday. This photograph was made on that occasion. (International)

PATHS OF THE DAMNED.
This mysterious formation in Algeria bears that name. Boiling water constantly bubbles forth and turns to stone immediately upon striking the air. Superstition says that an Arab once married his sister, but, repenting, cast his body into the spring. Allah caused his body to disintegrate and caused the spring to turn to stone as a warning to others. (International)

THE DRIVER ESCAPED when this automobile turned over in a collision with another machine in Boston. (International)

FOLLOWING IN FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS.
Mrs. Reginald Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, who has announced as democratic candidate for the state legislature, if elected she will be the first woman to hold a seat in the Florida legislature. (International)

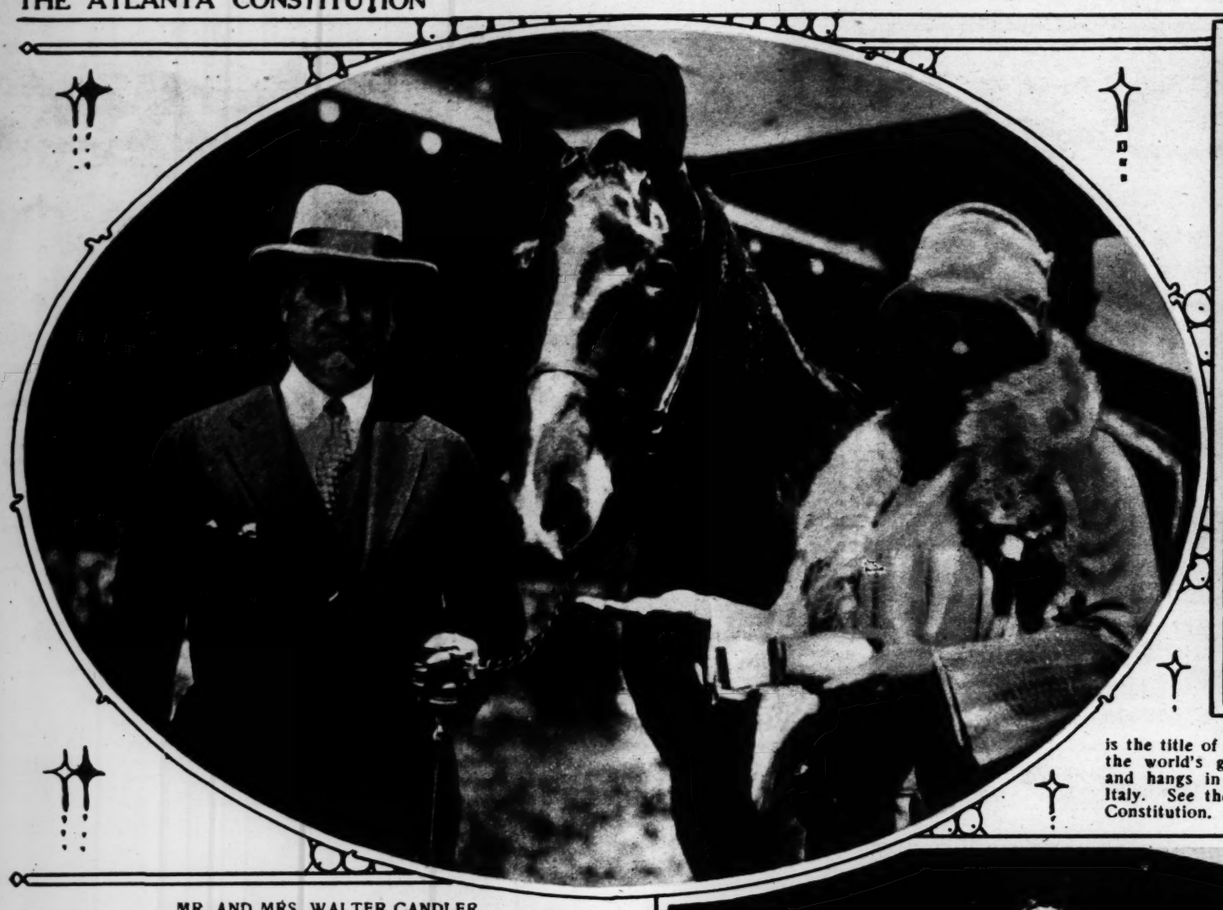

YAQUI HEADDRESS, designed and made by the gentleman shown wearing it. It is a ceremonial hat, part of Easter clothing worn at an annual festival at Santa Anita, Ariz.

WHILE THE THIRST MOURNED
$150,000 worth of wine, beer and whisky was destroyed in New York. (International)

WHAT ABOUT PROHIBITION?
Here is the senate judiciary committee at its hearings in Washington on the prohibition question. Left to right, seated, are Senator Harrold, of Oklahoma; Reed, of Missouri; Means, of Colorado, chairman; Walsh, of Montana, and Goff, of Colorado. Standing are Congressman Hill, of Maryland; Edge, of New Jersey; Bruce, of Maryland, and Edwards, of New Jersey. (International)

MR. AND MRS. WALTER CANDLER, of Atlanta, photographed at Lullwater farm, with Tarzan Grattan, one of the many thoroughbreds owned by Mr. Candler. (International)

"THE ANNUNCIATION"
is the title of this painting, another of the 52 selected as the world's greatest. It was painted by Fra Angelico and hangs in the Museum of San Marco, in Florence, Italy. See the story in the magazine section of today's Constitution.

SIGNING UP THE MIGHTY BABE
Miss Frances Porter, of The Constitution staff, is shown here receiving an autographed baseball from Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees during their recent visit (J. T. Holloway)

WALTER CANDLER AND FAMOUS MARE
One of the stars the local horseman will exhibit this year is Polly Peachtree. (International)

MARY AND DOUG SAIL FOR WORLD CRUISE
The famous screen stars photographed with their adopted daughter, Mary Pickford Rupp, photographed as they sailed on the S. S. Biancamano. (International)

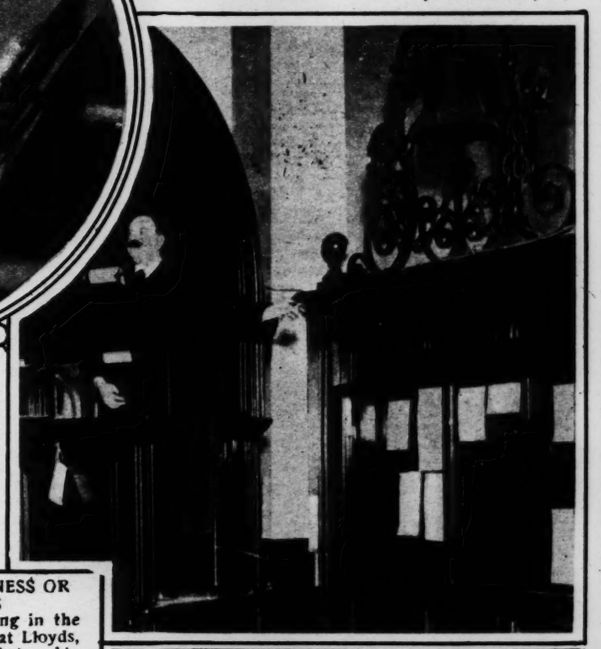

LUCKY MUSSOLINI
An assassin's bullet pierced the Italian premier's nose during an appearance in Rome. He was not injured seriously. (International)

SOUND YOUR A
Max Berman, a New York tailor, aspired to become a concert singer and succeeded so well that he made his debut recently in Carnegie hall. He is hailed as a real find. (International)

WOMAN SPEED DEMON
Mlle. Jean LaCoste, a French woman, wants to travel faster by automobile than anyone, man or woman, ever before traveled. She will make her effort on the beach at Ormond-Daytona, Fla. (Kadel & Herbert)

BELL TOLLS SADNESS OR GLADNESS
One tap on this gong in the underwriters' room at Lloyds, of England, means that a ship has been lost at sea with a loss of thousands of pounds to Lloyds. Two taps means that a ship reported lost has returned to port. (International)

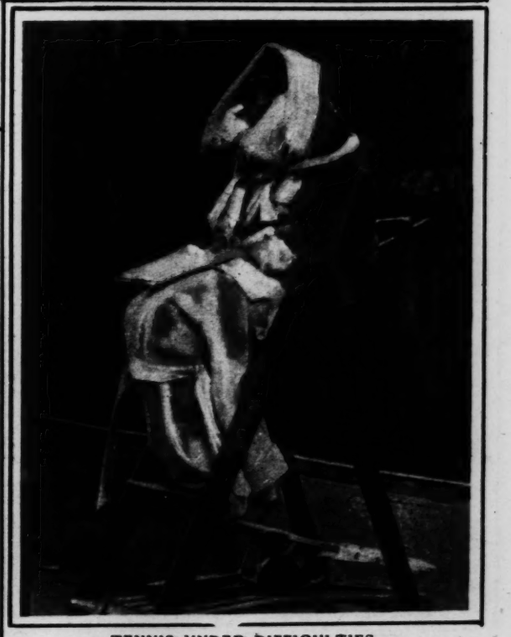

PROTECTION FOR HIS SON
Was provided by John S. Stevenson, borough recorder of Vineland, N. J., who was gassed and killed in the world war, when he left letters to be delivered each birthday to his son, Dick. The last letter will be opened when Dick is 21 and one on his wedding day. They warn against the temptations of youth. (International)

TOM, DICK AND HARRY SAY GOOD-BYE
Left to right are Harry Byrd, governor of Virginia; his brother, Lieut-Commander R. E. Byrd, and Thomas Byrd, another brother. (International)

HONOR TO FAMOUS MAN
Flowers were placed on the tomb of Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, on the 17th anniversary of that accomplishment. (International)

TENNIS UNDER DIFFICULTIES
Despite the fact that the spring has been bitter cold in England the tennis season has been opened according to schedule. Here is a woman umpire at a game amply protected against the cold. (Kadel & Herbert)

BEAUMONT STRUCK BY TWISTER
This is one view of the debris left after a tornado had struck Beaumont, Texas, killing four persons and injuring many others. (International)

AN OLD FOLKS' REUNION
When the Cincinnati Reds appeared here recently against the Crackers, Jack Hendricks, manager of the team, was welcomed by several friends of years' standing. At the left, for instance, is John Brock, who was a catcher for Hendricks when the latter managed the St. Louis Cardinals. Hendricks stands in the center. H. C. Hamilton and Hendricks have dusted about the country since 1910 in much the same territory. They met in Denver, Colo., while Hendricks managed that team, met again in Indianapolis, again in St. Louis and again in New York. Paul Fittery is above at the left. (Kenneth Rogers)

KAISER WANTS NEW HOME
This magnificent palace at Locarno, Switzerland, originally was built for the late Czar Alexander, of Russia, and now is the property of Louis Lombard, an American. The former kaiser is reported to be seeking to buy it. (International)

FRENCH ACE WILL TRY ATLANTIC FLIGHT
Rene Fonck, one of the most famous of French war flyers, will try for the Raymond Orteig prize of $25,000 for the first non-stop flight between New York and Paris. (International)

SHE'S A HE
This "beautiful leading lady" is none other than Tom McCutcheon, who will appear in "The Back Slapper," to be given by the Tech Marionettes at the Atlanta Women's club in May.

WHAT'S CHARLIE GRIEVING ABOUT?
Chaplin and Merina Kennedy, his new leading lady, are shown here in a scene from "The Circus," the comedian's newest comedy. (International)

LOOK OUT FOR GOLF FOOT
Dr. Charles Pabst, of New York, says there is a definite disease which afflicts young men and women who are constant frequenters of athletic clubs where they frequent shower baths. The disease is caused by a fungus. (International)

MODERN-DAY CLIFF DWELLERS are the people who live in this rather top-heavy looking apartment house in New York city. (International)

RECOGNIZE THE WOMEN ON LEFT AND RIGHT?

PRINCE AGAIN UNDER ARREST

—Ruskin.

Within the soul of every person is that precious something which makes for harmony.

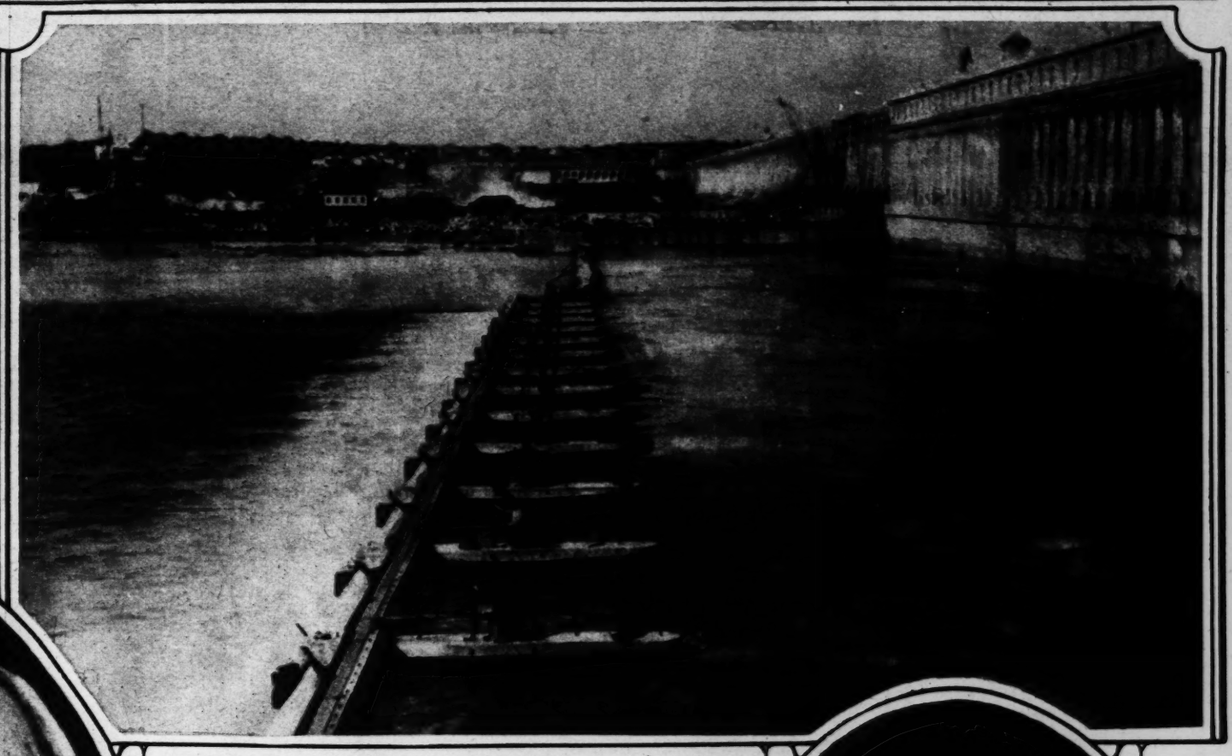

It is bigger and finer than the mere making of song; for, if cultivated, it finds outward expression by radiating ennobling influences that sweeten and enrich the life of the individual and the lives of all who come in contact with him.

Get Thin
In this Pleasant Way

Millions know an easy, pleasant way to get rid of excess fat. For 18 years it has held its place as leader in its field. There is nothing else known that compares.

Delighted users have told others about it until the use has spread the world over. Now people are using over 100,000 boxes monthly.

You can see the results in every circle. Most people are now slender. Excess fat is not one-tenth so common as it was.

This effective method is Marmola Prescription Tablets. It combats the cause of excess fat, which usually lies in a gland. Simply take four a day until you reach normal weight. No special exercise or diet is required.

The coupon will bring you samples. Also our books stating how and why Marmola acts. Also our guarantee. Investigate this method which has done so much. Clip coupon now.

Marmola is sold by all druggists at $1.00 per box, or mailed direct in plain wrappers by Marmola Co. Address in coupon.

WELCOME TO AUSTRALIA - HOW IS YOUR PAPA AND MAMA ? DID YOU HAVE A PLEASANT VOYAGE IN THE DIRIGIBLE?

OH, UNCLE, I'M SO GLAD TO SEE YOU -

- AND WHEN WE WERE CROSSING THE OCEAN THE CAPTAIN LET ME STEER THE SHIP ALL BY MYSELF - AND THE COOK MADE ME THE NICEST THINGS TO EAT - I NEVER HAD SUCH A WONDERFUL TIME IN MY LIFE -

CHING CHOW AND SAM SALT ARE BOTH WELL AND HAPPY - THEY ARE EAGER TO SEE YOU AGAIN -

OH, BOY! I'LL BE GLAD TO SEE THEM - WHEN I WAS AT HOME I USED TO DREAM I WAS BACK ON THAT DESERT ISLAND WITH CHING CHOW

SAIL HO - HERE HE COMES OR YOU CAN SINK ME FOR A SLAB SIDED LAND LUBBER -

I SHALL OFFER INCENSE TO THE ALL KNOWING ONES FOR THIS AUSPICIOUS EVENT -

I FEEL GLAD ALL OVER -

- AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT -

THIS COMMON PLACE PERSON REJOICES OVER THE FORTUNATE ARRIVAL OF THE MOST AMIABLE ONE -

THIS IS A PRESENT FOR YOU FROM MY PAPA -

MAY THE LORDS OF THE UPPER AIR APPOINT HIS ANCESTORS TO MOST PLEASANT TASKS -

THE SAME GENEROUS OLD ANDY -

THAT IS A MOST BEAUTIFUL GIFT -

GEE WHIZ - IT'S A DANDY LOOKING WATCH -

THIS INSIGNIFICANT ONE BOWS TO THE DUST BEFORE THE BENEVOLENCE OF THE GENEROUS PRESENT OF A WORTHY SON -

WEAK WORDS ARE INADEQUATE TO EXPRESS THIS INFERIOR PERSON'S GRATITUDE FOR THIS NEVER TO BE DISREGARDED GIFT -

I KNOW YOU WILL ALWAYS TREASURE IT -

CHESTER SEEMS TO LIKE AUSTRALIA -

I LOVE MY UNCLE BIM -

AYE, AYE, SIR

IT IS WRITTEN HE WHO FINDS FRIENDS IN EVERY PLACE FINDS EVERY PLACE DELICIOUS -

DINNER SHALL SOON BE READY - WON'T YOU JOIN US ?

OH, BOY! AND AM I HUNGRY -

THIS PERSON OF STUNTED INTELLIGENCE? IT IS WRITTEN THAT WHEN KINSMEN MEET THE COMPANY OF OTHERS IS OF LESSER IMPORTANCE -

I INSIST YOU DINE WITH US TO-MORROW -

I HEAR AND OBEY - YOUR BENEVOLENT COMMAND MAKES TO-MORROW A DAY TO BE MARKED WITH A PRICELESS PEARL -

DINNER IS SERVED -

MY UNWORTHY HEART SINGS THE SEVEN SONGS OF JOY - TO MEET AN OLD FRIEND IS LIKE THE DELIGHT OF RAIN AFTER A LONG DROUGHT -

MAN AND BOY - I'VE SAILED THE SEVEN SEAS FOR FORTY YEARS AND NEVER SAW HIS EQUAL - AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT -

YOU KNOW, SANDY, I GET A WHOPPER OF A KICK OUTA HISTORY- NOW HERE'S A FELLOW CALLED PAUL REVERE WHO RODE A HORSE- IT WAS ON TH' 18TH OF APRIL, SAME AS TO-DAY, ONLY WAY BACK IN 1775, THAT HE PULLED OFF HIS BIG ACT THAT GOT HIM FEATURED IN ALL THE HISTORY BOOKS-

THERE WAS NOBODY SHOOTIN' AT HIM OR NOTHIN'— HE JUST WENT AND WARNED A LOTTA FARMERS THAT TH' RED COATS WERE FOLLOWIN' HIM- AND THEN THESE FARMERS TURNED OUT AND CHASED TH' RED COATS ALL THE WAY HOME AGAIN-

ALL HE DID WAS WARN SOME PEOPLE AND THAT MADE HIM A HERO- THAT SURE WAS AN EASY WAY TO GET FAMOUS, SEEMS TO ME-

NEVER CAN TELL, THOUGH- MAYBE THERE WAS MORE 'N EVER GOT NOISED AROUND- LOTS O' THINGS HAPPEN THAT NEVER GET PRINTED-

HM-M- LOOKIE, SANDY- THERE'S A SHOW I'D LIKE TO SEE-

TONIGHT

HUH? (SNIFF- SNIFF) SMOKE!!! SOMETHING'S BURNIN'-

HEY, SANDY- THIS PLACE MUST BE ON FIRE- YOU SIT HERE WHILE I RUN IN AND WARN EVERYBODY-

FIRE! FIRE!

LUNA

HEY! OUCH-

OH!

HOW TH' DICKENS WAS I TO KNOW IT WAS ONLY AN OLD CIGAR MAKIN' ALL THAT SMOKE? WELL, WARNIN' FOLKS MAY HAVE BEEN GREAT IN 1775, BUT THAT WAS 151 YEARS AGO-

THAT'S TH' WAY IT GOES, SANDY- TWO PEOPLE DO TH' SAME SORTA THING- ONE OF 'EM GETS TO BE A HERO AN' THE OTHER GETS TO GO TO THE HOSPITAL-

I SAID THE STORE IS CLOSED NOW-

WELL, I WANT IN.

WHAT FOR?

I LEFT SOMETHING OF MINE IN YOUR DRUG STORE-

OH, WELL, THAT'S DIFFERENT- COME IN-

I LEFT IT UNDER YOUR ICE CREAM TABLE-

DID YOU FIND IT?

YEP, I'VE GOT IT—
